AWFUL LOSS OF LIFE

Desolation Follows the Flood in the Gila Valley.

250 HOUSES IN RUINS AT YUMA.

The Water Covers the Country in One Grand Lake for Fifty Miles Across.

People Driven to the Tree Tops—Many Become Exhausted from Cold and Hunger and Drop Into the Water—The Loss of Life Will be Appalling—Helping the Sufferers—$2,000,000 Lost.

YUMA, Ariz., March 2.—Over 250 houses are in ruins in this city and 1,400 people are homeless. It is feared that hundreds of lives have been lost in the Gila Valley. No reliable reports can be obtained from that locality, as the roads are impassable and all the wires are down.

Above Yuma the river is seven miles wide, and below the town the water covers the country in one grand lake over 50 miles across.

Over 1,000 persons are being fed daily at the Southern Pacific Hotel, and the town has sufficient provisions for eight days more. The blockade of west-bound trains, it is expected, will be raised in about four days, but it will be at least two weeks before they can go east.

People Driven to the Tree-tops.

Reports from Jakune, 15 miles above here, are to the effect that the flood drove the people into the tree-tops. Many became weak from cold and hunger before the flood abated, and dropped into the water and were drowned. It is estimated that anywhere between 30 and 100 lives were lost in the valley. Desolation reigns supreme all along the valley.

Helping the Sufferers.

Every house on the hills has been thrown open to receive the homeless and hundreds are quartered in tents in the old government buildings. The merchants have opened their goods on the streets in order to help the sufferers.

Losses About $2,000,000.

The losses in this county will foot up nearly $2,000,000, and the damage suffered by the railroad company will amount to more than $250,000. The common loss has brought all classes of citizens together, and all have worked with a will, first in trying to save the town by constructing a rude levee, and, when that effort proved futile, saving as much as possible from the ruins. The old town will probably not be rebuilt, as both merchants and residents will erect their stores and houses on the hills in order to be out of reach of any further damage.

Terrible Loss of Life.

A boat which arrived yesterday from Mohawk, 60 miles up the Gila River, brings reports of terrible loss of life, all the country being under water. The poor Mexicans are the greatest sufferers, their entire possessions being swept away, and having no reserves to fall back on. There is yet a vast stretch of territory to be heard from, and every one fears that when full returns are in the loss of life will be of appalling magnitude. Reports from the Valley of the Colorado below this place, state that hundreds of the Cocopah Indians have been drowned.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

Almost the Entire Business Portion of a New York Village Destroyed.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., March 2.—Fire at Hermon, St. Lawrence County, at midnight, burned 18 blocks in the town, including the Baptist Church and many residences, and causing a loss estimated at $75,000 on which there was about $40,000 insurance.

A high wind prevailed at the time of the fire and all of the business portion of the town, excepting six stores and one hotel, was destroyed.

The origin of the fire is believed to have been incendiary, suspicion pointing strongly to one man whose property has not been paying and who has had several suspicious fires in the course of his business career.

Several families lost all they had, the flames spreading so rapidly that little could be saved.

He Failed to Fast Thirty Days.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., March 2.—Gump, the faster, who wagered $1,000 with Col. Geary that he could fast thirty days, gave up at the end of the twenty-fifth day. He was fast going into a decline and his physicians advised him to quit. The money was to be used in paying of a $1,000 mortgage on his parents' home.

Big Trotting Entry.

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 2.—The $25,000 guaranteed stake of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Association, which closes to-day, has already received 300 entries, which makes the largest entry list ever known in a trotting stake. It will be worth more to the winner than any trotting stake ever opened.

THEY APPEAL TO THE LAW.

Warrants Sworn Out Against Labor Leaders in the Connellsville Region.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 2.—The Connellsville coke region strikers again raided the works of W. F. Rainey at Paull and Fort Hill. Another detachment of Pinkerton men arrived to-day in the region under the command of Captain Linden, of Mollie Maguire fame.

W. J. Rainey has filed a bill in the United States Court against the following principal officers of the Miners' Union: John Meehay, Joan McBride, Peter Wise, C. M. Parker, Mike Desinat, Frank Kerfoot, Frank De Raven and J. D. Rea. Mr. Rainey states that he employs 1,000 men who are now idle on account of the actions of the strikers; that on Feb. 25 a mob attacked his men at work, firing shots, etc., compelling them to cease work; that Feb. 15 one of his mines was set on fire by incendiaries, causing great losses; that defendants were participants in the violent and unlawful acts complained of. He asks for an injunction restraining the strikers from assembling near his works and from making threats and menaces to compel his men to quit work.

R. L. Martin of the Fair Chance works, swore out a warrant at Uniontown for the arrest of Peter Wise. Wise went to Fair Chance and tried to get the men who had resumed to come out, and made, it is said, an incendiary speech, in which he stated that if Superintendent Martin didn't come to time by Tuesday they would give him a dose of the same medicine they gave Rainey.

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING.

Several Churches and Houses Destroyed or Damaged.

NEW BEDORD, Mass., March 2.—A destructive winter thunderstorm accompanied by lightning visited this city and vicinity about 9 p. m. In the city proper not much damage was done. In South Dartmouth the Congregational Church was struck by a bolt and damaged to the extent of $300. The house of Joseph Head, in the same place, was also struck and destroyed by fire.

At Mischaun Point, a barn owned by Robert Wilson was struck by a bolt and burned to the ground.

At Horseneck, in Westport, the barns of Captain John Howland and Captain Warren Gifford were struck and burned causing a loss of nearly $3,000.

At Mattapoisset the lightning struck the Congregational Church and set the structure on fire. One side of the place was completely destroyed before the fire could be extinguished. The loss is about $1,000. The residence of William Faunce was burned and a barn near Pine Island was also destroyed.

INDIANS UNEASY.

Sioux Emissaries Are Now in the Indian Territory and Trouble is Feared.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., March 2.—It is learned from trustworthy sources that a small party of Sioux Indians from the Northwest reservations are now in the Osage reservation, south of here. They have been traveling about through Indian territory, visiting different reservations, and have held long secret conferences with members of each tribe. Just what their mission is, it is impossible to learn. Trouble is feared from their visit.

It is a significant fact that several of the tribes who were in favor of allotment a few weeks ago are now opposed to it, and that the Kaws have a new prophet who says that in five years the whites will leave the land. The Wichitas, Comanches and Kechis have also resumed their ghost dances.

Railroad Terminal Facilities at the Fair.

CHICAGO, March 2.—Vice President Thomas of the Western Indiana Railroad Company, E. T. Jeffery, formerly of the Illinois Central and several other prominent railroad men are organizing a company to build the terminal facilities at Jackson Park for the World's Fair. The project is being supported chiefly by the tenant companies of the Western Indiana and is being kept as much of a secret as possible.

Arrested for Killing Six Men.

APPIOO, Wis., March 2.—Thos. Baker, accused of having killed six men, five whites and one colored, in Kentucky, was arrested here yesterday as the instance of Kentucky officers and lodged in jail. Baker and another Kentuckian were in the city yesterday and indulged in a spree. It took the combined strength of three officers to make the arrest.

His Ashes Thrown to the Winds.

NEW YORK, March 2.—The ashes of Henry Meyer, a hotel keeper of Richmond, S. I., who died Feb. 14, were taken to the top of the Statue of Liberty yesterday by a committee of a society to which he belonged, and thrown to the winds, in accordance with instructions he had left.

Pardon is Free.

NEW YORK, March 2.—Charles F. Pardon, who was wanted in Connecticut for burglary, and whom Governor Hill refused to hand over to the Nutmeg State authorities, has been set at liberty. Pardon declares that he will sue the city of Waterbury for having caused his imprisonment.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Only Two Days Left for the Fifty-First Congress.

20,000 BILLS WERE INTRODUCED

The Time Until Adjournment to be Mainly Devoted to Conference Reports.

Senator Manderson the Caucus Nominee for President Pro Tempore—An Objection Raised to a Negro Postmaster—Mr. Coon's Nomination Expected for Assistant Treasurer.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—There is practically but two working days remaining for the 51st Congress to complete its labors and adjourn, as it must at noon on Wednesday next. The time of both the Senate and the House during these two days will be mainly devoted to the consideration of conference reports on appropriation bills, and several other important measures which are now in conference.

In the House the chairmen of the special committees to investigate the work of the Civil Service Commission, the alleged misconduct in office of Commissioner of Pensions Raum, and the silver pool investigation have all made reports, and will endeavor to have the House, before the final adjournment, take action on them. The chances, however, for action on these matters before the close, in view of the limited time and the urgency of the appropriation bills now in conference, are very slim.

WORK DONE BY CONGRESS.

Over 14,000 Bills Presented in the House and 5,000 in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The number of bills and joint resolutions in the Congress now drawing to a close is up to this time 14,191, and by the hour of adjournment on Wednesday will be, in round numbers, 20,000, as members are still introducing measures in great numbers, although there is not the slightest chance of the passage of any now offered.

This is nearly 20 per cent. in excess of the number introduced in any preceding Congress. These bills have all been referred to their appropriate committees, and about 7,000 reports have been made from these committees upon bills. Of the 19,500 bills and joint resolutions introduced, over 14,000 have been presented in the House and over 5,000 in the Senate.

Of the 14,000 introduced in the House over 4,000 have been reported upon by committees, while 2,000 were passed by the House and a greater number by the Senate.

Among the most important measures which have been made laws are the bill regulating immigration, the Direct Tax Refunding bill, the bill authorizing the construction of bridges over streams under the direction of the Secretary of War, the Anti-Lottery bill, the bill for the relief of the Supreme Court by establishing Courts of Appeal and the appointment of additional Circuit Judges, the Tariff act and its accompanying reciprocity features, the Pension bill of last session, the bill increasing the purchases of silver and the issuance of certificates therefor, the Customs Administrations bill, the measure relating to the Hawaiian treaty, and the bill to carry out a large number of important treaty obligations with Indians.

They Object to the Negro Postmaster.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—A dispatch from Vicksburg says a large and enthusiastic meeting of citizens was held at the court house to protest against the appointment of James Hill, colored, as postmaster. Speeches were made by many prominent men. A series of resolutions denouncing the appointment was adopted and will be forwarded to Mississippi Senators and Representatives. They charge that Hill is not a citizen of this city or district, and has been repudiated by its voters. Republicans as well as Democrats took part in the meeting, which was distinguished rather for intensity than bitterness of feeling. It is a fact that any negro, resident or not, would be objectionable to the people.

The President's Trip.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The President and Mrs. Harrison have not yet settled all the details of their southern and western journey, or in fact whether they will go; but in a few days, if they decide to go, their plans will be in such shape that something definite about the trip may be announced. This much, however, is known about the proposed trip. The President will start from Washington early in May, and the itinerary of the journey will be planned so as to permit the President to make a number of speeches while en route—most of them in the Southern States.

Manderson for President Pro Tempore.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The Republican Senators held a caucus at the Capitol last night for the purpose of determining upon a candidate to succeed Mr. Ingalls as President pro tempore of the Senate. There was a good attendance, and several ballots taken, with Senators Manderson, Hoar and Frye as candidates, before a final decision was reached. At the third ballot Mr. Manderson received a majority of the votes cast, and his nomination was made unanimous, and the caucus adjourned.

Scandal in State Prison.

BOSTON, March 2.—Gov. Russell has unearthed a big scandal in connection with the management of the Massachusetts State prison, which will result in the decapitation of eight or ten guards and a retention of a greater number of prisoners. For two months past the convicts have been cutting their way out of the Charlestown bastile with saws and files purchased from the guards.

SENATOR HEARST DEAD.

The California Millionaire Passes Away After a Long Illness.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Senator George Hearst, of California, died at his residence in this city late Saturday night of a complication of diseases, Bright's disease and heart trouble being the most aggravated. He was unconscious at the time of his death, and had been in a semi-comatose condition for days. His family were present, when the end, which had been so long expected, came. Senator Hearst had been ill for six months, and had been confined to his room for the past two months.

GEORGE HEARST.

The arrangements for the funeral are not yet completed in detail. Private services will be held here at the home of the late Senator on Thursday, and on Friday his remains, accompanied by Mrs. Hearst, his son W. R. Hearst, Dr. Charles S. Ward, of New York, J. S. Follansby and John Wedderburn and the Congressional committees, will be taken to San Francisco, where a public funeral will take place.

George Hearst was born in Franklin County, Mo., Sept. 3, 1820. He was given a public school education, and passed his early manhood on his father's farm. In 1850 he went to California, where he worked in the mines and located and purchased mining property until his Pacific Coast mines and mills gave employment to 2,000 men, and his quartz mills crushed 1,000 tons of ore daily.

In 1865 he was elected to the California Legislature, and became a prominent figure in California politics. In 1885 the Democrats, who were in the minority, gave him their unanimous vote for United States Senator, and on March 23, 1886, he was appointed United States Senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John F. Miller. He was elected to the Senate to succeed Abram H. Williams in 1887.

Secret Ballot Trial.

RUTLAND, Vt., March 2.—The Secret Ballot law will have its first general trial in this State at the town elections tomorrow in Burlington, Rutland, St. Albans, Bellows Falls, Barre, St. Johnsbury and Bennington. The law had its first trial at the municipal elections at St. Johnsbury, and is the main proved satisfactory.

Two Killed—Seven May Die.

WHITWELL, Tenn., March 2.—The cable of the incline at the coal mines here broke, the car filled with miners dashed down the mountain. Two men were killed instantly and 11 seriously hurt. Seven of them will die.

P. T. Barnum's Illness.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., March 2.—A rumor is in circulation in this city that P. T. Barnum has suffered a relapse and is in a critical condition.

Claims She Is Sane.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 2.—In the Supreme Court a hearing was given on the petition for a writ of habeas corpus to secure the release of Mrs. Horace F. Carpenter, wife of a prominent gold refiner. Mrs. Carpenter has been eight years in an insane asylum, and she claims she is sane. Testimony was presented to prove her sanity, and Mr. Carpenter and the Butler Hospital authorities testified that she was subject to chronic delusions. Some property is involved. The case was continued until next Saturday.

Worcester Will Have a Club.

WORCESTER, Mass., March 2.—At a meeting of the gentlemen interested in having Worcester represented in the baseball world $2,000 of the necessary $3,000 with which to start the club was subscribed. Charles H. Greenleaf was chosen to represent the city at the meeting of the International League in Buffalo to-morrow. It is believed that F. J. Leonard will be manager of the club.

Fire Again Raging in the Mine.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., March 2.—Fire is again raging in the Moyer mine. Big volumes of smoke are issuing from the openings. The officials still claim that the fire was due to incendiarism and accuse the strikers. The bodies of the three men who are supposed to have been in the shaft at the time the fire broke out have not yet been recovered.

A Fund for Mrs. Windom.

NEW YORK, March 2.—A fund is being raised for the benefit of the late Secretary Windom's family. It was intended by the subscribers that the matter should be known only to themselves until they could raise the sum of $50,000. Already over $30,000 has been pledged.

Cornell's Crews on Strike.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 2.—The men training for the Cornell crews and Courtney, the coach, have refused to train further until some obnoxious regulations made by the gymnasium directors are amended.

Methodist Church Destroyed.

WELLFLEET, Mass., March 2.—During a heavy storm here the Methodist Church was struck by lightning and totally destroyed. Loss, $8,000; partly insured.

Cut to Pieces by the Cars.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 2.—John Hughes, aged 28, of this city was cut to pieces on the Central Hudson Railroad during the morning. In stepping from one track to another he was run down, his body being mutilated in a horrible manner. Both legs were almost severed and the upper limbs were ground to a pulp. Hughes was unmarried.

EUROPE FRIGHTENED

Newspapers Speculating on the Probability of War.

CAPRIVI MAY FOLLOW BISMARCK.

The Young Emperor Seems to Favor a Warlike Policy.

Parnell to Issue an Address to Irish-Americans—Two of His Supporters to Visit the United States—Reward Offered for the Capture of a German Jack the Ripper—Hennessey Prefers London.

BERLIN, March 2.—The Kreutz Zeitung, speculating upon the probability of war with France, says after blaming Germans for being too patient and sluggish temperaments, and expressing doubts as to the friendship of Italy and England, says that Germany, having failed to secure the love of Europe, should endeavor to obtain respect.

The action of the government in regard to passports in Alsace-Lorraine is ill received by some Conservatives, as well as by the Freisinnige party.

Caprivi May Go.

LONDON, March 2.—Berlin reports are full of the probable retirement of Chancellor von Caprivi from the post of Prussian Premier, as the scapegoat, with Count Munster, of the Kaiser's failure to conciliate France.

Caprivi may retain his place as Chancellor, but his duties as Prussian Minister President will, it is stated, be transferred to Dr. Miquel, now Minister of Finance.

The Kaiser has always expressed unbounded confidence in Miquel's management of the finances. At a recent dinner he said: "I am a gold man, and for this rest I rely on Miquel."

It is probable that the new Premier may retain his office as Minister of Finance, for which there is a precedent in Prussian history.

Waldersee May Bring About War.

The Emperor's recent visit of intimate relations with Count Waldersee is also looked upon as significant. Count Waldersee has represented the extreme and aggressive military party. He has been charged even with desiring to bring about a war between Russia and France. This charge is unsustained by any evidence known to the public, but there has been no doubt of Waldersee's desire for all Germany to stand ready armed for any event that might occur. He was retired to the command of an army corps at the very time the Kaiser was meditating his friendly approach to the French people. Now he is recalled, or about to be recalled, to the imperial circle at a time when all hopes of conciliation are blasted.

Waldersee has been in Paris before, and at an eventful period. As German Charge d'Affaires in 1871, he displayed considerable diplomatic talent under very difficult circumstances.

Should he be appointed to Paris in place of Munster, the present situation will challenge all his ability. Other important diplomatic changes mentioned as probable are the appointment of General von Schweinitz, now in the German Embassy at St. Petersburg, and the appointment to that post of Baron Saurma-Jettsch, German Minister at The Hague, the latter being relieved as already reported, by the Count de Rantzay, son-in-law of Bismarck, who has been representing Prussia in Bavaria.

Financiers Fear War.

PARIS, March 2.—A feeling of depression prevails on the Bourse. Financiers are anxious about the attitude of Germany.

PARNELL'S COMING ADDRESS.

He Will Inform Irish-Americans About His Present Contest.

LONDON, March 2.—Mr. Parnell will issue, this week, an address to Irish-Americans, setting forth the principles on which he is conducting the present contest, and his grounds for demanding a specific declaration of the intention of the English Liberals in the matter of Irish home rule.

The address is primarily intended as a letter of introduction for Messrs. Redmond and Mahoney, who, it is understood, will soon proceed to the United States to ask for financial support for Parnell's campaign.

Mr. Parnell is said to be highly gratified with the reports which has nearly everywhere met the McCarthyites in Ireland, and he now declares that he proposes to scour the country with his deputies.

"Jack the Ripper" in Germany.

BERLIN March 2.—The State Attorney in Kustrine has offered a reward for the capture of the German "Jack the Ripper," who, since September last, has made five attempts to murder young women, after the manner of his London namesake. His last victim is Pauline Wilder, who received a wound 20 centimetres in length across her stomach, inflicted by the "Ripper" on Feb. 21. She died yesterday. The fiend is described as about 30 years old, having a blonde mustache and wearing sailors' clothes.

British Advocate Protection.

LONDON, March 2.—Mr. Howard Vincent, M. P., the noted advocate of protection for British industries, has addressed a letter to the public inviting support for the United Empire Trade League, formed to promote a union between England and the colonies.

Sadler to be Executed.

LONDON, March 2.—Sadler, the alleged murderer of "Carrie Nell," is to be executed, the Treasury having decided to drop the prosecution.

TRAIN ROBBERS ARRESTED.

A Brakeman's Wife the Medium for Disposing of the Plunder.

PHILADELPHIA, March 2.—Since last June the wife of a Reading Railroad trainman has probably sold more valuable silks, laces and velvets than the richest lady in the land has purchased in the same time. She was the medium through whom an organized gang of train robbers in the railroad's service disposed of their wholesale plunder.

Part of the gang are under arrest, and will have a final hearing at Doylestown this afternoon.

For months past numerous complaints have been made to the officials of many thefts of merchandise from freight cars, and claims have been presented to the company for the loss of silks, cloths, velvets, hosiery, etc., lost in transit over the road. The case was placed in the hands of Chief John G. O'Brien of the Reading Railroad's special officers to ferret out.

The clues were traced to the North Penn branch, and the thefts located as taking place in Bucks County on trains between New York and Philadelphia. Lewis Ransell, William Coyle and Abraham Kulp, brakemen, were arrested and taken to Doylestown for a hearing today.

The value of the goods taken will amount to many thousands of dollars.

WANTS TO DIE IN PEACE.

Eva Steele Asks to be Allowed to Commune in Silence.

NEWARK, N. J., March 2.—Eva Steele, who occupied so much of the public time and attention during her trouble over the unfortunate Robert Ray Hamilton affairs, has settled in Roseville, near this city. Her name crept into a Newark newspaper last week, and Eva has written a letter in which she says:

"I had hoped in this beautiful little village to have remained undisturbed. Left with the few short years that remained of my checkered career and to make such atonement and peace with my Maker that might give me the solace that I might in the next world meet the one I so cruelly wronged. All I ask is to be allowed to commune in silence. Do not you and the public know that I am human? That I have a heart like everybody else? That God knows that that heart is broken? Won't you please let me rest in peace? Respectfully,

"EVA STEELE."

—There was an accession of seventeen members to the Trinity Reformed church at the Communion services yesterday morning—ten by letter, and seven on confession of faith.

—A lamp exploded in the butcher shop, of Lewis & Co. on Park avenue Saturday night, and the blazing oil set fire to the wood-work in several places. With difficulty was a serious fire prevented.

—The annual meeting of the McAll Auxiliary will take place to-morrow morning at the Public Library, when a full attendance of managers and all others interested in the work is most earnestly desired.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Dr. A. A. Rhoner, a specialist for the cure of deafness and impaired sight, will be in Plainfield soon.

The aged mother of E. P. Thorn fell in front of the Crescent League club-house on Second street yesterday. She hurt her left hand and bruised her nose and forehead. The hurt is not serious.

The second anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. George Cole of Nethervood avenue was celebrated Saturday evening. A number of guests from Fanwood and Plainfield were present, and all had a very enjoyable time.

Plainfield's delegates to the Young Men's Christian Association State Convention at Trenton included Messrs. W. D. Murray, Wood, C. Brown, J. Goodhue, G. Beebe, J. E. Murray, A. B. Beers, C. Kissam, J. H. Manning, J. Whiting, Randolph, Van Emburgh, and Cahoone.

A highly enjoyable progressive game party was held at the home of Frank Hubbard, West Fifth street, Saturday evening, in honor of his cousin, Miss Baum, of Atlanta, Ga. The first observation prize was won by Miss Grace Lewis; the booby observation prize by Harry Maxson. In the "progressive tiddledy-winks" Miss Mary Pat on won first ladies' prize, and Louis Newman first gentlemen's. Miss Lulu Clawson and Harry Maxson won the booby prizes. After the games refreshments were served. There were five tables of players and eaters. Miss Baum was a charming hostess, and the affair was a delightful one in every respect.

It Is Licensed as a Saloon.

In reply to numerous personal inquiries and to set the public agitation on the subject as rest, we would inform the readers of THE PRESS that Mr. Miller applied for and was granted a saloon license only, at No. 10 West Second street. He cannot conduct it as a hotel unless he makes a new application to the Council, and procures additional signers.

Mrs. Obitz Loses a House.

A three-story frame building at 152 and 154 Ewen street, Williamsburg, owned by Catherine Obitz of North Plainfield, was burned yesterday morning. William Grotz, who kept a saloon on the ground floor, lost $6,000; half insured. The damage to the remainder of the building is $4,000; fully insured.

Refuse This License.

There is an application before the Council for a liquor license, from James Day. No place should be granted a license that is not kept in an orderly manner. THE PRESS, therefore, would suggest that the application of Day be refused.

Doesn't Mind a Little Thing Like That.

Master Ira Mulford, a little son of L. P. Mulford, of 34 Park avenue, fell while on his way to school this morning and fractured his arm near the wrist. Dr. Hedges set the limb, and the lad is as merry as ever.

Robbed the Assemblyman.

Assemblyman George Kyte's house at Fanwood was entered by burglars last evening, and a quantity of silver ware and clothing was taken. The silver ware consisted of family heir-looms marked with initials.

—Have you called on Peck at his new store?

THE VOICE OF THE SIX.

Its Decree a Gross Defiance of Public Sentiment, Says Mr. Schenck, and Retribution Is Sure to Follow.

A congregation that completely filled the Trinity Reformed church listened to the sermon of the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, last evening, on "The Voice of the Six Mightier than the Voice of the Multitude".

Mr. Schenck prefaced his sermon with the remark that against the actors in this high-handed scheme he entertained no hard feeling, no resentment. However earnest he might be in his address, he should cherish no ill will. Such a feeling would be entirely out of place in a professor of Christianity, in a Christian minister. He reserved to himself the right, however, to criticize the action of a body of men which he believed to be inherently wrong, and which disregarded public sentiment and the rights of the Christian church.

His text he took from I Kings, XII: 6-11, telling the story of how the young king Rehoboam had disregarded the appeals of his people to make their burdens no heavier, and had said: "Whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions."

This case—said Mr. Schenck—was very like that of the Six of Council. The representatives of the people were before them in protest, and presented reasonable appeals that their burdens should be made no heavier. The unheeded prayer of the Israelites to Rehoboam was the unheeded prayer of the Plainfield people to their rulers. The Six had acted on the advice of foolish men, and their reply to the people was substantially the same as the reply of Rehoboam, "Though your yoke was grievous, it shall be still heavier; though ye were afflicted with whips, ye shall be cursed with scorpions. Though our fathers cursed ye with four saloons and two hotels within a radius of fifty yards, we shall smite you with five saloons and two hotels." So the voice of the multitude, of scores, of hundreds, of 2,000, was not so mighty as the voice of the Six. The Christianized sentiment of the place was disregarded and defied. Look out for the result and the retribution!

Had a census been taken,—continued the preacher—with respect to this matter of licensing the saloon at 10 West Second street, it would have shown that fully eight-tenths of the people were opposed to the granting of the license; and of the remaining two-tenths one-tenth would have taken the same stand if they were sure that their names would not appear in public and thus work injury to their business through withdrawal of saloon patronage. Through the press, the pulpit, the public platform, public sentiment had expressed itself against licensing this saloon. Of public addresses there had been no less than nine, and each speaker had represented large constituencies in proclaiming opposition to the liquor traffic in general and to Miller's application in particular. Such protests as there were—multiplications of appeals! They came from an educational institution where young men were seeking to develop honest manhood; from reformatory institutions, including the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and Reform Club, whose members were men rescued from the vice and curse of strong drink. That appeal, if no other, from such men, ought to have made an impression on the Six. Then there was an appeal from such representative citizens as ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, whose scholarly address in Music Hall that afternoon had been listened to with such profound interest, who, with other men like him, had done more for the real good advancement of the city than any other set of men; and from such men as Charles Hyde, with all his wealth, J. K. Myers, Leo Daft, Wm. Stout, and others. Then there was the appeal from the Netherwooders, addressed particularly to one Councilman, appealing to him as their representative not to misrepresent them by voting for the proposed increase of licenses. "Represent us"—they cried.—"This is the sentiment, will and wish, of your constituents—not to vote for this increase." Then there was the appeal of the property owners of the immediate vicinity, saying "Do not invade our property rights and do that which will depreciate the value of our estates". Then there were appeals from the lodges and societies in the very edifice where the saloon was proposed to be, stating that a saloon there would interfere with the growth of the orders and would ruin members; and from the Christian ministers and Christian churches in massmeetings assembled; and this church itself. These appeals were not unreasonable. The appeal of this church was not unreasonable. He challenged any man of the Six to affirm in the papers or anywhere else that the appeal was not reasonable. No: the appeal was highly reasonable, and the granting of the asked-for license was an invasion, an intrusion, making six bars where had been five. God knows there was no need of that.

The appeals before the Six were unheeded, disregarded. That of the helpless, unprotected women was fired into the scrap basket. That of the property owners was treated with supreme contempt. The prayers of the young men, of the Christian church, were unanswered: the only reply was "Call the roll!" The roll was called, and those voting to invade the rights of the community and to implant within the circle another saloon were: Gallup—Hetfield—Moffett—Roberts—Smith—Spangenberg—6. Let honor be given to those others who voted no—Ackerman—Ginna—Johnston—Rushmore—See.

Public sentiment, intense and strong, had been disregarded and defied. The Christian people of the community had been insulted. What of the result?

Well, the immediate result would be the establishment of a saloon—not a hotel—against the wish of the people. "Keep it out!"—they had said.—"We don't want the accursed thing!" And now that saloon—the opening of which was to bring ignominy and contempt on the man who had applied for it—was about to get in its deadly work, in short order. It would take from the men the money that ought to go to the family, to the building loan association. It would blight men's moral nature, ruin their physical powers.

And what of the result to the Six? Well, no man could fly in the face of public sentiment, especially Christianized public sentiment, without feeling such deadly effects as would follow one to the end of his days. It was no slight thing to defy public sentiment. In New Brunswick men had had their heads turned by acquiring power, and had formed a thieving gang which had robbed the people right and left. They stole till they nearly swamped the city. They obliged widows to sell their homes. The preacher knew whereof he spoke, for his mother had been a widow there, and had had a hard time of it. Those in the ring piled up money for themselves, and had fine horses, and drove about in magnificent carriages, with glittering harnesses and all; and oh, how they did go! They flew in the face of public sentiment, and cried, "What are you going to do about it?" But the time came when every man in that accursed ring was flung in the dust. One died in State Prison; another was released from State Prison only to die; a third committed suicide in the Merchants' Hotel, Cortlandt street, N. Y.; a fourth was now in the insane asylum at Morris Plains. To defy Christianized public sentiment was to defy God. To fling such an insult in the teeth of the Christian people would not go unpunished. There is such a thing as a God, and a just God. Were the Six not afraid of having invited the loss of confidence of every one of the 2,000 protestants? They had need to be. Their chances of political preferment and honors had been weakened. The handwriting was on the wall for all the days and years to come. Any one of the Six, coming before the people and saying "Elect me!" would find in his own vote on this matter a terrible handwriting that would bring to him doom.

A most significant result of the action of the Six, however, was the re-organizing and annealing together of all the temperance and Christian forces of the place. A firmer welding and banding together could not have been accomplished through a year of work. And through this re-organization public sentiment would make itself felt at the next election day, when the people would have their say.

God has revealed Himself—concluded the preacher—and will reveal Himself in the days to come. There have been darker times than this. God's hand is on the helm, and in His own way He will guide the ship through the storm, in spite of the uprising billows. The Christian people would come out all right. Their just God was working out His own purposes in His own way. Cheer and encouragement should be felt. God was going to assert Himself in the municipal affairs of the city as He perhaps had not asserted Himself before. As the Union soldiers had cried, when Sheridan dashed into their disordered ranks, "Phil is here! Phil is here!" and had rallied and followed him to victory, so the people of Plainfield had but to cry "God is here! God is here!" and follow Him faithfully to the end. And with faith and patience and perseverance and upward work the victory would be won.

Who would feed children with morphine? and yet, a great many cough medicines contain that very thing. Hires' Cough Cure is absolutely free from poison, and is an absolutely safe remedy for pulmonary troubles. Let no dealer talk you into taking anything else.

Labor Leaders Arrested.

LYNN, Mass., March 2.—A great sensation in labor circles has been caused by the arrest of Master Workman John McCarthy of National Trade Assembly 240, K. of L., which embraces all the organization of leather workers in this country, for an alleged attempt with other persons, to "conspire, combine, confederate and agree" to unlawfully molest and intimidate non-union workmen employed in the morocco factory of John Donsilon & Son and J. J. Moulton, at which there were riotous occurrences two weeks ago. The morocco manufacturers will make every endeavor to secure McCarthy's conviction, though in discussing the case they are inclined to be reticent.

General Sherman Left No Will.

NEW YORK, March 2.—General Wm. T. Sherman left no will. In all his business relations the General was noted for his exact methods, and it was generally supposed that he had many years ago made his will. If he did, however, no trace of it can be found. His sons made a thorough search of his papers, which were all carefully arranged, but there was nothing among them that indicated any disposition of his property. Application has been made to the surrogate's court for the appointment of the Rev. Thomas E. Sherman and P. T. Sherman, sons of the deceased, as administrators of the personal property.

Mill Wrecked and an Employe Killed.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., March 2.—High water in the Black River wrecked the large pulp mill of the Remington Paper Company, two miles below this city, causing damages aggregating $50,000. John Murphy, an employe, was struck by the falling roof and shafting and instantly killed. Much of the valuable machinery of the plant was carried down the river. The accident will not interfere with the company's output from its paper mills.

Cook's Nomination Expected.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The impression seems to be general here that Mr. Charles E. Coon of New York, will be appointed to his old position as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. His long service in that capacity, and consequent familiarity with financial matters and methods, render him especially available at this time. He enjoys the confidence of Secretary Foster, as well as of the President, and his nomination is confidently expected before the adjournment of Congress.

SALOONS AND RACE-TRACKS.

Plainfield Enters Its Protest Against Proposed Pernicious Legislation.

An enthusiastic mass-meeting of Plainfield citizens was held in Stillman Music Hall at four o'clock yesterday afternoon to protest against the three proposed laws to legalize pool selling and race-track gambling throughout the State, to give up to liquor saloons one-half of Sundays, and to reduce the license fee of saloons to a uniform figure of $100 in the various cities of New Jersey.

The stage was occupied by the Rev. W. R. Richards, the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, the Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, the Rev. A. R. Dilts, the Rev. C. B. Mitchell, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Mayor Alexander Gilbert, ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, H. E. Bowen, Mayor Place of North Plainfield, Mason W. Tyler, and J. W. Yates.

Dr. Yerkes called the meeting to order. Mayor Gilbert was chosen Chairman. Stirring speeches were made by Messrs. Gilbert, Ketcham, Mitchell and Randolph. Prayer was offered by Mr. Richards. Messrs. Yates and Tyler were appointed a committee to prepare suitable resolutions. They presented the following, which were unanimously adopted by the entire assemblage:

Whereas, Men and combinations of men, interested in liquor selling and gambling, are now seeking to secure legislation in New Jersey to legalize gambling in connection with horse races, and to surrender a portion of the Sabbath to the liquor traffic; and

Whereas, Several bills looking to such ends have already been proposed in the Legislature, and we believe others are in course of preparation, whose effect, in case they become laws, can only be pernicious; and

Whereas, An earnest protest against all such legislation has already gone to the Legislature signed by thousands of the Christian women of our State; therefore, be it

Resolved—That we, citizens and residents of Plainfield, hereby express ourselves in hearty sympathy with the petition of the good women who have thus entered their protest against the inroads of vice and crime and of those influences which tend only towards evil,

Resolved—That as citizens of New Jersey we heartily approve and applaud the courage and uprightness of those honored judges who have enforced without fear or favor the laws of our State against pool selling and race-track gambling, and that we protest earnestly against the attempt to make our State the rendezvous of gamblers and ruffians and their abettors, by legalizing race-track gambling and their cognate evils.

Resolved—That, whatever may be our several creeds or views as to keeping holy the Sabbath day, we, as citizens and honest toilers, request and entreat our representatives in the Legislature not to take one step that may impair the value or the quiet of our weekly day of rest.

Resolved—That, whatever may be our several opinions respecting the wisdom of abolishing or regulating the traffic in strong drink, we unite in requesting the Legislature of New Jersey to adopt no measures in the direction of removing existing restrictions and regulations from the sale of intoxicating liquors.

Resolved—That it must be apparent to all intelligent citizens that any change in our existing laws in the direction of giving an option to the various localities or sections of our State, to have, or not to have, as they might elect, an influx of any of the evils above referred to, is an important and direct step towards the encouragement of vice and crime in New Jersey,—that it is unfair and unjust to the peaceable and honest inhabitants of the sections especially liable to be harmed and degraded by such permissory legislation, as well as to the neighboring cities and townships, and that any such so-called "local-option" legislation would open possible doors of entrance and progress to wickedness in many forms, and would be an injury and disgrace to our beloved State, and that we therefore request the Legislature of New Jersey to pass no such local option law.

Resolved—That a copy of these resolutions be sent by the chairman of this meeting to our representatives in the Senate and the Assembly of the State, with the request that they vote and use their influence against the proposed legislation.

On motion of Mr. Place the chair was instructed to appoint a committee of three to wait on the Governor as fast as the objectionable bills should be passed, and to plead with him to withhold his signature and kill the bills.

Copies of the following document were circulated, and many signatures of men were attached:

To the Legislature of the State of New Jersey.

GENTLEMEN:—

Whereas, It is currently reported that measures have been taken to introduce through your honorable body certain changes in the existing laws of the State, in reference to the sale of intoxicating liquors; also to invade the quiet of the weekly rest day; also to legalize pool selling and gambling; and

Whereas, We believe the liquor traffic and gambling to be monstrous evils, which destroy the morals of the community, and seriously menace the safety, purity and happiness of our homes; and

Whereas, The city charities, as well as the State asylums, penitentiaries and almshouses are already overburdened through the effects of the liquor traffic, even under its present limitations; and

Whereas, We believe it to be our divine right to conserve in every possible way the interests of good citizenship, economy and home protection;

Therefore, We citizens of Plainfield, regardless of party, do earnestly protest against the enactment by your honorable body of any law which will aid the accomplishment of the measures above referred to, either in the way of direct permissory statutes removing present restrictions to liquor selling and gambling, or of a local option law rendering race-track gambling possible.

This petition will be taken to Trenton by the committee appointed by the chair.

By the 9:42 train to-morrow morning a delegation of women will leave Plainfield for Trenton to present to the Legislature a similar petition signed by a thousand Plainfield women, and to urge the Legislature not to change for the worse the existing saloon and race-track laws.

THE RUM-RING IN PLAINFIELD.

A Day of Reckoning Is Coming to Municipal Misrulers, Says Dr. Lewis.

"The Right of Christianity to be Heard in the Municipal Affairs of Plainfield" was the theme on which the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis based his sermon, at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, last Sabbath (Saturday) morning. His text was Matt. xvi: 19—"I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

The time has fully come—said Dr. Lewis—when the truth involved in the text demands recognition and application in the municipal affairs of Plainfield. The highest and holiest interests of the human race are committed to Christianity. God's love, justice, mercy, watch-care, and patience, are seeking to lift men, to redeem them from sin, and to fit them for heaven The Church of Christ is the agency through which this work goes on. The Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount form the only firm foundation for the development and maintenance of noble manhood, pure homes, or permanent nobility and prosperity in the State. When these are heeded, evil is discountenanced, passion is controlled, baseness is purified, honesty is promoted, purity is exalted. Having such supreme interests in charge, Christianity must be authoritative. It has the power and authority of Everlasting Truth. The eternal years of God belong to it, because it is a part of God. Truth is another name for God's thoughts.

In the light of these general principles, Christianity is commissioned to speak with authority to all men, on all questions; to rulers and law-makers, quite as much as to other men; nay more, for he who does not rule in righteousness is a shame to virtue, an offense to holiness, and doubly a sinner before God. Official position doubles the duty of men to fear God and work righteousness. Christianity may justly demand of the common council of our city something more than the right to be disregarded and sneered at, as it was in the council chambers last Thursday evening, and that by men who bear the name of Christians, and profess to represent God and justice in the affairs of men. Among the more specific reasons why Christianity has a right to demand a hearing in Plainfield, are the following.

1. The fair name and the attractive character of Plainfield are mainly due to religious influences. It is a city of churches, of schools, of missions, and of reformatory and helpful institutions, all of which are the product of Christianity. These are supported by the Christian sentiment, the money, the labors, of Christian men and women. Property is worth more for this. Corner lots in Plainfield with its Christian institutions and influences are worth double what they would be without these. Real-estate would better foster Christianity, as touching business interests, rather than street railroads, whose franchise is purchased by barter with the whiskey-ring.

2. The open saloon, the legalized rum traffic, is foe to every interest which Christianity fosters. It creates crime, breeds impurity, debases manhood, destroys nobility, impoverishes society; ("Hell will never clean its own gutters" no matter how high you put the license); breaks up homes, blights childhood, blasts womanhood, debauches and wrecks civil government, curses whatever it touches. In the late struggle between the churches and the saloons Christianity asked very little, far too little. It only prayed that the evil might be kept within the limits hitherto reached. It ought to have demanded the death of the license system, even though there was no hope of any answer to such a prayer. But the little it asked, was as coolly ignored by the majority of our municipal lawmakers, as though the voice of petition and prayer was no more than the passing wind. It would have been more consistent not to have listened to pleas which were doomed to such scorning. Better have refused to listen to Pastor Schenck, than to add: "Say what you please, we shall vote for rum."

What is the cure? Enlightened and Christianized public opinion. In a government like ours, public opinion, the average verdict of the permanent thought of the people, is the controlling factor. Partisan strife, political wire pulling, temporary "combines", and personal ambition, are often the more prominent factors, but they are not the permanent ones, unless, sad day, the average opinion be so low and so indifferent, that only these can thrive. It is useless to hope for permanent good by descending to ordinary political methods. Christianity cannot do this. Undoubtedly the "better class of citizens" are too negligent of their duty as citizens. But their highest duty lies in making such high standards, such authoritative demands in behalf of right and righteousness, as will compel men to heed the claims of Christ's kingdom.

Rum rule has grown in power and extent in Plainfield for the last ten years. Gambling and licentiousness, twin evils with it, have spread and strengthened accordingly. We have raised the license fee, and extended the evil. There is no "restriction of traffic" in a system which gathers strength, and increases the nuclei of evil, year by year. In the struggle hitherto, too much has been hoped for from political movements against the rum influence. The chief weapons of our warfare are not carnal, nor political. Christians find their highest help in the truths of Christ's kingdom, which undermine evil, as the sunlight dissolves the frost chains, as fresh air and sunlight kill the germs of disease.

Last Thursday evening the whisky-ring flaunted its hateful flag in the face of Christianity, and gave us notice that the most we may expect is a momentary hearing, a hearing as fruitless as the cries of sorrow in the ears of the dead. Henceforth our petitions and prayers may expect such regard as the wolf gives to the lamb, whose bleating only whets the appetite of a cruel hunger. What shall we do? Accept the challenge in the name of Jehovah, and join the battle anew. Let there be no more accepting of the situation, and saying, "Gentlemen of the rum-ring, we expect you will walk over us, but won't you please take off your hob-nailed shoes part of the time?" Let there be no more saying "We draw the line at sixteen licenses; please stop there, don't put one in each church yard; we don't need this much." In the name of God no more of that sort of yielding. As a Christian man and pastor, I draw the line at none. If we must have rum, let it be illegal rum; unshielded rum; rum undignified by the sanctions of municipal laws. It will curse men no less for being "licensed". It will debauch manhood no more for being "free".

Let no word of partisanship concerning methods among Christian workers be spoken hereafter. Let all who bear the Christian name unite to lift public opinion so high that a member of a Christian church cannot sit in the Council, and vote for rum. (I wonder if the men who did that last Thursday night will go to the communion table to-morrow and uncover their hearts before the Christ who weeps over our rum-ruled city?)

I want to make a personal allusion to Councilman Ackerman. I did not vote for him. I did not know that he would vote wrong; I was not certain that he would vote as he did; and I gave what I deemed to be right, the benefit of the doubt. I now give him double honor, that he stood firm when the shock of battle came. I have never voted for a license councilman in Plainfield. I do not believe any Christian man ought to. But I do value united Christian sentiment, and all helpful influences, that I will not denounce the man who thinks as I do not as to political methods. There has been too much of that in the past among temperance people. Rum gains whenever Christian sentiment is divided, and the best influences never ripen under partisan feeling. I will stand with any man who will help roll back the tide of battle one step.

God is not dead. Justice is not asleep. The day of reckoning is not beyond hearing. Evil has limited lease of life. God's people must be true and brave, patient and watchful. In the name of Christianity I say We will not retract; we will not yield; we will be heard. Amen.

AMERICANISM REVIVED.

Mrs. Cleveland and the Revolt Against Anglomania.

Instead of Browning and Then the Fair Sisterhood Will Discuss the Constitution — Miss Jane Meade Welch's Lectures.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Our Lent is being made memorable to us by a new cult, noteworthy in itself and doubly noteworthy because of its introducer. In these days that are called days of Anglomania the first signs of a revival of interest in Americanism are sure to arrest attention, the more so when it is known that in the quietest and yet in the most intelligent and earnest way Mrs. Cleveland has given the impetus to the movement.

Many people have called the young woman who reigned so brilliantly in the White House a typical American, a fair and shining example of the results of American education and training. Certain it is that she is American in faith in her own country, her pride in it and loyalty to it and her loving interest in its traditions. Most people who know Mrs. Cleveland well are aware that the American spirit is strong in her, and few of her friends will be surprised to know that she has personally invited to New York and introduced to New Yorkers an eloquent apostle of Americanism, through whom she will influence her fellow-countrywomen to study and to discuss—not Burke's Peerage and the Almanach de Gotha, but the inestimable privileges they enjoy in being American women, heirs of the glorious American past, sharers in the fruitful American present and responsible in large measure for the fulfillment of the glad promise of the American future.

Mrs. Cleveland's friend, the preacher of what one might call, were it not so simply and unobtrusively conducted and with so complete an absence of wind instruments, our new American crusade, is Miss Jane Meade Welch, who is already widely known as perhaps the most promising of the younger delvers among our annals and archives; they say of her that she goes to bed with the Constitution and gets up with the Declaration of Independence, and the result of such pillow fellowship is an enthusiasm so contagious that she bids fair to make us dream all night—say after salad—of waving Lawrence's blue flag and shouting, "Don't give up the ship," and spend our waking hours in tribute to the names of Abigail Adams and Dolly Madison.

The movement began a fortnight ago in Mrs. Cleveland's beautiful white and gold reception room, with blush roses and violets and valley lilies to smile on it and give it sweetness, and tea and bouillon to lend zest and mental vigor. The readiness with which women have responded has had its own significance; it appears that with all the talk of foreign fads and fashions one needs but to look closer to find warm-hearted patriotism. Mrs. William C. Whitney—if it be not treason to bring her in for an example—with all the distractions of her brilliant social career, has made herself an intelligent and unusually well-read student of American history, and her interest in the shifting phases of American life and her desire to interest her daughter in them is keen. Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew, Mrs. Daniel Lamont, Mrs. Joseph H. Choate and scores of others have ranged themselves as Americans of the Americans, and to-day the first of a series of Lenten lectures on the development of the Republic under the constitution—lectures in the arrangements for which Mrs. Cleveland assisted to the smallest details—has introduced the subject to the fashionable public at the Berkeley Lyceum.

Not since taking up her residence in New York has Mrs. Cleveland identified herself with any thing of such possible import, and there is likely to be a rally at the gently whispered war cry—pardon the Hibernianism—of America for American women.

Miss Welch, who numbered among her hearers this afternoon some of the best known women in the city, is a slender, dark-haired woman with gracious ways and a face that lights up with a magnetic charm. She comes from Buffalo, where she was for some years a member of the editorial staff of the Buffalo Courier, as well as a generous contributor to the Harper's publications. It was while busy with her journalistic work that—I suppose it would not meet with her approval if I were to say a mission came upon her, but American history possessed itself of her, seized upon her energies. She became an earnest and a philosophic student of our National life, and with her study there woke a desire growing into a purpose to bring other women to a fuller appreciation of what seemed to her the most important chapter in the history of humanity.

She began her advocacy of the cult of Americanism with talks on American history held in her own parlors in Buffalo. Her vivid word paintings won for her a hearing on the Chautauqua lecture platform. In the Ogontz school, which is perhaps the most fashionable private school in the country, she has imparted to the pupils, against the days they go into society, much of her own loyal zeal. In Chicago, while giving a series of brilliant and powerful lectures, she yet found simple words in which to tell of love of country to the tots in a kindergarten attended by the children of Mrs. Henry B. Stone. Since coming to New York by Mrs. Cleveland's invitation, she has given talks in the private school at Dobb's Ferry, attended by the little daughter of Vice-President Morton.

"I don't want to appear in the light of a revolutionist," she said, when I betrayed symptoms of an indiscreet desire to clap hands, "but only, before Anglomania gets a firmer root, to open women's eyes more widely to the fact that this, seriously and without bravado, is the greatest country in the world. Foreigners see it and wonder at our lack of realization.

"We are in danger of being denationalized from above and from below. We used to get the bulk of our immigrants from a self-governing stock, they were Teutons; now we are getting Hungarians, Poles, Italians, who have no comprehension of the spirit of our institutions, but who are a mighty power in our cities.

"I wouldn't shut the gates against them, but how shall we assimilate them if we stand aloof and let ourselves also be denationalized from above, if we take no pains to foster the spirit of Americanism?"

"What is that spirit?"

"Americanism essentially is the responsibility of the individual for the Government. It is the government of the people, for the people and by the people. Many men shirk this responsibility, but Prof. James Bryce says no other country owes so much to its women, and it will owe them yet more if once they fully recognize the power they might exert in keeping the breath of life in the old faith in American hopes, aspirations and ideals."

"You do not think that faith is drooping?"

"By no means; but see how we leave it to foreigners to write and to appreciate our history; think of the candid, critical and philosophic estimate in Bryce's epoch-making volumes, though on our side, to be sure, John Fiske is a strong name."

"When was the National spirit strongest in us?"

"If you mean, when did we discuss our institutions most broadly and feel the most jealous and personal interest in them, in the formative period after the Revolution."

"And for what reason have we become less American?"

"I do not say that we have; I only speak of a tendency. Our little boys go trotting about in sailor suits with the names of Queen Victoria's warships lettered on them. Our women find sentiment in European ruins, of stone and of flesh and blood, and one hears that there is no perspective in American history.

"If you look at it properly there is a glorious perspective, for we are the result of all that has been, the finest fruit of evolution.

"The Europeans, whom we admire, always admire that in us which is inherent and distinctive, not copied. Emerson says 'imitation is suicide,' and our American women may well take the Monroe doctrine that 'the United States shall not be considered as subjects for future colonization by any foreign powers,' and refuse to have their minds colonized by foreign ideas."

"Is American history taught with sufficient enthusiasm in our schools?"

"Very seldom. Love of country ought to be learned, as it is, for instance, in Saxony where they begin history with Saxon story, in every class-room. Our boys ought to absorb the American orations, our girls to grow up, consciously proud to have part in a country that is wrestling so gloriously with humanity's problems, and in whose struggles the ethical sense of women is so important a factor in deciding the victory."

"What do you give women to read?"

"For romance, the expeditions of La Salle, who took possession of New France for 'Louis the Great, King of France and Navarre;' my rhetoric used to say, 'This is the narration of a great and glorious undertaking.' There is romance in the planting of every State, and for human interest take the memoirs of Mrs. Madison and Mrs. Adams, the lives of the statesmen and the anti-slavery movement. No country has a fuller or more thrilling story."

"And you would have women—?"

"Appreciate, and that they may appreciate, know; study the history of their own country as critically, lovingly and intelligently as they study Browning; fit themselves to discuss the larger problems of politics with understanding, and so realize and cause their children to realize what it means to be American citizens."

"Why haven't we a National hymn?"

"I wish I might say 'The Battle Hymn of the Republic' held that position, because it was written by a woman."

I am not going to set down the color or the cut of Miss Welch's frock, although she herself admits there is fine precedent for our latter-day clothes descriptions, in that the suit was written up seam by seam in which Webster made his reply to Hayne.

She talked to us to-day of the making of the constitution, and there are many who say the fire of her speech is like Anna Dickinson's. She is going to bring our heads back to Hamilton and Jefferson, and if she and Mrs. Cleveland can bring our hearts back to America, then will not this Lent have started a reaction that may have bright results, that may make short work of Anglomania? And is not this better worth while than any amount of critical study of Ibsen?

The Effect of the Mace on a Congressional Tempest.

The Mace Is a Symbol of the Authority and Dignity of the House—Notable Instances of Its Magic Effect—Scenes of Wild Confusion on the Floor.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

A stranger, standing in the Speaker's lobby at five minutes of twelve in the forenoon, will see much of interest. The walls of the long lobby are covered with pictures of the former Speakers of the House. A portrait that never fails to command the admiration of even the oldest members of the House is that of Samuel J. Randall. The Roman nose, the firm-set mouth, the square jaw, the flashing eyes and the black curling locks mark the born leader. His face stands out among the faces of Blaine, Stevenson, Boyd, Polk, Clay, Pennington, Muhlenburg, Kerr and others, like the face of Napoleon among his marshals at Versailles.

While gazing at this gallery of the portraits of statesmen dead and gone, the leading living statesmen of the House glided past the observer. Then comes between the swinging baize doors a venerable man with gray hair, a gray beard and sightless eyes. He carries a hat in one hand and a cane in the other. A page leads him by the arm. He is Rev. William H. Milburn, author of the "Rifle, Axe and Saddlebags," and Chaplain of the House. He passes into the hall of Representatives from the lobby and is lost to view.

Look back toward the east entrance. You see another page, with hands folded in front of him, clasping what appears to be a massive silver-bound ebony club. It is surmounted by a globe of silver, upon which the hemispheres are traced. A silver eagle, with outstretched wings, is perched upon the globe. The whole resembles the fasces carried by the Roman lictors before the tribunes, in time of peace, and before the consuls, returning from war. It is a bundle of thirteen ebony sticks entwined with a silver band. These thirteen ebony sticks represent the thirteen original States. This club is the mace representing the authority and dignity of the House. Its custodian is the Sergeant-at-Arms. It is kept in his office when the House is not in session. The page carries it through the lobby and into the chamber. It is placed at the side of a malachite pedestal. This mace was made in 1834, although it bears the date of 1841. The latter date was engraved upon it at the time it was repaired and remounted. It weighs about twenty pounds.

Anon, the Speaker enters the House and climbs the steps leading to the dais. He leans his elbow upon the marble desk, and gazes at the clock below the main gallery. When both hands mark high noon, he steps behind his desk and seizes the gavel. At the same instant the great mace is elevated to its pedestal. It indicates that the House is in session. There is a crash as the Speaker brings down the mallet.

"The House will be in order," he says, with the nasal twang indicative of the genuine Yankee. The blind chaplain rises at the desk of the clerk to low him. The Speaker crosses his hands upon the handle of the gavel and looks steadfastly at the House for several seconds. Many members arise, while others place their hands before their eyes. All assume a devout attitude. The Speaker then says in a low, clear tone: "The chaplain will offer prayer," and bows his head. When the prayer is concluded the journal is read, and the House is ready for business.

The mace remains upon its pedestal until the House goes into committee of the whole. Then it is lowered, and remains lowered till the committee rises. Notwithstanding its prominence and significance, a man might serve six months in the House of Representatives without noticing it. This would be more likely to happen if the member sat on the Republican side of the chamber. There the Speaker's desk hides it from view. But let a storm rise; let the pulses of the members be quickened with passion and hot words be uttered; let clenched fists be shaken and members rush toward the main aisle in rage and fury, and the mace will appear. It will be borne aloft majestically over the area in front of the Speaker's desk, up the main aisles and down the side aisles, calming the tempest, cooling the disputants, calling the House to its sober self and causing members to resume their seats. They recognize its significance as a symbol and submit to the authority which it represents. It has been used for this purpose five times since the opening of the Fifty-first Congress. It was carried around the House twice in the Fiftieth Congress.

The first time that it was used in the present Congress was when the Democratic members made the fight against the Speaker's assumption to count a quorum under what he called general parliamentary law. None who witnessed it will ever forget the scene. It came when the attempt to unseat Judge Jackson, of West Virginia, was made. The galleries were packed and the whole House was in an uproar. Even so careful a man as John G. Carlisle became excited and rushed down a side aisle demanding recognition. Mills, Breckinridge, McMillin, Crisp, Bland and other Democratic leaders were clamoring to be heard, while McKinley, Grosvenor, Rowell, Cannon and other Republicans were claiming the floor and shouting: "Regular order." Out of the chaos strode tall Bynum down to the front desks, and, with powerful lungs, gave the Speaker an excoriation that sounded like the peal of a trumpet in the noise of battle. The galleries joined in the uproar. Vainly the Speaker tried to bring the House to order. Then the mace was brought out. It was supposed at first that the Sergeant-at-Arms intended to arrest Mr. Bynum. A brawny son of Illinois stood at Bynum's side, prepared to resist the attempt, if it was made. The mace, however, was carried up the main aisle and in the side aisles where turbulent knots of men were gathered. It came like oil upon troubled waters. The tempest subsided as quickly as it had arisen. Members recognized its significance and dropped into their seats as if petrified. There were turbulent scenes afterward, but none as turbulent as the one that had been quelled. This was on January 31.

On May 14 the mace was again brought into play. It was on the day that Mr. Bynum was censured by the House. The excitement arose while the House was in committee of the whole upon the McKinley bill. General Grosvenor, of Ohio, was in the chair. There was a bitter personal colloquy between Mr. Bynum and General Bayne, of Pennsylvania, concerning the character of one Campbell, a glass manufacturer of Pittsburgh. The confusion was terrible. Three-quarters of the members were upon their feet, applauding and shouting. The tumult reached its height when Bynum denounced Mr. Campbell as a liar and perjurer, and said that he had as great confidence in his character as he had in the character of General Bayne. General Cutcheon demanded that the words be taken down, and the confusion became so great that the House looked like a mob around an election board. Fists were clenched and every thing indicated a free fight. Again Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms Tom Cavanagh appeared with the mace. The disputants were boiling over with rage, but they dropped into their seats and the House became so still that the whispers in the galleries could be heard. Bynum was censured late at night, standing in the Speaker's arena, surrounded by his Democratic associates, who refused to go to their seats when ordered to do so by the Speaker. Mr. Reed, instead of ordering out the mace, censured Bynum where he stood. The mace had done work enough for one day.

On June 25, while the force bill was under discussion, sharp personalities were exchanged between Joseph G. Cannon and John H. O'Neall, of Indiana. O'Neall alluded to alleged purchasing of votes in Cannon's district, and Joseph G. was on fire in an instant. He had the floor, and was therefore able to shut off O'Neall from replying. The hub-bub was universal. The Democrats shouted for fair play, and the Republicans cheered Cannon and cried for the regular order. O'Neall was stung to the quick. He insisted upon being heard, and did not give way until the mace was borne up the side aisle where he stood. The brewing storm died away and O'Neall subsided.

On Tuesday, August 26, the services of Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms Cavanagh were again required. It was during the exciting scenes attending the passage of the Conger lard bill by the House. Within three minutes after Mr. Cannon's noted reply to Mr. McAdoo there was a collision on the Republican side of the House. Blows were exchanged, while the House was a perfect bedlam. In an instant the great mace was borne along the aisle and within a few seconds perfect silence was secured.

The last time that the mace was used was in the turbulence and wild commotion caused by the recent effort of the Speaker to suppress Mr. Mills. The words "traitor" and "treason" were freely bandied and there was some profanity. Everybody expected to see an eruption. The mace, however, did its work effectually and the House was soon quieted.

AMOS J. CUMMINGS.

A LAUGH FOR EACH.

SHE (sentimentally)—"Shall you ever forget our honeymoon, darling?" He (practically)—"Never! the bills were something too awful."

CORA (city cousin)—"Do you ever go out driving?" Smartweed (country cousin)—"Ya-as, w'en the ole cows won't come up without goin' arter 'em."

MISS PORCANBEKES—"My faithful canine exhales knickerbocks after any violent muscular exercise." Miss Breezy—"You mean to say his breath comes in short pants?"

A MAN had consulted a fortune-teller as to his future. "You'll be poor, sir, until you're thirty," was the prediction of the Pythoness. "And then?" "Oh! after that you'll get used to it."

EXASPERATED VICTIM (tossing penny to organ grinder)—"Here, take this and be off!" Spaghetti (gratefully starting his crank again)—"Not yetta signor; one good turn deserves another."

"YES," said the bulldog, after a hard effort to break his chain and chew up a tramp he saw in the road; "if I wasn't so much attached to my home there is nothing I should like better than to join that poor wanderer yonder."

SOPHOMORE—"I heard one of the girl undergraduates make a truly womanly answer the other day." Junior—"Indeed." Sophomore—"Yes; the professor in astronomy asked her why the earth goes around the sun." Junior—"What answer did she make?" Sophomore—"Because."

THE Modern Style.—Visitor—(trying to amuse the baby)—"See, baby, see. There goes the choo-choo." Nineteenth Century Baby (contemptuously)—"Indeed! I have always understood that that was a locomotive; but if I have been misinformed, I thank you for the correction."

MAMMA (coaxingly)—"Come, Bobby, take your medicine now, and then jump into bed." Bobby—"I do not want to take my medicine, ma." Father—(who knows how to govern children)—"Robert, if you don't take your medicine at once you will be put to bed without taking it at all." Bobby takes it promptly.

AS TOLD BY CHILDREN.

ON being asked what a nephew is, a little Boston school girl replied: "It is when your niece is a boy."

A TEACHER asked a class to write an essay on "The Result of Laziness" and one of the bright but lazy boys in the class handed in as his composition a blank sheet of paper.

THE following written definition of the word "bachelor" was handed in by a fifth grade boy: "A bachelor is a man who has no wife, nor wants no wife, nor can't get no wife."

TEACHER—"Suppose, Tommy, you were President of the United States, what would you do?" Tommy—"I would not let anybody wash my face or comb my hair any more."

FLOSSIE (looking up from her history)—"Well, what I don't understand about Columbus discovering America is how he knew it was America, when he'd never seen it before."

"WHAT are you doing, Willie?" asked the startled father, as his son suddenly slipped on the icy pavement and slid ten feet. "Traveling on my shape, papa," was the answer that the interesting child gave.

JOHNNY (entertaining the young man before "Sis" entered the parlor)—"I 'lowed you'd never come back here any more." Young Man—"Why so, Johnny?" Johnny—"Sis said yesterday you was clean 'gone.'"

ABOUT VARIOUS ANIMALS.

THE king or horseshoe crab chews its food with its legs; the little animal grinding its morsels with its thighs before it passes them over to its mouth.

IN the spring of every year seals may be seen in the waters of New York harbor. They are not the species so valuable for their skin, but a variety known as the gray-back seal.

THE dogs in Buffalo steer clear of a fighting cat owned by D. A. Slaght. It weighs twenty-eight pounds, and its clawing power usually takes the courage out of a dog of twice its weight in about one minute.

"GOSS," THE red Chinese chow-chow dog that was long the traveling companion of the Prince of Wales, is now fourteen years old and infirm, and the honor has fallen upon "Plumpie," another dog of the same breed.

THE depth of a sea about six miles is reduced 620 feet by compression; if the ocean were incompressible the level of the surface would be 126 feet higher than it is at present, and about 2,000,000 square miles of land would be submerged.

Trees in the United States.

There are 413 species of trees to be found in the United States and Territories, 16 of which, when perfectly seasoned, will sink in water. The heaviest of these is black ironwood (Condelia ferra), found only in Southern Florida, which is more than 30 per cent. heavier than water. Of the other 15, the best known is the lignum vitæ (Guiacum sanctum) and the mangrove (Rhizophora mangle). Texas and New Mexico, lands full of queer creeping, crawling, walking, and inanimate things, are the homes of a species of oak (Quercus grisea) which is about 14 times heavier than water, and which, when green, will sink almost as quick as a bar of iron. It grows only in mountain regions, and has been found westward as far as Colorado desert, where it grows at an elevation of 10,000 feet. All the species heavier than water belong to tropical Florida or in the arid West or Southwest.

"CONFIDENCE BEGETS LOVE."

CHILD. "Everybody loves you, gran'ma; I wish everybody would love me." Mrs. PINKHAM. "Everyone will love you, my child, if they can confide in you."

The above dialogue tells its own story; even the little child, without knowing why her grandmother is so universally loved, sees in her face a light of intellectual sympathy that satisfies her. That sympathy has extended itself all over the world, for wherever civilized women exist, Mrs. Pinkham is known and reverenced. Send stamp for "Guide to Health and Etiquette."

CHILD. "Gran'ma, kiss me good-night. Sister is asleep, but we so love to hear you tell of all the ladies that call you Mother." Mrs. PINKHAM. "Yes, darling, when you are older perhaps you may do as I have done."

NOW FOR A STRUGGLE

No Settlement of the Big Coke Strike in Sight

EXCITEMENT IN THE REGION.

The Miners Refuse to Submit to a Reduction in Their Wages.

They Are Preparing for a Three Months' Contest—An Army of Idle Workmen in Western Pennsylvania—Many Industries Paralyzed on Account of a Lack of Fuel—Poor People in Actual Want.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., March 3.—The conference of the mine workers' scale committee and the coke operators of this region here on the mine difficulties failed to accomplish anything and adjourned sine die.

The operators would not agree to renew negotiations for an adjustment except on the basis of a general reduction of 10 per cent., which the miners' representatives declined to do. Secretary McBride says it is no longer an amicable shut down but a strike. A large part of the United Mine Workers' defence fund will be devoted to the support of the coke region strike.

The region is much excited, and the strikers are preparing for a three months' struggle.

AN ARMY OF IDLE WORKMEN.

Many Industries Dependent on Coke for Fuel Are Paralyzed.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 3.—The beginning of the month finds 28,000 men in Western Pennsylvania on strike. The coke troubles are responsible for the idleness of 13,000 of these, and those of the river coal miners add 15,000. The shut down in the Mahoning and Shenango valleys affects 1,000 more. The idleness keeps $670,000 from coming into this part of the State every week, that being the value of the product of the men when at work. In addition to this many industries dependent on coke are paralyzed. The Carnegie mills had 90 days' supply on hand, but most of the others had less than 30 days' stock, and must shortly shut down if the strike is not brought to a close.

Strikes are frequent here, but it is seldom that so many men are out at once. The loss in wages has amounted to $1,125,000 since the strike began, and many poor people are in actual want.

There is great depression in the window glass trade. Thirty-two factories have closed, and it is probable that more will follow. The probability of a general strike in the building trades is largely responsible for the present state of affairs.

Ready for the Death Chair.

SING SING, N. Y., March 3.—Unless the courts interfere again Warden Brush will have to execute during the week beginning March 16 the sentence of death by electricity imposed upon the murderers, Harris A. Smiler and James A. Slocum. The dynamos which are to furnish the fatal current and the death-chair are ready, and Warden Brush is quietly making his arrangements for the electrocution.

Signed by the New Haven Club.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 3.—Manager Burnham announces that he has signed Carney of the Buffalo and Cleveland Players' League teams; Decker of Philadelphia and Wilson, formerly of Worcester. He also claims to have a pitcher to take the place vacated by Doran. Lally and Cahill, who are reserved by the New Haven club, are wanted by Association teams.

Frozen to Death.

PATERSON, N. J., March 3.—Mark Brophy, aged 33, an unmarried man, who lived with his parents on State street, was found frozen to death in the morning in ex-Assemblyman Keys's stable on Mill street. Brophy had apparently climbed into the hayloft to sleep and was overcome by the cold. His body lies in the Morgue.

Pension Conferees Unable to Agree.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The conferees on the Pension Appropriation bill are unable to agree on the disputed clause concerning the fees to be paid to attorneys. An effort was made to harmonize the disputing sides, but it was unsuccessful, and the conferees of each House are waiting for the other side to make the first advance.

Gov. Hill and the Governorship.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 3.—It is stated on good authority that Gov. Hill has no intention of resigning his office as Chief Executive of this State until next December.

Slightly Cool in Vermont.

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., March 3.—The thermometer early in the morning registered in this vicinity 25 to 40 degrees below zero.

AN ALLEGED CONFESSION.

One of Chief Hennessey's Supposed Slayers Makes a Statement.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 3.—When the men accused of the murder of the late Chief of Police Hennessey were brought into court at 10 a. m., Manuel Politz, who has been identified as one of the men who actually did the shooting, was laboring under great excitement. He repeatedly got up and spoke in Sicilian, and was so frequently forced to sit down by deputies. At last he made it known that he wanted to make a statement.

There being no interpreter in court, one had to be sent for. When the interpreter arrived Judge Baker ordered Politz to be taken into his private office, and himself, the interpreter and counsel for both sides followed, and whatever Politz had to say was said in private.

When the party re-entered the court room Politz was ghastly pale. He was evidently frightened. After the judge had taken his seat on the bench Mr. Semmes, of counsel for the defence, announced that he could no longer represent Politz. The court thereupon appointed counsel to defend.

When the prisoners were remanded back to the dock, Politz was afraid to walk with them. He also did not want to go into the same room with them, but he was assured by the sheriff that no harm would befall him. He went in very reluctantly, however.

NOT AFRAID OF A RAID.

New York Officials Still Hold the Connecticut Horse Thief.

CARMEL, N. Y., March 3.—The report that a number of Connecticut officials are to sweep down on the Putnam County jail and seize the alleged horse thief, John T. Colbert, is not generally credited here. Under Sheriff Hazen thinks that a requisition from the Governor of Connecticut to Governor Hill will be sent possibly to-day, but that the Connecticut officials would not dare to defy the New York authorities by attempting to take away a prisoner through any but the proper legal methods.

Colbert is an intelligent man and a native of Elmira. He was recently employed as telegraph operator on the New England Railroad at Hawleyville, Conn. The county jail in which he is confined is one of the foulest in the State. It was built over 30 years ago, and was only intended to hold six men and two women, while there is in it now fully 65 or 70 prisoners. It is a mystery here why the State Prison and Jail Association did not take some action concerning it.

PRISONERS BREAK JAIL.

They Make Their Escape After Assaulting the Sheriff and His Deputy.

LEBANON, Pa., March 3.—Sheriff Miller, while locking up his prisoners last night, noticed four of them—Joe and Jacob Rothrager, John Schell and Levi Becker, all convicted of highway robbery—crouching in a dark corner of the corridor.

He ordered them to their cells, and the quartet arose as if to do his bidding, but instead threw him down and brutally kicked him. He cried for help, and his assistant, William West, appeared, only to receive the same treatment. After kicking and jumping upon the prostrate men until they were insensible, the convicts made their escape. The assaulted men are in a precarious condition.

500 Hands Idle by a Fire.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., March 3.—The upper Jacquard weave shed, at Adams, owned by the Renfrew Manufacturing Company, was burned late last night. The shop was filled with valuable Jacquard looms and the loss will reach $100,000. Five hundred hands will be thrown out of employment by the fire.

No Choice for Mayor.

PORTLAND, Me., March 3.—In this city the electors for mayor resulted in no choice. True, Rep., had 2,871, Ingraham, Dem., 2,754, and Deering, Pro., 269. A second election will be held about the 16th inst. In Hallowell, E. E. Beans, Citizens' candidate, was chosen mayor by one majority.

The Pond Manufactory Burned.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., March 3.—The Pond Manufacturing Company's works were burned last night. The company supplied power to all the newspaper offices and many factories. Many valuable patterns were destroyed. The loss will be very heavy.

Weavers Strike.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 3.—A strike occurred at the Wanskuck Mill during the morning on account of the new price list posted making a reduction in the wages of the weavers. Three hundred and forty weavers are out.

Yale Not Likely to Row Cornell.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 3.—President Townsend of the Yale navy says it is not at all probable that Yale will make a match with Cornell this year.

RUSHING THE BILLS

A Perfect Jam of Legislation at the Nation's Capitol.

CONFERENCE COMMITTEES BUSY.

The Postal Subsidy Bill Passes the Senate and is in the President's Hands.

The Appropriations by Congress Amount to $500,000,000—New York to Have a New Custom House and Philadelphia a New Mint Building—Mr. Coon's Name Dropped for Assistant Treasurer.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Some days must elapse after the adjournment of Congress before it is known just what has been done. There is a perfect jam of legislation. Hundreds of bills are on the very verge of final action. Many have passed one House, been favorably reported from committees in the other House, placed upon the calendar, and ordered to the point of completion.

Some have passed both Houses, but with amendments, and must be taken up for concurrence or non-concurrence and conference action. Others are in the hands of the conference committees, but may fail at the last hour. There will be a perfect flood of work completed and the smoke of action must clear away before it can be seen just what good or damage has resulted from contests now waging.

Many bills have already passed of more or less importance and are on the President's desk but have escaped the attention of the public. Even a member of Congress can scarcely keep track of measures. There is a rush of work, a hurrying of tongues and feet, and a perfect bedlam of confusion at the Capitol. And it will continue day and night until the gavels of the presiding officers fall for the last time at noon to-morrow.

IN SENATE AND HOUSE.

Final Action on a Number of Important Measures.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—In the Senate Mr. Gray was appointed an additional member of the Select Committee on Commercial Relations with Canada.

Mr. Manderson was elected President pro tempore of the Senate.

The House bill relating to the treaty of reciprocity with the Hawaiian Islands, and the House joint resolution appropriating $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River, to be immediately available, were passed.

The bill for the erection of a mint building in Philadelphia at a cost not to exceed $2,000,000 was passed by the House. The House also passed the Senate bill for the erection of a Custom House building in New York.

The Agricultural Appropriation bill was passed with amendments.

In the House Senate amendments to the Indian Appropriation bill were nonconcurred in and the bill was sent to conference.

The Senate bill granting a pension of $2,500 a year to the widow of Admiral Porter was passed.

The conference report on the Copyright bill was reported. An agreement was arrived at on all except the provision that the home copyright shall not prevent the importation of like articles from abroad.

Mr. Coon's Name Has Been Dropped.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—It is now reported that the name of Charles E. Coon, of New York, ex-Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, has been dropped from the list of those who might possibly be appointed Assistant Secretary under Secretary Foster. The reason for this move is not to be had on official authority, but it is understood to be owing to Mr. Coon's connection with the firm of Bateman & Co., the New York bankers who failed recently. The contest is said to be between two men, one of whom is Congressman John Henry Gear of the First Iowa District, who has the backing of Senator Allison. Mr. Gear was born in Ithaca, N. Y., but has been a resident of Iowa for many years. He was Governor of the State for two terms.

Senator Blair Undecided.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Senator Blair was asked whether he had concluded to accept the Chinese mission. He replied: "I have not yet decided." When told that the Chinese Minister was credited with having said that in view of Mr. Blair's anti-Chinese record the Celestial government would not receive him, he said, "It is the first I have heard of it." Asked if that would have any influence upon him in deciding whether he would accept, Senator Blair said: "I do not know."

Senator-elect Pfeffer at the Capital.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Senator-elect Pfeffer of Kansas, who defeated Senator Ingalls, made his appearance in the Senate Chamber during the day and was introduced to the many Senators by Messrs. Plumb and Ingalls. Mr. Pfeffer is here to see something of Washington and of the way the business of the Government is conducted. He will be here until June, and in that time expects to familiarize himself with the work of the different departments.

Senator Ingalls Complimented.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Mr. Gorman offered a resolution tendering the thanks of the Senate to Mr. Ingalls for "the eminently courteous, dignified, able and absolutely impartial manner in which he has presided over the Senate's deliberations and performed the duties of President pro tem." The resolution was adopted unanimously.

Five Hundred Millions Appropriated.

THE VERDICT A SURPRISE.

Bookkeeper Betsinger Sobbed Aloud and Thanked the Jury.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 3.—Nicholas M. Betsinger, who has been on trial here for nearly a week on a charge of rape, has been acquitted. The verdict was a surprise to the whole community.

Betsinger's alleged victim was an orphan, 15 years old, whom he adopted into his family, and the corroborating witness was another orphan, whom he took from an asylum in Oswego several years ago, and whom he is also charged with having debauched. He was tried last June and found guilty, but the General Term reversed the decision on a question of evidence.

When the verdict was announced Betsinger, who had previously maintained a stolid demeanor, broke down completely and sobbed aloud a fervent "God bless you" to the jury.

Betsinger, whose home is in Marcellus Falls, this county, is one of the best known beekeepers in the country, and he is the inventor of several novel and valuable devices in honey making. His trial has excited a great deal of interest, owing to his prominence as a prohibitionist and as a church member. There are three other indictments pending against him, two for rape and one for abduction.

A Prominent Society Man Arrested on a Charge of Embezzlement.

Tucker had been suspected of dishonesty for some time and he was closely watched. He was intrusted with the funds to pay off about 600 hundred hands. What specific act led to his arrest is unknown as well as the amount of his peculations.

Tucker is well known in Elizabeth, and is a prominent society man. He has always been popular and his family highly respected. He was formerly president of the Owl Club, the leading social organization of Elizabeth. He has been in the service of the Singer Company for 15 years, and was until a short time ago regarded as a faithful employe. His arrest has caused a sensation. He will probably be arraigned in court this afternoon.

The sun shown down as royally as on the launching of the Royal Sovereign last week, the multitude thronged the streets, compelling the suspension of traffic, and filled the open court in front of the chapel, where stood the statue of the modern Evangelist. SAD CHAPTER OF MISERY.

A Young Mother Crazed by Misfortune Dragged from Her Children.

NEW YORK, March 3.—A sad chapter of misery was brought to light last night in a West street hotel, where a young mother, crazed by her terrible misfortunes, left her fatherless children to the charity of the people of a foreign land.

The woman is Mrs. Annie Thomas of Wales, who, four years ago, came to this country with her husband, John Thomas, with the brightest of prospects.

The couple, with their two children, went to Salt Lake City where the husband secured employment in an iron foundry. For a while everything prospered, but the husband soon lost his place because he could not conscientiously join the Mormons. Being unable to procure work anywhere else in that place he decided to return to his native land.

But he brooded over his troubles and on his way East his mind gave way and in a moment of frenzy he jumped from the train and was killed. The poor wife with her little ones continued the sad journey.

The mother bravely bore the strain until this city was reached, but then the cord of reason seemed to snap. Last night she became violent, believing that everyone wished to shoot her and her children. She had to be torn from her children by the police and taken to a hospital. Her babe was taken with her, but the other children, three boys whose ages range from 3 to 12 years, are left to the kindness of strangers. The mother's case is thought to be hopeless.

A LOVELY QUARTETTE.

Edward Still Makes Love to Mary, Say the Neighbors, and Abram Is Afraid to Interfere—But Louise Threatens to do Some Hair-Pulling Soon.

There is still trouble on the horizon of daily life scanned by Abram and Mary Staats and Edward and Louise Wilson. The neighbors of the Staatses say that it's scandalous the way Edward and Mary carry on right under their very eyes. They declare that Wilson continues to visit Mary repeatedly during her husband's absence, and throws her kisses from the street and calls her "baby" and "girlie" and other sweet names in public. The people living in the same house with the Staatses say that the returned elopers behave so disgracefully that ere long for their own protection they will have to eject the objectionable people from the house. Abram Staats declares that Wilson has robbed him of his wife's affections, and says that he is afraid to go home nights because Wilson has threatened to break his head, and Louise Wilson affirms that Mary has stolen Edward's heart, and says she will yet pull Mary's hair. So it's a pretty fight that is promised, all around.

The following letter, from the fair defendant herself, may not be devoid of interest:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I wish with your kindness to insert a few lines in your paper to defend myself concerning the talk that has been in THE PRESS, given to me by my dear friends on my return home. I shall take the trouble to contradict the falsehood that is afloat throughout the community. I should have taken steps before, but my home duties needed my attention. I would not have known of this horrible falsehood but for my faithful friends who brought to my notice the necessity of self defense.

When such an outrageous scandal has been raised I will now state to THE PRESS that I did not desert my husband or children. They are dearer to me than all else on earth. I have stood by them through life and with the mercy of the Lord have seen them grown up to young men and women, and now such talk to be going around, it is dreadful. I did not elope with Mr. Wilson, as his wife said. I have been in the habit of going to Brooklyn and staying a month at a time with my folks. I will also deny that Mr. Wilson helped to pack my things, or go to the depot with me. Nor was I with him in Brooklyn. I deny all things that have been said. Mrs. Wilson said that I would go to her house loaded with bundles so that Mr. Wilson would help me home. That is not so. I seldom went there with a bundle. If I did it would be a very small one. I have never regarded Mr. Wilson any more than a friend.

It has also been said that I had broken up a home before. Thank God I have never broken up any home. There was times when Mrs. Wilson would send for me to come to her house, when I would not be thinking of going. Now I am getting what I was told I would get. I will admit I commenced life young as a wife, my husband being parted from his first wife ten years before I knew him. I never knew that he had been married, therefore I was not the cause of him leaving her, as I did not know him but a few weeks when I became his wife. I do not ask for any sympathy, neither do I stand in fear of my enemies or those who threaten me. My married daughter did not come to me and get down on her knees to beg me not to have anything to do with Mr. Wilson, as was said. I ask you for the sake of myself and my children to publish this so the public may know how cruely I have been lied about by one that I took for a friend, but found my mistake too late.

MRS. MARY A. STAATS.

A New Applicant but the Same Old Place.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In reading your valuable paper last evening, I was referred to as not keeping an orderly place. I will say in behalf of myself that I never kept such a place, as this is the first time I ever applied for a liquor license.

JAMES DAY,
97 West Third street.

BOLD, BAD BURGLARS.

They Not Only Stole the Assemblyman's Valuables and Best Hat, but Held a Banquet on Angel Cake and Apple Jack in His Dining Room.

The burglars who ransacked the house of Assemblyman George Kyte at Fanwood Sunday night, as was told exclusively in yesterday's PRESS, not only made a rich haul of silver ware, jewelry and other family heir-looms, but held a banquet in the Assemblyman's dining room. They left evidences of having visited every room in the house, including the apartments where the various members of the household were soundly sleeping.

Having gathered together all the things they cared to take, and packed them ready for instant flight, they brought up demijohns from the cellar, and goodies from the butler's pantry, and had a royal merry feast on cold meats, pumpkin pie, and angel cake, besides drinking up the Assemblyman's choicest applejack. One of the thieves in departing assumed proprietorship of the legislator's best overcoat and silk hat, and left damaged garments instead.

NOW FOR A STREET RAILWAY.

Superior Rapid Transit Promised for Plainfield's Principal Thoroughfares.

The Plainfield Common Council last night took an important step forward towards solving the local rapid transit problem. The Plainfield Street Railway Company, represented by President Thomas Nevins of Newark, Andrew Riker, J. T. Fritts, Elias Ward, James Jackson, John Brown and Levi Hetfield, presented an application for a franchise to construct and operate a superior street railway system over the following route: Somerset street to Front street, to Park avenue, to Sixth street, to Plainfield avenue, to Seventh street, to Monroe avenue, to Fourth street, to Grant avenue, to Front street, to Park avenue, to North avenue, to Peace street, to Broadway, to Woodland avenue, to LeGrande avenue, to Belvidere avenue, to South avenue. The proposed starting point on Somerset street, so far as the city is concerned, is at the city and borough line; but with the consent of the Borough Council the line may be extended along Somerset street through North Plainfield. The company is already incorporated, and has abundant means. The City Clerk was authorized to advertise, according to law, in the two official papers, THE PRESS and The Times, that it was proposed to grant the company a franchise to operate a railway along this route, and that citizens before whose property the cars would pass must file their objections on or before March 20, at which time the Council will meet to consider such opposition as may be expressed.

All of the Councilmen were present, but President Smith did not arrive until late, and Mr. Ginna occupied the chair.

James E. Clarkson and others presented a claim for the sum of money (about $500) found at Christmas time by Councilman Johnston in the hands of ex-Treasurer VanWinkle. The petitioners claimed that since the money had been raised by assessment on them for the New street sewer, and since such assessment had been declared illegal, the money ought to be returned to them. The matter was referred to the Committee on Laws and Ordinances.

City Judge W. R. Codington reported 67 arrests for the three months ending March 1. Of these 37 were fined and 16 committed. $205 in fines had been collected.

J. Oakley Nodyne, Overseer of the Poor, reported that $1,183.57 had been expended during the quarter in assisting 48 needy families, furnishing them with rent, fuel, clothing and food. For the year $3,886.56 had been the outlay, which was well within the appropriation of $4,000.

NEW ROOMS FOR THE COUNCIL.

The Corporation Counsel was instructed to draw up a lease with J. B. Coward for the use of the rooms for Council chamber, court room and city offices in the new Coward building at 9 and 11 Park avenue, the rental to be $600 per year, and the lease to be for one year, with the privilege of renewal for five.

Ordinances establishing a grade for Plainfield avenue, West Third, Fourth, Fifth and Liberty streets, were adopted on third reading and final passage.

BARS TO REMAIN OPEN TILL MIDNIGHT AGAIN.

The ordinance to permit the keeping open of liquor bars until twelve o'clock instead of eleven was adopted on its third reading and final passage, by the following vote:

Aye—Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts, Smith, Spangenberg—6.

No — Councilmen Ackerman, Ginna, Johnston, Rushmore, See—5.

Mr. Ackerman tried to get the ordinance put back on second reading and tabled but this opposition to its passage failed. Mr. Hetfield tried to bring up the ordinance to change the location of the hackmen's stand at the North avenue station, so that it might be disposed of one way or another and not remain as unfinished business, but only himself and Messrs. Moffett, Roberts and Spangenberg voted to take it up, and it was left on the table, perhaps to be revised and passed later, or perhaps to be killed.

The ordinance to increase peddlers' license fees was unanimously killed on its third reading.

The Council adjourned till March 9, when water-works matters will receive attention.

Thirty Colored Converts Immersed.

Very interesting baptismal services were held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Sunday afternoon, when the Rev J. W. Mitchell, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church, immersed thirty colored converts. In connection with the ceremonies he preached a sermon of much fervor and power, from the text:

Go ye therefore, and teach all Nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.—Matt. xxviii: 19.

The services were very interesting and impressive, and were witnesses by a large number of people.

ADDITIONAL BOROUGH REPORTS.

What the Committee Has Spent on Streets, and Where—Items of Disbursements and the Road Fund Pay Roll—Delinquent Tax-payers.

Following are sundry reports of the Borough ordered published in THE PRESS, in addition to those given last week in these columns:

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON STREETS AND PUBLIC HEALTH.

To the Honorable the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield.

Gentlemen:—

Your Committee on Streets and Public Health beg to report as follows: During the past Council year, just closing, we have been able to accomplish more work on the Borough streets than in any previous year of its history. This is owing to the larger appropriation for road purposes and the subscriptions of our public spirited citizens. The Street Commissioner has had a force of men at work almost continuously from the 6th of April to Dec. 5th, 1890, when work was stopped by reason of the advent of severe Winter weather.

During this time, three of our principal and much traveled streets have been permanently improved by being macadamized, namely Grove street for 3017 feet at a cost of $1,445.13, Mercer avenue and Emily street for 2499 feet at a cost of $1,333.53, Craig place 876 feet at a cost of $438.62; the expense of all this work was shared in to the extent of from 40 to 50 per cent. by the citizens and property owners directly benefited and in several instances by people who were in no way interested except that they wished to aid a public improvement. Our only comment on these public subscriptions, is that the money so subscribed should be placed in the hands of the Council at the time a petition is accepted or before the work was commenced. Otherwise the full burden of collecting these subscriptions falls upon your Street Commissioner and imposes more work upon them than they should be called upon to perform. The justice of our comment is sustained by the fact that there is now due the Borough $365 for these subscriptions.

By the macadamizing of these streets we have added over a mile of stone pavement to that which we already had. If this work is pushed by our citizens in the future as in the past three years it will not be long before our borough will have all the principal streets paved with stone without the burden of a cent of bonded indebtedness.

Other improvement work done on the streets under the direction of your Committee has been as follows; Somerset street was cleaned of all surface dirt from the city line to the Hillman bridge, in the Spring, and was resurfaced with second size stone from Hillman bridge to Green brook road; this Fall Park place, Craig place, Willow avenue, Green brook road, Vine street and Summit avenue were regraded in whole or in part, Mercer, West End, Rockview and Girard avenues, Duer and Race streets and Stelner place had their gutters cut out and were turnpiked where necessary. The old Rock road had $48.75 spent upon it in filling in washouts and putting it in a fairly passable condition. Madison avenue from the bridge crossing Stony brook to Green brook road was filled, making the approach to the bridge less steep, and had the ditches cut out; slight repairs were made to Manning, Linden and Jackson avenues and to Grove street. The cross walks have been laid at Westervelt and Brook avenues, Mountain avenue across Somerset street, and at Regent and Somerset street. The sidewalks in the Borough are in very many instances in very bad condition. In this connection we would suggest that residents of the Borough generally aid the Committee by reporting such sidewalks as they notice to be out of repair; this will greatly aid us, as it is impossible for your Committee to keep posted, as to the condition of all the sidewalks in the Borough from their own personal observation.

We would report that during the past year twenty-five notices for laying and repairing sidewalks have been sent out. All of these notices have been complied with except the following. Mr. McCormick of Grove street, Mr Elliott and Mr. Allen of Somerset street and Mr Kenny of Manning avenue, these parties not complying with the Borough ordinance, under authority of which the notices were sent out, have had their walks laid for them by your Committee and the expense thus incurred will be charged against property in next year's tax levy.

The amount to be voted for road purposes having been considered by the Borough caucus before this meeting we are relieved from presenting our commendations on this point.

In closing our annual report we would urge upon the Council the importance, not to say necessity, of macadamizing Green brook road during the coming year.

Our citizens living on this street have been paying their full share of the public burden for years, and up to the present time nothing has been done for them of a permanent nature. simple justice demands that this road be put in such a condition that these people can carry on their business and reach their houses with some degree of comfort and safety. The sum of $123.62 was expended during the year on this road in dirt improvements and we feel it safe to say that the road is almost as bad now as it was before this large sum was paid out. This will continue in the future as it has in the past unless stone is used in the place of dirt for improvement of this street.

All of the above we most respectfully submit, together with the cash exhibit hereto attached.

Fire Department Report.

Pursuance with a Resolution adopted at the regular meeting of the Mayor and Council, held June 6th, 1890, whereby it was decided to purchase 500 feet of Cotton Jacket Hose, not to exceed 80 cents per foot, and the same was purchased at 70 cents per foot, and in accordance with a Resolution offered by this Committee and adopted at an adjourned meeting of the Mayor and Council, held July 9th, 1890, it was resolved to purchase the land in the rear of the Engine House, 18 feet by 40 feet, and the price not to exceed $225, making the purchase provisional upon the size of the lot and its connection with a Public way and a clear title, which was executed and the same being paid out of Borough fund, so that the Fire Department would have a sufficient balance to meet the bonds falling due on July 1st 1891.

At a regular meeting of the Mayor and Council, held August 2d, 1890, it was resolved to order, to be assessed and collected Fire taxes to the amount of $1500, for the maintenance of the Department for the ensuing year.

Ring the Curfew Bell!

The curfew bell was no myth.

It was a summons to the people to put out the fires stop all labor and retire to sleep. It was a summons, also, which none dare disobey, for heavy penalties followed disobedience.

O, for a curfew bell at the present day!

A bell whose ringing tones should summon us to rest from work!

To rest from fret, worry, strain, push, bustle and excitement!

To rest from the wear and tear of nerve, the exhaustion of brain and intellect!

To rest from the intense, mad rush which hurries us on in the weakening, wearying, nerve-tearing brain-de-troying struggles of life.

Do you know what this means?

You professional and business men, how severe is the tension of constant and unremitting strain of thought and mind, is plainly evidenced in your weakened nerves, your trembling on excitement, your sleepless, restless nights, and utterly relaxed nervous condition after mental exertion.

You clerks and mechanics, who work all day, and yet to whom the day is not long enough in which to work, how weak you grow, how pale, lifeless, spiritless you become, how dull and tire headed, how disgusted with your work which so ill suits you in the doing.

You women, sales-girls, and you who are confined in mills and factories, how heavy is your drudgery, how wearing upon your life, how enervating to your feelings, how exhausting to your strength, how blighting to your beauty! You are often nervous, generally weak, and always tired.

Alas no curfew bell can call a halt in the world's work, but a warning voice can direct how best to overcome the nervous and physical weaknesses which such work entails. You who would be strong in nerve and brain, who would gain physical and mental strength to continue your work successfully, use as the vital restorative, the brain and nerve tonic, the giver of renewed life and vigor, that great host of all medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura. Nothing on earth will so quickly and surely restore your strength, as it is conceded by all to be the best spring remedy in existence. It is a purely vegetable and perfectly harmless remedy, and will be found at all druggists for $1 per bottle.

A Warning Stroke of the Bell.

From constant worry over business matters, I suffered from the loss of sleep, and become so nervous that I was entirely unfitted for my business, and was compelled to give up. In fact, I feared insanity. Seeing Dr. Greene's Nervura spoken of so highly, I obtained a bottle and began its use. The effect was almost magical. I could again sleep, mental composure, appetite and strength returned. Six bottles of this remedy cured me, and I have remained well to this date. I have recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura to many of my friends and neighbors, and have yet to learn of a failure to obtain good results.

COMFORTING GRANDMA.

Grandma sat in her old arm-chair,
Our baby on her knee;
Three-score-and-ten were grandma's years,
Sweet Baby Bell's were three.

The baby's tongue was chattering
As fast as it could go,
Of things she meant to have and do
When older she should grow.

"Ned says I's half-past free," she cried,
And tossed her yellow curls,
"And when I'se ten I'll be as bid
As all ve dreat bid diris!"

Then grandma's eyes grew sad and dim:
"Dear pet, when you are ten
I'll be no old I scarce can walk,
Oh! what will I do then?"

O'er baby's face the shadow fell
Of wondering, troubled thought;
But soon she brightened; she had found
The comfort that she sought:

"Why dram'ma, don't oo fink," she cried,
With baby logic deep,
"Vat when oo can't walk any more Oo'd better learn to creep."

TO SETTLE A QUARREL.

Story of a Distracted Lover Hoping for Happy Results.

The train was late and the engineer was evidently trying to make up time.

Ronald McAllister turned his face for the twentieth time to the darkened pane by his side and stared into the blackness. Now and then the shadowy form of some object showed for a moment as the car whirled along over the rails, and an occasional house dotted the gloom with its cheery lights.

But, if the truth be told, Ronald's mind was not occupied by these fleeting visions of the outer world. The glass acted as a mirror, and he could look as long and eagerly as he liked at the reflection of a dainty figure in an opposite seat.

Rather grave eyes, a saucy nose, a sweet, tired mouth, rebellious whisps of soft brown hair straying down under a stylish but plain hat; a slight, pretty figure in a simple brown traveling suit, with a weary droop that appealed to the strong young fellow and made him rebel fiercely against the social conventionalities which rose like an icy barrier between the two travelers—this is what McAllister saw in the glass.

He had been able to perform one or two slight services for the girl—had raised her window, and brought a glass of water; had heard her gentle "Thank you, sir; you are very kind;" and had caught sight of her ticket, thus learning that her destination was only one station beyond his home, to which he was returning after a hard business trip.

Their eyes had met so frequently, after this, that she had flushed, and he had been ashamed to look in her direction, lest she should think him a boor, anxious to scrape a "railway acquaintance" with the first pretty girl he met.

The tired head under the brown hat dropped until it rested on the back of the seat, where it swayed helplessly.

The train rushed onward through the night faster and faster, until the car fairly rocked as it flew around curves and over resounding bridges.

"Must get into the siding at Mooreville before No. 10 freight comes in," Ronald heard the conductor say to the brakeman as he passed out of the car.

Faster—faster. Ronald idly counted the rails and glanced at the second hand of his watch. Could it be possible? Forty-five miles an hour!

Now, fifty; and look—sixty—a mile a minute!

The tired girl could not rest in her cramped position, and, raising her head, glanced at Ronald with a quivering ghost of a smile.

He started to his feet, was in the aisle moving toward her, when—crash!

An uproar of shrieks and frightful cries, a rending of solid walls and beams, a dizzying, swaying lurch, a fierce hiss of steam—then absolute rest from motion.

Ronald raised his hand and pushed away something which was lying on his face and smothering him in the darkness. It was the warm, lifeless body of a man who a moment before had been telling a funny story to a comrade in the smoking-car, thirty feet away.

The smoker and passenger were one car now. In railroad parlance they had "telescoped."

As if in a dream McAllister raised himself up, groaned a little over a bruised ankle or something of the kind, and slowly made his way, limping, out of the wreck.

A man near by raised a lantern.

"Good for you, "he said, in a husky tone. "You've got one of them out already, haven't you?"

And Ronald looked down, and, coming gradually to his senses, realized that he was bearing something in his arms—something warm and human—a living woman.

The light of the lantern fell on her face and her brown dress. Yes, he was not mistaken. Out of that awful chaos, which was even now ringing with the shrieks of the wounded and dying, he had brought her.

He looked down into her face.

"Thank God!" he said. Then added reverently: "He has given her to me."

"Very well, sir, if that is the way in which you regard my happiness you can leave me—"

"And never return? I'll do so!"

Ronald McAllister and Ruth Jarvis glared at each other across the little marble-topped table and uttered these stinging words, their cheeks burning and eyes sparkling with anger, just eight months after they had met on that fearful night when No. 10 freight and the "Night Owl" express had collided on the S. P. & C. railroad.

It was but a slight matter, the beginning of this quarrel—a hasty word about a partner in a dance, a bit of childish jealousy, angry tones, harsh injunctions, bitter retorts, and there they stood, engaged to be married on the next New Year's day, but drifting leagues apart every moment.

It was a sultry July evening, and when Ronald dashed out of the house the northern sky showed no stars, only lightning flashes cutting with jagged gashes through heavy pues of cloud that were mounting rapidly.

"Never—never!" he muttered, as he strode along and bared his hot brow to the pelting drops of rain.

"Never!" she said, sadly, as she listened to his retreating footsteps. "I was disappointed in him. We can never be united again."

And the wind blew and beat upon that house.

Ruth Jarvis felt that her heart was breaking, not because her lover was gone, but because she felt that she ought not long for his return. He was unworthy of her love.

The sultry days of summer crept slowly by. Autumn breathed upon the landscape, like the fair daughter of Rappacini in Hawthorne's tale, and every living thing withered and died.

Winter buried its dead in deep snow and sang requiems of the northland over the white mounds.

Ronald McAllister went wearily to and from his work, yearning for one word from Ruth, the woman he had loved and wounded so grievously.

He dared not write to her, nor even look at her as they met in the street.

He had no trusty friend who could plead for him. How could he reach her?

One day as he was passing a newsstand he saw the little figure he knew so well standing at the counter. She was buying a paper, the heading of which he recognized as one of the leading journals of the city.

A thought flashed into his heart and burned there like a star of hope.

He hurried home, seized pen and paper and wrote rapidly and unceasingly till daylight crept in, gray and wan, at his window.

On his way down-town he dropped a thick package of manuscript into the letter-box.

What days of torturing anxiety followed. At last it came—the envelope bearing the imprint of the periodical. He tore it open and read:

"OFFICE OF THE COURIER—Dear Sir: Your story entitled 'Ruth's Lover' is accepted, and will be published in our issue of December 28. Inclosed please find check in payment for same."

On the morning of December 28 Ronald stood shivering at the corner opposite the news-stand. He had remained there several hours watching for her. The paper was just out containing his story. Would she buy it and read it? It was signed by an assumed name, but she surely would—ah, she is coming.

She enters the little store, purchases the paper—his paper—and turns to go out, glancing idly down its columns.

He can see her plainly in the brilliantly lighted interior of the store. She is about to put the paper in her sachel when something near the bottom of the page catches her eye. She reads it eagerly.

The newsman stares, but she does not heed him. Ronald can restrain himself no longer, but draws near, trembling with hope and fear.

In that sketch, hastily scribbled at midnight, he has told her story and his own, has portrayed the anguish of the remorseful lover, his penitence, his longing for reconciliation.

She glances up; her eyes are dewy with tears.

What face is that so near? It is his!

"Ronald!"

"Ruth—darling! Forgive me!"

And, although the notice was rather sudden, the wedding did take place on that bright New Year's day, after all.

ENVOI.

Reader, have you divined? This is my own story; this is my own paper; I am Ruth's lover. Will she see this and forgive me?—Willis Boyd Allen, in Boston Courier.

A ROOSTER HORSE TAMER.

How a Poor Hindu Fakir Overcame a Vicious Stallion.

Hindus are very skillful in taming wild animals and snakes, and an incident was related the other day by an Indian traveler of how an Indian fakir tamed in a few minutes a refractory horse that no one else could manage.

The horse in question was a full-blooded stallion, belonging to one of the Rajahs who had bought him for 25,000 rupees. The animal's favorite trick was to run backward when any one mounted him, and no amount of spurring or whipping could make him go in the direction that a good horse should go. Many famed horse tamers were hired to cure the horse of this disgraceful trick, but none succeeded. The Rajah offered £300 to any one who should break the horse of his bad habit.

An English officer who was acquainted with the Rajah told him that he knew a common fakir who was of a very inventive turn of mind, and advised him to give the fellow a trial. The fakir was sent for, and appointed a day on which he said he would positively cure the horse of all bad tricks.

The Rajah, with a number of officers and retainers, went to witness the taming. The tricky horse was handsomely caparisoned, but the fakir made his appearance in his every-day dilapidated clothes, that were dirty, as usual, for he had no others. By his side walked a ragged boy carrying a bag with something in it. The fakir said a few words to the boy and then leaped upon the horse's back with the agility of a monkey. The horse immediately began running backward. Everybody was wondering what the fakir could do, when suddenly the boy thrust his hand into the bag and brought out a wild, vicious-looking rooster with spurs three inches in length. Quick as a flash the boy fastened the fowl to the horse's tail and then the fun began. The rooster put in some fine work with his spurs and cackled and screeched as loud as he could. The horse was evidently surprised. First he stopped, and then tried to catch the rooster, as a kitten does its tail, by turning round and round. The fakir held on like a leech.

Finding this did not succeed, the horse started on a run straight ahead, just as would a dog with a tin can attached to his caudal appendage. The stallion had been conquered. That one lesson was sufficient, and he never tried to run backward again.—N. Y. Times.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

THE DRUNKARD COBBLER.

How a Confirmed Sot Was Reformed by a Poor Governess.

Mary Brunt was a visiting governess in Philadelphia. She went from house to house giving lessons to little children in the rudiments of knowledge. She was not young, nor beautiful, nor particularly clever, yet she had hosts of loyal friends, and if any of them had been asked to name a woman whose life was full, secure and happy, they would probably have named the poor governess, Mary Brunt.

Let me tell you an incident which may, perhaps, give a hint of her secret of life to you.

She lived in Germantown, a suburb of Philadelphia, and made, twice each day, the half-hour's journey on the railway which grows so wearisome to most people from repetition. It never seemed wearisome to Mary. Every day she met with some pleasant adventure. It might be only a child to pet, or some old woman who gave her a friendly nod, but these little things warmed her heart all day.

On the outskirts of the city the train passed near to Hennig's great woolen mills. A little distance beyond there was a block of old dwelling-houses which had fallen into wretchedness and disrepair, and were occupied only by the poorest poor. Ragged, dirty children swarmed about the doors, and women with coarse faces and unkempt hair stared from the windows, the broken panes of which were stuffed with old hats and rags.

In but one window of the whole block the glass was whole and clean. A curtain of the cheapest muslin, but white, hung before it. This window was in the third story of the back of the house; the train, running on trestles at that point, passed within a few feet of it. Every day Mary watched this window. Whenever the sun shone the curtain was lifted so that the light might fall upon a box upon the sill. The box was covered with a pane of glass, and Mary fancied that within it were ants or moths, or some other living thing.

One day the curtain was drawn aside, revealing a bare garret within. In one corner was a straw bed, in another a cobbler's bench; here a table, there a chair, beyond a grate without a fire. The setting, in short, for dire poverty, but—clean.

Another day a man's face appeared at the window as the train rushed by—a haggard old face, marked by lifelong dissipation. Afterwards Mary often saw the man stooping over his box or at work cobbling, but always alone. He had neither wife nor child.

Probably hundreds of people saw him as the train passed. He was no more to them than a tree or a post. But to Mary he was a human being who needed a friend. One day she left the cars at the nearest station, penetrated the house and climbed to the garret. Outside of the door was a pine shingle on which was scrawled in charcoal: "E Lex. Boots and shoes mended here."

The door stood open. The cobbler was gone, but she saw on the floor and on the wall boxes and paper cases filled with spiders—little black dots, and huge, yellow-legged monsters.

Mary went home and looked over her book-shelves. Choosing a couple of old scientific magazines, she wrapped them up, directed them to E. Lex, and sent them by mail. The next day she saw the cobbler poring over them at the window.

Throughout the winter, E. Lex received by mail every week old books and pamphlets, or clippings interesting to a naturalist. It was amazing how much information Miss Brunt found on Madam Arachne and her habits. She saw, as she flew past, that the cobbler had made a shelf on which his new treasures were carefully placed.

One day Miss Brunt, reading the morning paper, saw that Enos Lex had been run over, and his leg was broken. Lex, it was stated, had been drunk for several days, and had fallen on the track.

That evening when Mary had finished her work, she went to the great hospital at Blockley almshouse and saw Enos Lex. She often had friends in the hospital, so that the nurses knew her well.

There could be no doubt that the cobbler had been drunk for several days; nor indeed that, year in and year out, he was drunk much of the time.

Mary did not lecture him. She did not even hint at his iniquity. She talked intelligently to him about his broken leg, and after he grew used to her, about his spiders.

Lex was a Scotchman, with all the obstinacy, the honesty, the belief in his own opinions, of his race. He was a shrewd observer of spiders, and, uneducated as he was, had written two monographs concerning them which had attracted notice. But he was also a drunkard, and—worst of all—was not ashamed of it.

One day he followed Mary with his keen gray eyes as she bade him good-bye, and motioned her to stop.

"Ye're a varry proper young leddy," he said, with the patronizing tone which he always used to her. "Nae doot when I'm on the mend ye'll be tryin' to reform me. Mind what I say! Hand yer hand; it's na use."

Mary looked him steadily in the eyes, but said nothing.

The muscles of the grim face worked. "Nae use," he repeated. "When I was twenty-four I came till this country, and laid my plans high. I had my wife and bairn. I wud be a gentleman like the others. My life wud be in a big hoose. The devil got me, Miss Brunt, and made me a drunkard. They're dead that cared for me. The hoose has tumbled about my ears. There's na reason why Enos Lex should na tak' a the comfort out o' whisky that he can get."

Mary had no eloquence. She only shook hands with him heartily and went away. Doctor C—— stopped her at the door.

"You can do nothing with Lex, Miss Brunt. He's an incorrigible sot."

"Yes; but he's clean. There's always hope for a man, doctor, who hates dirt."—Darkest England.

There was hope, too, she thought, for the man who loves any living creatures, even a hideous spider.

Lex was in bed for months, during which time he could get no liquor. So much was gained. When he was ready to leave Blockley, Mary came to him.

"There is an opening for a good cobbler in Germantown," she said. "I know of a shop and room which you can rent low, and behind which is a little garden, a fine nursery for spiders!"

His eyes sparkled. "I'll tak' it," he said, briefly.

Mary brought him custom—plenty of it. She procured him admission to the library and to a free reading-room. Better than all, she sent a professor and a doctor—scientific men—to talk to him and make him feel that he belonged to their guild.

"This is my friend, Mr. Lex," she said, as she introduced him to the doctor. "He can teach you much about spiders."

The Scotchman eyed her keenly as she spoke. There was a whisky flask in his pocket. It was the first time since Jeanie died that a woman had called him her friend.

After she was gone he took out the flask and broke it. "I'll not disgrace her!" he said. "I'll mak' myself fit to meet Jeanie, God helping me!"

Mary Brunt died a year ago. There were many strangers crowded into the graveyard who were unknown to her friends. Women of the tenement-houses, poor Polish mill-men, negroes—no one ever knew what her relations to these people had been.

On the next day a tall, raw-boned old Scotchman, coarsely clothed but bearing himself with certain grave dignity, came alone to the grave and planted a root of heather ouit. It was the best he could do. He stood looking steadily up into the clear sky, and then, nodding gravely to himself, he went away. It was the man she had saved.

Why had she been able to save him? Hundreds of Christians, it may be, had looked at the wretched garret of the bloated drunkard, with hopeless pity, but Mary saw the white curtain at the window.

In every ruined life there is the bit of white, if we have eyes to see it.—Rebecca Harding Davis, in United Presbyterian.

THE BARS OF CLUBS.

They Are the Main Support of These Institutions.

When the proposition to prohibit the sale of alcoholic beverages in the Union League Club of Brooklyn was under discussion several of the members expressed the opinion that a political club could never be carried on with such a restriction.

If the practice of those clubs generally affords a criterion of what their requirements are we presume this is a sound opinion. A very great part of the receipts of the Union League Club of this city, for instance, comes from the sale of wines and liquors on every day of the week. The bar is one of the most important features of the house, and its profits are essential to the maintenance of the establishment. If it were closed on Sunday the club would not only lose a considerable revenue but the members frequenting the house, and more especially the restaurant, would be loud in their outcry against such an abridgment of their privileges. They are ready enough to advocate the prohibition of the sale of liquors on Sunday in outside bars, but they will not submit to it in a club for which they themselves make the laws. They want their drinks on Sunday as on other days.

It is very doubtful, therefore, whether the experiment of shutting up the bar of the Brooklyn Union League Club on Sunday will be more than temporarily successful, though the vote in its favor was nearly unanimous. The sort of men who attend a club with any thing like regularity are usually those who have no prejudices against drinking, and who are convivial in their temperament. They also are the members who are most influential in the affairs of the association, because they are most about the house; and even if they did not have their way the other evening, they are sure to have it in the long run. They would not join a club unless they expected to get the privilege of drinking when they pleased.

The only way to assure the permanent closing of the bar on Sunday is to shut it up altogether. The result would be disastrous to the club, probably; but if the encouragement of Sunday drinking is reprehensible, it is fully as wrong to encourage drinking at any other time. If the provision of alcoholic beverages is discreditable anywhere, it is more especially culpable in a club composed of men who profess to regard a bar-room as a disreputable place, dangerous to the welfare of the community. Proportionately to the number of their frequenters, too, the club bars make as many drunkards as any others; and they are likely to continue to do so, even if they follow the example of the Union League of Brooklyn in selling liquor on six days of the week only.—N. Y. Sun.

NEW NOTES AND FACTS.

An English mayor has signed the pledge for his term of office, because, as chief magistrate, he could not reconcile drinking himself and sending men to prison for the same thing.

The Irish question is largely the whisky question. Eleven thousand four hundred and ninety-five illicit stills have been seized in Ireland during the last ten years, against eighty in England and two hundred and two in Scotland.—Temperance.

Dr. Billroth, the great Vienna surgeon, says: "The colossal increase of nerve and mind disease in our day is undoubtedly the result, to a great extent, of the tobacco and alcohol habit, and the straining of the nervous system caused by these poisons."—National W. C. T. U. Bulletin.

"The drink difficulty lies at the root of every thing. Nine-tenths of our poverty, squalor, vice and crime spring from this poisonous tap-root. Many of our social evils, which overshadow the land like so many upas trees, would dwindle away and die if they were not constantly watered with strong drink."—Darkest England.

CANADA'S BIG FIGHT

Great Excitement Over To-Morrow's Election.

TROUBLE FEARED AT THE POLLS.

National and Religious Prejudices Aroused in a Dangerous Fashion.

The Conservatives Figure on a Majority of 57—The Liberals in High Glee and Claim They Will be Victorious—Both Sides Liberally Supplied With Money—The Militia Called Out.

MONTREAL, March 4.—The oratorical work of the present campaign is over. The opposing forces are marshaling their men for the battle to-morrow.

Sir John Macdonald, it is claimed by his opponents, will be defeated in Kingston; two to one is being laid against him. A strong appeal has been issued by Mr. Laurier to the farmers of Canada.

In all the large cities the military companies have been ordered to be ready in case of trouble at the polls. The excitement here is at fever heat.

Claims Made by Both Parties.

The Conservatives claim they will have a majority of 57, but careful observers do not believe the majority in any event will reach 20, though with unlimited means at their disposal they can "convert" numbers of electors during the last 24 hours by the peculiar methods known to Canadian politicians.

On the other hand, the Liberals are well supplied with money. Mercier, by means of the patronage at his disposal, directed the raising of a fund of nearly half a million dollars, of which $150,000 was sent to the aid of friends in Ontario, where the local government, though friendly enough disposed, dare not resort to Mercier's methods.

The Liberals are in high glee and are boasting that they will have a majority of 25.

Arousing the Voters.

National and religious prejudices are being aroused in a most dangerous fashion in the province of Quebec. The electors are urged to defeat Sir John Macdonald because his successor would be a French Canadian, and the chief organ of Laurier and Mercier claims that the present Premier is an avowed enemy of Rome and of the Catholic Church. It quotes the violent attacks of the Orange Sentinel upon Roman Catholicism, and attributes them to Sir John, chargihg, moveover, that because he cannot control the influence of the Roman Catholic bishops and the clergy here in other ways he is endeavoring to compel them to support him by the bugbear of annexation, which is one of his reasons for insisting that political union, which is opposed as a rule by the Roman Catholic clergy in Canada, must be the inevitable result of the Laurier and Cartwright policy of unrestricted reciprocity.

THE YOUNG KAISER'S PLANS.

He is Urging England to Take Part in the Triple Alliance.

LONDON, March 4.—One result of the repulse by the French of the Kaiser's offer of friendship has been to bring closer the relations between the British and German governments.

Owing to recent bereavements Sir E. B. Malet, the British Ambassador at Berlin, is prevented from taking an active share in the important negotiations pending, and the Kaiser has to deal with Lord Salisbury through Count Hatzfeldt at London.

It is understood, on excellent authority, that the Kaiser has proposed that England take part in the Triple Alliance. The Kaiser has pointed out the hostility of France to the English interests in Egypt, the Russian menace to English supremacy in Asia, and has offered the co-operation of Germany in resisting aggression in the quarters indicated, England, on the other hand, to aid the allies, at least with her fleet, in the event of war. These have been the propositions considered at several prolonged interviews between Salisbury and Hatzfeldt.

It is also understood that if the matter rested with Lord Salisbury it would be settled at once in favor of Germany, but that the Cabinet is apprehensive of the storm that might be raised in the House of Commons should such an alliance be entered into. The Liberals in the House already suspect what is in the wind and are keeping a sharp lookout on the government.

Gallinger a Senator To-day.

CONCORD, N. H., March 4.—United States Senator-elect Gallinger formally tendered his resignation as a member of the House of Representatives, to take effect at noon to-day.

Miss Garner Marries a Marquis.

LONDON, March 4.—The Marquis de Breteuil was married yesterday at Pau to Miss Garner of New York. All the Basque nobility were present as well as the civil functionaries of the towns.

THE STRONG BOX EMPTY.

Delaware is Intensely Excited Over the Big Treasury Shortage.

WILMINGTON, Del., March 4.—The sensation regarding ex-Treasurer Herbert's accounts continues. Herbert is unable to pay the State the balance due of $51,000, and his bondsmen will be sued. The total value of the missing securities is $647,440.

The State has been getting its interest regularly, so it is not thought the securities have been hypothecated or made away with. There are $365,700 in the Farmers' National Bank, in which the State holds a controlling interest, so there is no fear of losing in that direction.

When Treasurer Herbert went into office he was given a tin box by his predecessor, and that box was supposed to contain the securities now missing. But Mr. Herbert, so it appears from statements now made, never saw any of the stocks or bonds. State Treasurer Burnite says that these stocks have not been seen for 12 years. The queer fact is that three treasurers supposed that the box contained $547,440, without actually knowing it.

TWENTY-FOUR PERISHED.

Terrible Results of the Great Storm at Newport News.

NORFOLK, Va., March 4.—A death list of 24, with fears that it may go still higher, is reported from Newport News as a result of the recent great storm. Among the losses reported is that of a large sloop, capsized at the mouth of the Warwick River, about ten miles from Newport News. It is reported that fourteen lives were lost.

At the mouth of Walkers Creek, near the James River, a yacht capsized and seven men lost their lives.

It is said dead bodies floating by Newport News yesterday and last night was a common sight.

Two men who went out in a canoe are missing.

AN INSANE FARMER'S DEED.

He Dashed His Son's Brains Out and Tried to Kill His Wife.

CLEVELAND, March 4.—Delos Boswell, a farmer 70 years of age, who lives in Cooley Township, Summit County, went insane early in the morning and grabbing an axe dashed his son's brains out before the young man could raise an alarm.

The old man then rushed at his aged wife and dealt her a terrible blow, after which he tried to cut his throat. Neighbors hurried in before he could put an end to his life.

It is not believed that the wife will recover. Financial troubles unhinged the old man's reason.

Connecticut's Lively Legislature.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 4.—Both Houses of the Legislature met at noon. The House received various bills and resolutions under its determination to attempt to do business. A lively discussion occurred on the resolution paying about $300 for the expenses of the House Committee and Governor Bulkeley and his staff at the Sherman funeral. The Democrats objected to paying any but expenses of the committee. They were voted down and the resolution lies on the table under the rule of the House.

Thought it Another "Ripper" Sensation.

LONDON, March 4.—What at first promised to be another "Jack the Ripper" sensation was caused during the morning by the discovery of a woman's arm and leg, wrapped in canvass, on the bank of the Regent's Canal. Search was begun for the body to which the limbs had belonged, but later examination of the fragments indicate the probability that they are parts of some medical student's "cadaver."

Portland Wants a Baseball Team.

PORTLAND, Me., March 4.—At a meeting last night of those interested in having a New England Baseball team in Portland, a committee was appointed to select a delegate to represent Portland at the next meeting of the New England League. Subscriptions for the foundation of a team will be easily secured and a permanent organization will be made shortly and a nine placed in the field.

Wilhelm Rotten on Artillery.

BERLIN, March 4.—The Kaiser, at a luncheon attended by the artillery officers of the Guard, declared that in view of recent improvements in field and siege guns, and the experience of the last war, artillery must now be regarded as the backbone and marrow of battle.

Miss Birch Held for the Grand Jury.

BAY SHORE, L. I., March 4.—A deputy sheriff brought Miss Birch before Justice Reed during the forenoon and she waived examination. Bail was refused and she was held for the grand jury. She will be kept in custody at her father's house.

Stringing in Virginia.

PETERSBURG, Va., March 4.—The first vigorous snow storm of the winter set in at midnight and continued without intermission until 9 a. m. The snow was from six to eight inches deep. There were a number of sleighs in the streets.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS

The National Legislators Say Farewell at Noon To-Day.

THE PRESIDENT AT THE CAPITOL

He Acts on All Measures Presented to Him Up to Adjournment.

The Copyright Bill Passed This Morning. The President Signed the Postal Subsidy Bill—It is Estimated that the Total Appropriations of Congress Will Exceed $525,000,000.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The 51st Congress expired at noon to-day. In anticipation of this the National Capitol was thronged all the forenoon by visitors from all quarters of the country, each of whom seemed to be interested in one or another of the bits of legislation which was under consideration. The galleries were jammed with spectators, who eagerly watched the scenes of the closing hours.

The closing proceedings in the House were more mirthful than businesslike. Whenever a member tried to talk a perfect babel of voices greeted him, and unless his own was as piercing as the shriek of a locomotive it was sure to be drowned out.

The President followed the example of his predecessors and visited the Capitol at 10 o'clock with his Cabinet advisers and acted on the measures presented to him up to the last stroke of 12 o'clock.

The usual resolutions of thanks to the presiding officers of the Senate and House were passed.

CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW.

The Total Appropriations Will Exceed $525,000,000.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A review of the acts of the 51st Congress show that it has passed the McKinley Tariff act, the Customs Administrative act, the Anti-Trust act, the act increasing the Treasury's monthly purchase of silver to 4,500,000 ounces, the Original Package act, the Anti-Lottery act and the Postal Subsidies act. The admission of Idaho and Wyoming to the Union and the provision for a World's Fair at Chicago were also memorable incidents of the first session.

Officials of the House Appropriation Committee assert that the total appropriations of this Congress will exceed $525,000,000. They state that the appropriations for agriculture have grown from $300,000 to $3,000,000; for the Military Academy, from $300,000 to $400,000; the Indian appropriations, from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000; the Consular and Diplomatic appropriations, from $1,000,000 to $1,850,000; the Postoffice appropriation, from $53,000,000 to $77,000,000, and that the Army and Navy appropriations have mounted up proportionately.

The Appropriation Committee obtained some degree of revenge to-day by defeating the Foreign Affairs Committee on the amended proposition to aid the construction of the Hawaiian cable with a privilege of purchase. This measure was strongly insisted upon as of international importance and the Senate resisted its elision from the bill.

Invited to Michigan.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Representative Stevenson, of Michigan, will give his colleagues on the River and Harbor Committee an opportunity during the coming summer of making a personal examination of the necessity of liberal appropriations for the improvement of the great water route to the Northwest. Mr. Stevenson has invited these Representatives and others, with their wives and families, to be his guests on a trip from Cleveland to Duluth by water in July. Stops will be made at all the important points.

The Late Senator Hearst's Funeral.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The arrangements for the funeral of the late Senator Hearst and for removing his remains to San Francisco, where a public funeral will take place, are about completed. The special funeral train, which will leave here this evening or to-morrow morning, will be furnished by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. It will consist of a baggage car, a dining car, two Pullman sleeping cars and Senator Stanford's private car, the latter for the use of Senator Hearst's family.

Bills Signed by the President.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The President has signed the bill for the relief of certain soldiers of the late war and of the war with Mexico, the bill to construct a railroad bridge across the Red River at Alexandria, La., the act granting a pension to the widow of Gen. William Hoffman, the act establishing Circuit Courts of Appeal, the Direct Tax bill and the joint resolution authorizing Vice-Consul-General Scidmore to accept a medal from the Emperor of Japan.

Last Nominations to the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The President sent to the Senate before adjournment these nominations, which were confirmed: Wm. R. Leeds, United States Marshal for Eastern Pennsylvania; G. Harrison Smith, Collector of Customs at Cape Vincent, N. Y.

Senator Wilson's Successor.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A dispatch from Baltimore says that Gov. Jackson has decided to allow the Senatorial vacancy, caused by the death of Senator Wilson to remain unfilled until the State Legislature meets in January, when he himself will be a candidate for election.

No Extra Session Probable.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The President is reported as having stated to a Senator that there did not appear to be any necessity for an extra session of Congress, and that he has no intention of calling the Senate together as there is nothing requiring its attention.

The Copyright Bill Passed.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—During the morning the House agreed to the conference report on the Copyright bill. It is now in the hands of the President.

The Subsidy Bill a Law.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The Postal Subsidy bill is a law. It was approved last evening by the President.

THEY FOUGHT A DUEL.

Two Well Known Wheeling Men Settle a Little Difference With Pistols.

WHEELING, W. Va., March 4.—This city is excited over the details of a duel between two well known society men that occurred early in the morning.

The participants were James Carroll and John Hines. Carroll is in a big manufacturing concern, and the other is the son of a prominent wholesale merchant.

Both are members of the Megereon Club. The quarrel originated in the club room over a social matter. It was renewed Monday night, and Hines challenged Carroll.

The challenge was accepted. Seconds were chosen from among the club members. At 1 o'clock in the morning the party of four men met in a ravine north of the city.

The men turned back to back, each stepped five paces, turned and fired twice. Both the principals were unhurt, but the seconds stopped the fight.

The authorities are investigating the affair.

MAY SECURE A REPRIEVE.

The Mother of the Nicely Boys Prefers Charges of Conspiracy.

GREENSBURG, Pa., March 4.—The mother of the Nicely boys, whose execution is set for April 2, came here during the morning, accompanied by Mrs. Harriet Nicely, the wife of Joe.

Acting upon the advice of their attorneys, they made information against John Roach, a constable; Rufus Shaffer and James W. Ambrose, of Ligonier township, and O. Howard Camp, formerly a member of the Gilkinson Detective Agency, of Pittsburg, charging them with conspiracy. Mrs. Nicely alleges that they agreed together to falsely charge and convict David and Joseph Nicely of homicide.

The counsel for the condemned boys, Gen. A. Coffroth and Judge Hunter, believe the testimony in the case sufficient to convict. The move will doubtless be the means of obtaining a reprieve for the condemned sons.

Attorney-General Tabor's Report.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 4.—Attorney-General Tabor has transmitted his second annual report to the Legislature. It shows what moneys have been received by him during 1889, and gives the title and subject matter of all actions on appeal, pending and undetermined, and their condition at the date of the report; all actions brought for the recovery of real property claimed by the State; the title of all actions brought by him during the year against corporations, together with copies of all official opinions rendered by him during the year.

Great Boom in Ship Building.

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—The passage of the Subsidy bill reveals the fact that vast undertakings have been organized here. The Pennsylvania Steel Company will at once put in operation its vast facilities for steel ship building at Sparrow Point. The Cramps, with Jesse Seligman, will establish a $10,000,000 plant on the Delaware for steel ship building. Within two years the ship-yard facilities will be increased to such capacity that they can construct 100,000 tons of iron and steel vessels annually.

Nominations by Gov. Abbett.

TRENTON, N. J., March 4.—Governor Abbett sent to the Senate the following nominations: Law Judge, Hunterdon County, Octavius P. Chamberlain; Prosecutor of the Pleas, Hunterdon County, Harlan G. Chamberlain; District Court Judge for Jersey City to succeed Judge Dayton, John A. McGrath; Member of the Board of Managers of the Jersey Home for Feeble Minded Women, Philip F. Baker, of Cumberland.

Gov. Russell on the Sweating System.

BOSTON, March 4.—Governor Russell sent to the House of Representatives a message on the "sweating" system of making clothing in tenement houses, and recommended a full inquiry into the matter through the proper legislative committee.

Twenty Dogs Bitten by a Rabid One.

PORTLAND, Conn., March 4.—This town is agitated over a mad dog scare. Mary Percival had a shepherd dog which acted strangely on Monday, and, it is said to-day, has bitten at least 20 dogs. The authorities will immediately issue an order to muzzle all dogs in town.

Relief for Miners.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 4.—The bill to tax anthracite coal lands and to create a fund for the relief of persons injured, maimed or killed in the employ of individuals, firms or corporations engaged in mining anthracite coal has passed the House.

Burned Himself to Death.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 4.—Charles Dantremont, a prominent citizen of Angelica, N. Y., who has been partially insane for several months, burned himself to death in his barn last evening.

High Price for Whalebone.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., March 4.—Merchants here sold 1,100 pounds of Arctic whalebone in New York to-day for $5.50 per pound, which is the highest price bone has ever reached.

STRIKERS ARRESTED

Leaders in the Coke Trouble Charged With Conspiracy.

AN OPEN OUTBREAK FEARED.

The Arrests Made at the Instigation of Operator Rainey.

The Indictment Accuses the Men With Threats to Kill—Judge Acheson Grants an Injunction Against the Strikers—He Says Unless the Depredations Cease the U. S. Marshal Will Take Action.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., March 4.—Constable Chick of Uniontown has arrived here armed with warrants for the arrest of all the principal labor leaders in the coke region. It is said the arrests are being made at the instigation of Coke Operator Rainey, who is engaged in a bitter war with the United Mine Workers.

Master Workman Wilson, Secretary Martin, Worthy Forman Sloy and many others have been arrested and promptly gave bail for hearings March 13.

The indictment charges the men with committing unlawful acts, such as conspiracy to take the life of Thomas Linden, pit boss at Rainey & Paull works, engaging in riot, committing assault upon Linden and others.

The indignation of the strikers at the arrest of their leaders knows no bounds. They are making glaring threats and an open outbreak is feared. The strikers denounce the arrests as a conspiracy to rid the strike of its leaders.

Judge Acheson of the United States Court granted the injunction asked for by Mr. Rainey against the Connellsville strikers, and warning them that if their depredations are renewed the United States Marshal will be instructed to arrest all concerned.

EMPIRE STATE ELECTIONS.

The Returns Bring Many Surprises for Both Parties.

UTICA, N. Y., March 4.—The fight on City Treasurer was the hottest known in years, Patrick Griffin, Republican, defeating W. P. Fox, Democrat, by 97 majority. The present incumbent is a Democrat. The Common Council will remain Democratic, as do 4. The Board of Supervisors has been redeemed by the Republicans.

Both Parties Surprised in Rochester.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 4.—The election here was a complete surprise to both parties, neither counting on the sweeping Republican vote. The Common Council is Republican by 10 to 5, a gain of 3. This is the first Republican majority in 14 years. The Board of Education is also Republican, there being only two Democrats in it. The Republicans elect a member of the Executive Board, also City Treasurer, the latter by a small majority over Fleckenstein, the present incumbent.

A Political Surprise.

ROME, N. Y., March 4.—For the first time in its history the city of Rome has elected a Republican mayor. E. Stuart Williams was elected over George Russ. The Republicans also elected four out of five supervisors and three out of five aldermen. The turnover is complete and is a surprise to men of all parties. The normal Democratic majority here is over 300, and Williams' majority is over 600. The Democratic majority in the Board of Aldermen is cut down from five to one.

Rejoice Over the Result.

OSWEGO, N. Y., March 4.—In the charter election held here the Democrats swept the board. John D. Kehoe, Democrat, was elected mayor by 675 majority. The Democrats elected six out of eight aldermen and five out of eight supervisors. The next board of supervisors will be Republican by a narrow margin. The Democrats held an enthusiastic celebration.

Democrats Carry Auburn.

AUBURN, N. Y., March 4.—The city election resulted in a Democratic victory. The mayor, city judge, recorder, treasurer and assessors were elected by the Democrats by majorities ranging upwards of 500, for the first time in 25 years. The Democrats get a majority of the supervisors, giving control of the board for the first time in 44 years.

Saratoga's Town Election.

SARATOGA, N. Y., March 4.—At the town election the Republicans elected their entire ticket except the Excise Board. The Democrats elected the clerk, who has held office for two consecutive terms, was defeated. The result of the election is a big surprise, the rest of the county towns are Republican by the usual vote.

The Results in Erie County.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 4.—Twenty-five Erie County towns elect Democratic supervisors and Republican supervisors. This gives the Democrats a majority of 18 in the County Board of supervisors, a gain of 8 over last year.

Ulster County Elections.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 4.—The town elections throughout Ulster County resulted in Democratic victories. It is probable that 18 Democrats and 8 Republicans have been elected to the Board of Supervisors.

Republicans Elect Their Ticket.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., March 4.—At the charter election held here the Republicans elected their entire ticket. The city council will stand 7 Republicans and three Democrats.

Board of Aldermen a Tie.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., March 4.—In the charter election held here the Republicans elected the Mayor by 80 per cent of the city ticket. The next Board of Aldermen will be a tie.

THE SHERMAN DIAMONDS.

The Famous Collection to be Sold at Private Sale.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 4.—The famous Khedive diamonds, the collection of magnificent jewels sent by the ruler of Egypt as a present to Miss Minnie Sherman in honor of her illustrious father, when she was married to Lieut. Thomas W. Fitch in 1873, are to be sold. Mrs. Fitch says the death of her father nullifies a promise made directly upon the receipt of the jewels, an agreement that the diamonds were never to be transferred from the keeping of the family while General Sherman lived.

The Khedive diamonds, although given absolutely to Mrs. Fitch, were divided among the General's four children. Each part footed up in value to about $35,000, the whole collection equaling in value a sum a little less than $135,000.

Although appreciating highly the honor the gift bestowed upon the family through their father's military and civic greatness, and the prestige given to the owner of the famous jewels, Mrs. Fitch said the whole collection would soon pass out of the keeping of the Sherman family.

Mrs. Fitch said her reasons for disposing of the diamonds were in no way influenced by her husband's business misfortunes in connection with the Braddock Wire Company.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—All of Peck's fine dress linings have been reduced in price.

—If you don't find it at Edsall's, you need not look elsewhere for it in Plainfield—in dry and fancy goods.

—Delegates to the convention at Trenton will report at the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday at 4:15 P. M.

—Notices of Sunday services must be sent in each week for publication on Saturday. THE PRESS does not "repeat" the old ones of the week before.

—"They're the best in the country, for the money," say Doane and VanArsdale, when referring to their $2 shoe for ladies, as advertised in another column.

—An interesting programme of readings arranged by Mrs. Fernald, will be a special feature of the meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms, Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

—Miss F. A. Weeks, the sole agent in this city for the sale of the celebrated Wilcox & Gibbs automatic sewing machine, has removed her place of residence from 95 East Front street to No. 10 Grove street. Miss Weeks is an enterprising agent, and sells a machine that is deservedly popular among households where it has been introduced.

—A long-felt want in every family is at last supplied by Dobbins's educational and scriptural cards, which, through the medium of a pleasant game, acquaint young and old with the succession of the books of the Bible and familiarize them with the number of their chapters. In an advertisement elsewhere are stated the places where these cards are for sale. Buy a pack and convince yourself of their interesting and instructive features.

—The Salvation Army is doing an excellent work through its Reform Hall meetings, and those who have been in the habit of visiting the place to scoff are beginning to receive the punishment they deserve. One disorderly fellow has just been sent by Judge Codington to the county jail for sixty days for disturbing the meetings, and other similar righteous verdicts will follow if the lesson of this arrest be not heeded.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

John W. Murray and wife, of Central avenue, are home from Winter Park, Fla. They have been absent about a month.

Clarkson R. Hope, who has been very ill for the past seven weeks, is still confined to his home although somewhat better.

The very youngest heir of the pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, a boy of a few days old, has already been named Henry B. Richards.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger T. Murray, of Madison avenue, have returned from an enjoyable Southern trip that included St. Augustine, and Savannah.

The Rev. W. J. White, a returned missionary from China, where he has labored for the past eight years, will speak at Park Avenue Baptist church, this evening, at 7:45 o'clock. All are cordially invited.

Mayor Gilbert may veto the recently passed ordinance permitting barrooms to remain open for business until midnight. If so, the same vote that approved it can pass it over his veto. It only requires a majority of the Council to overcome the objections of the Mayor.

As THE PRESS said was probable, the heirs of ex-Mayor Job Male have not agreed to consent to the provisions he made on his death bed for the Unitarian church, public library, etc., nor will they allow any such division of the property. An effort will therefore be made in the courts to have the unsigned will probated.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany, of this city, was one of the twenty-eight earnest women representing 25,000 of their sex in this State, who waited on Gov. Abbett, yesterday, and urged him to use his influence, not only against the passage of the race-track bills, but also against the proposed legislation to permit the sale of liquor on Sunday.

A Plainfielder's Protest.

Among those who have appealed personally to the special legislative committee at Trenton, to kill the proposed race-track bill, is Thomas W. Moore of Broadway. In his speech he said that only people living in the neighborhood of race-tracks can form a just opinion of their evil effects on a community. The spread of gambling in such neighborhoods is appalling. He added that the Elizabeth delegation, whom he accompanied and for whom he spoke, represented thirty churches and 10,000 people whose sole opposition to the new racing and book-making bills was because they have daily under their eyes the wrecked homes, thefts and defalcation caused by this dreadful craze of gambling on horse racing.

A Wedding To-night.

A quiet home wedding is to take place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Neighbor, East Front street, this evening. The happy man is their son "Doc", of Westfield's Jersey Central station, and the bride is Miss Belle Scott of Newark.

SIDE BY SIDE FOR SIXTY YEARS.

But At Last the Aged Wife and Husband Come to the Parting of the Ways.

Several days ago THE PRESS published exclusively the information that an aged couple were dying under peculiarly distressing circumstances at Oak Tree, a small village on the line of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, just outside of Plainfield. The brief record of facts in THE PRESS was copied into the New York papers, one of which has elaborated it into the following interesting story.

Three miles to the east of Plainfield is a battered and rambling old farm-house. It shows in its curious outlines that it had its beginning at least a hundred years ago, and that many years must have passed since the last addition was made. It is the household of a family named Noe. The first Noe came down from the neighborhood of Rahway shortly after the Revolution. He bought this farm and saw sons and daughters, grandchildren and great-grandchildren gather about him before he died. His second son was John Clarkson Noe. He was born Aug. 26, 1803, and, when his elder brother died, he as eldest son inherited the farm and the family home.

While the century was still in its youth a young girl used to come from the neighborhood of Madison to visit at a farm-house near the Noes. This girl was Catherine Biker. John Clarkson Noe fell in love with her, and on Dec. 10, 1831, they were married. When John Clarkson told his father that he intended to marry pretty Kate Biker, the old man, who dated back to the French and Indian wars, built another house not far from the homestead and moved into it. He gave the homestead to John Clarkson Noe in which to bring up his family.

So John Clarkson Noe and Catherine Biker joined hands, and started life together in the house where he was born. There were no churches nearer than Plainfield in those days, and John and Catherine used to have the preacher come and stay at their house, and meetings were held first in the parlor, and then in the orchard. Soon a little settlement sprang up and called itself Oak Tree, because a great oak spread its branches in the midst of it, and then a church was built.

At first John and Catherine went to this church alone on Sundays. Soon there were three in the party and finally it took a whole pew to accommodate the family. And as these children grew the husband and wife grew older. A few gray hairs came in their heads. The freshness of youth passed from them, but for each other they were the same as of old. And as the years passed the five children grew up into stalwart boys and gentle girls, married, and settled in the neighborhood and had families of their own. Thus in time they all departed, leaving John and Catherine alone as at first. After a while, however, the man, grown old, and needing help, had his second son, Alexander, come to live with him. Alexander had married and had children, and once more the old farm house was alive with the music of young voices. But the old man did not give up the farm. He and his son worked it together.

Ten years ago John and Catharine sat down on Dec. 10, their wedding anniversary, and, looking back over fifty years of serene and peaceful life together wept as their children gathered about them. He was 78 and she was 72. But life was not done for them yet. Nine years passed, and the Summer of 1890 found them still side by side, still strong and vigorous. When the harvest-time came the old man went to the fields, as in the days long gone, and worked with his boys and with the hired men. Last December they celebrated their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary. Children and grandchildren and great-grandchildren filled the house and thronged about the old couple.

Two weeks ago last Sunday the old wife fell ill and went to bed, never to leave it again alive. The cold of the Winter had been too much for her strength. When he saw his wife dying the husband, too, fell sick, and they laid him in a bed in the next room, the bed in which his father had died. But each day he arose and sat in his great armchair and was pushed in to the bedside of his wife.

Last Wednesday the old wife was much worse, and at the same time the husband grew worse. The household wondered which would die first. That day the old man was pushed into the room for the last time. They placed the chair close to the bedside of the dying woman. "How do you feel today, Katie?" he said. But there was no look of recognition. So the old man leaned over and kissed her softly and said, "Good-by, Katie; good-by." Then they pushed him into his own room. It was the last leavetaking. The journey side by side for fifty-nine years was side by side no longer. At 11:30 o'clock the next morning the wife died.

They thought that he, too, would die that day, but the iron strength of a constitution built up in a simple and quiet life sustained him. Friday they told him that his wife was dead. Since then he has eaten nothing and can hardly be persuaded to take the medicine the doctor has left. He lies with his face to the wall and speaks little. Any one who enters the room suddenly finds him weeping. He is alone at last and his children cannot comfort him. The physician says he can live but a few days.

The old wife lies in the Hillside Cemetery. It is a new lot, and she lies alone. But not for long. Her husband will probably join her before the week is gone, and then the two who dwelt so long together in peace and serenity will sleep the untroubled sleep on the hillside forever.

IS COUNCILMAN SEE BACK OF THIS?

An Effort to Repeal the Landlord's Sewer Bill by an Act Giving the Plainfield People the Right of Choice, is Being Opposed by Someone in the Dark.

A dispatch to THE PRESS from Trenton, last evening, says: "The House wasted a solid hour of valuable time this afternoon with a bill intended to give Plainfield a new sewerage system. The bill is a general one, and empowers Common Councils to make sewerage contracts without the consent of property-owners. This phase of the question was taken up by Mr. Potts, who handed up an amendment making the consent of one-third of the property owners along the route necessary."

Further information was to the effect that Councilman See, of this city, had inspired Mr. Potts's antagonism. Why Mr. See should adopt a course so entirely in the interest of the landlord and against the interests of the people, is difficult to understand. If the bill as amended by Mr. Potts, be enacted, the land owners and landlords only, will decide whether the city shall have sewers or not. Though the great majority of Plainfield's taxpayers should want sewerage, and though the Council should be unanimously in favor of it, yet the city must go without until "one-third of the property owners along the route give their consent."

Therefore Plainfield would go without sewerage forever, probably. It is natural to suppose that the landlord would say to himself, "If sewers are put in they will cost me a lot of money for house connections and sewer rates, yet I will not probably get one cent more rent. I shan't consent to anything of the sort."

That's the kind of a bill Mr. Potts would make of it. Is Councilman See really aware of what he is doing?

FROZEN TO DEATH, OR KILLED?

An Unknown Man Found Dead in a Deserted Logging Camp.

The body of a strange man, supposed to have been murdered, was found in a deserted logging camp on the banks of the Passaic river, near Millington, at dusk Monday evening.

Three farmer lads had been spending the afternoon along the river, hunting muskrats. They took their prey into one of the log huts of the old camp to remove the pelts. In rummaging about the hut to find material to build a fire, they stumbled over a prostrate form. The boys ran home and told the story of their adventure. Their tale was discredited, and not until yesterday morning was the hut visited by the villagers. Then it was found that the body was that of a man apparently thirty-five years of age, 5 feet 6 inches in height, with a short-clipped mustache. He was dressed in a suit of ordinary ready-made clothing.

The first supposition was that the man had frozen to death in the intense cold of Sunday night. Examination, however, indicated that he had been dead several days, and severe bruises about the head gave color to the theory of murder. The body was left lying amid the dead leaves on the floor of the cabin, with the snow drifting in upon it through the crevices of the logs. Millington is in the heart of the mountain region north of Plainfield, and news of the discovery did not reach this city till late yesterday afternoon. Then farmers from beyond Washingtonville drove over the rough mountain roads looking for a coroner. They were told that the Morris county authorities were the proper parties to notify.

The Soloists of To-morrow Evening.

The second of this season's subscription concerts by the Plainfield Choral Society under conductor E. J. Fitzhugh, will be given at Music Hall, to-morrow evening. The programme will consist of "The Crusaders," part songs and the Prayer, from Lohengrin.

A young protegee of Mr. Fitzhugh's who is yet an amateur unknown to fame, will sing the soprano song in the latter selection. Wm. Lavin, tenor, and Carl Duft, basso, are the other imported soloists.

Death of a Good Wife and Mother.

Sarah B. Clarkson died at the home of her husband, Thomas J. Clarkson, 21 Orchard place, Monday. She leaves four children. Mr. Clarkson is the janitor of the Franklin and Stillman schools, the pupils and teachers of which especially sympathize with him in his bereavement.

Took a Dose of Paris Green.

J. B. Platt, who claimed to be a native of this city, committed suicide in Onondago, N. Y., Monday morning. He had been for several months employed in building the new plant of the Dover (N. J.) Electric Light Company. He took his life by swallowing a dose of Paris green.

—Men who want to know how to keep well, should hear the talk to be given by Dr. Hedges, at the Y. M. C. A. to-morrow evening. Admission free.

IN MEMORIAM.

Thomas Worth.

In the death of Thomas Worth the community has lost one of its most respected citizens. Few of the business men of Plainfield can boast of a business established and continued in one spot for so long a period, and none perhaps have been more careful observers of the rapid change and progress of the city during the last few years. It seems quite impossible for one so closely related to the deceased as the writer to give a fair estimate of his character, and yet my own admiration is so generally shared that I am not reluctant in expressing my convictions.

There are three relations that a man sustains to his fellows: the commercial, the domestic—broadening into the social, —and the religious. The points of contact of these various relations are the mart, the home and the church. It is impossible to get the true measurement of men until we have considered them in these three relations. What are they at the store or shop? What are they at the fireside? What are they in the church. Consider one of these questions to the neglect of the others, and your judgment at the best is distorted. It is, alas, too true that integrity behind the counter does not always mean affection at home. On the other hand, suavity in the parlor frequently breaks out into brusqueness in the street; and the devoutest saint on Sunday is the biggest rogue on Monday. Many a fulsome epitaph would be wiped from the tombstone of the man it memorialized if the whole truth could be told.

The character of Thomas Worth will not suffer by the application of this threefold guage. In business he was a self-made man in the highest sense of that term. He was honest and faithful. He was scrupulously exact. He was unflinchingly fair in every transaction. If the plumb-line of business integrity could be brought to bear upon his commercial dealings during the last thirty years I doubt not they would be true to the perpendicular. He was steadfast to a fault. "One thing" was his motto, and while hundreds were caught in the maelstrom of wild speculation and seductive investments, he kept true to the rock of that "one thing". In the home he was affectionate without affectation, generous without lavishness, genial without display. He loved children. He never allowed the advancing years to chill the buoyancy of youth in his own nature. The husband and father that keeps the life warm with young sympathies and the heart throbbing with young impulses is a light in any home whose brightness when once extinguished can never be replaced.

In the church he will be missed, not as a teacher in an official sense, not as a character of dazzling brilliancy, not as a man whose Christianity was the synonym of religiousness in an agressive or prominent way. But he will be missed as a quiet and yet earnest Christian man whose loyalty to his Master dates back to the Winter of 1873, when the writer so well remembers how deeply the truth as it is in Christ took root in his heart.

I have said these things with no desire to eulogize vainly, but I have said them because they are true; and while thoughts of the past are thronging into the minds of friends I desire to weave this little tribute into the chaplet that adorns his memory.

CHARLES E. DUNN.

Albany, N. Y.

The Protest of the Women.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

At a meeting of the Women's Temperance Aid Society, held in Reform Hall Sunday afternoon, Feb. 15, the following resolutions were read and adopted by a large audience there present:

Whereas; we believe the continuance of the liquor traffic in our midst is in direct opposition to the church, the home and all measures put forth for the uplifting of the people and the glory of God.

Resolved—That a church member who has vowed before God that he will not cause his brother to stumble, cannot vote for this curse on humanity and continue true to his vows, because the word of God distinctly commands: "Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing."

Resolved—That we ask you in the name of suffering women and children to give no sanction to this monstrous evil which is hanging over homes and hearth-stones, and, in the exercise of the discretionary power and authority vested in you by law, you do not grant any licenses for the sale of intoxicating beverages in the city of Plainfield for the year 1891.

Nominal Divorces for Scrupulous Catholics.

A bill affecting the divorce laws of this State is in the hands of the Governor and needs only the Executive signature to go on the statute books. It seeks to make divorce easy and palatable for a class of persons who have hitherto regarded it with abhorrence.

The bill allows a "nominal" divorce to be granted when the Court of Chancery is convinced that an absolute one could not be granted without wrecking the petitioner's conscience. The bill is intended for scrupulous Catholics who dread excommunication as the church's punishment for obtaining a divorce. The "nominal" divorce decrees that the respondent shall have no further right to bed and board with the petitioner. Infidelity or desertion are the only causes for which it can be granted.

ORATOR HAINES ON THE SUBJECT.

Plainfield's Silver-Tongued Temperance Advocate Views the Late Battle, from Chicago.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I have taken a very great interest in the matter of "more saloons" in Plainfield and the movement of the pastors and others looking to the non-granting of any additional licenses; and have endeavored to keep posted by having the papers sent me during my long absence.

I presume it is known by most of the residents of Plainfield that I am opposed to any license whatever for the saloon. I firmly believe that it is not only wrong to do sin, but that it is also wrong to consent to sin.

I am specially interested in the figures as given by Dr. Lewis. Plainfield is called "an eminently Christian city," and more than once, since I became a resident, have I been asked why there are so many saloons? I have had to reply in the language of one of the Common Council, "We want the revenue;" I said, "shame!" then, and I say "shame!" now. Furthermore I believe Plainfield has the power to prevent it whenever Plainfield wishes to do so.

For one year we had no license—not because we so intended, but so it was.

Had the conditions as they then existed been recognized and acted upon by the better portion of the citizens, I verily believe that "no license" might have continued to be the policy and condition of the "favored city of homes."

The saloon went to the polls—where it always goes—and it got what it wanted. It will continue to get what it wants just so long as the opponents of the saloon neglects to fight it on its own ground. I recognize the fact that there are not enough members of churches—even should they all vote one way—to constitute a majority, and I regret that it is so.

In my long journeyings I have endeavored to keep both my eyes and ears open, and think I can speak with some degree of confidence. Therefore I feel free to remark that whenever one hundred (100) of the leading citizens of Plainfield are ready to make the fight, and will meet the saloon on its own ground, resolved to fight it to the end, being thoroughly convinced that there is not room enough for even one saloon—then, within a twelvemonth, will the last one of them be closed.

The United States Supreme Court says: "There is no inherent right in a citizen to sell intoxicating liquors by retail. It is not the privilege of a citizen of a State, or of a citizen of the United States."

Notwithstanding this, our Common Council say "for seven hundred ($700.00) dollars you may open a saloon." And a very natural query arises, "Who is responsible for our Common Council?"

To the best of my knowledge they are elected at the polls, and the saloons vote per quantity instead of quality—ie, majority instead of principle.

Yes, Mr. Editor, I firmly believe there are enough Christian voters to control legislation in our city on the liquor question.

Suppose they make the effort, just once. I can see but one remedy, either in Plainfield or elsewhere: Viz: Prohibition, with the Gospel behind it. We surely cannot hope to do what has never yet been done, viz: protect the saloon with one hand—that is to license it—and destroy it with the other—ie, petitioning the Council not to grant any more. And if the Common Council have the right to say, Mr. Smith may sell liquor upon the payment of a sum of money, why should they deny the right to Mr. Baker who is willing to pay the equal sum of money? Surely, Mr. Baker's claim is just as great and as valid as Mr. Smith's.

If the business of selling rum is right, had not one man—any man—as full privilege to embark in it, as any other man?

Why not supply the demand? Take "all the revenue" possible. Have not the men who live in the alley, as much right to get their beer as he who lives on the avenue to get his wine? Or vice versa?

If 15 saloons are good and for a consideration we welcome them to our "eminently Christian city," why is it, that 18, or 20 even, would not be better?

But; if the saloon is bad; if it is a curse, an intruder that destroys peace, happiness and home; why in the name of suffering humanity, why license it at all?

If it must (as some say) exist, why not let it be located up some dark alley, where the air is foul, and where the patron must sneak and bide his time to elude the officers of the law?

I can see but one consistent course, and some day I am sure the Christian citizens of Plainfield will vote that the "saloon must go" and then it will go. May God speed the day!

Sincerely,

S. A. HAINES.

Chicago, Ills., Feb. 28, 1891.

Her Father Founded Columbus.

Caroline Eudora Sullivant, who died at her home, corner of Crescent avenue and Second place, Sunday, was a daughter of the late Jacob Huestis and Ann Louise Sutton of New York. Her father was the founder of the city of Columbus, Ohio, at which place the deceased will be buried to-morrow. Interment will be made beside the body of her late husband, William S. Sullivant. The Sullivants were new comers to Plainfield. A son, Thomas, resides on Putnam avenue.

The death of Mrs. Sullivant was very sudden, and occurred from rupture of the heart. She retired in seemingly good health Saturday night, and was found dead in her bed Sunday morning.

KEYS KEEPS THE SEAT.

What Counselor C. A. Marsh Said, and Allen McDermott's Rejoinder.

Monday afternoon at Trenton the special committee on the Keys case heard arguments upon the matter in the Senate chamber.

Craig A. Marsh, Esq., of this city, counsel for the contestant, Charles A. Reed of North Plainfield, spoke first. He made a logical and direct speech, which went at once to the heart of the subject. The legal residence of William J. Keys was, he showed from the evidence, in New York until the Fall of 1889. After reviewing all the testimony he begged the committee to lay aside all partisanship and consider the case on its merits. "I know," said he, "it requires moral courage of a high standard for a man to lay aside his party claims at such a time as this to do what conscience says is right and duty demands, but this is a memorable occasion in which it will be a grand thing to do right." He made a fine argument throughout, but it was no use.

Allen McDermott, Esq., who had spent his time in the Assembly chamber listening to the race-track discussion, came in when Mr. Marsh closed, and spoke briefly.

He said the Republicans were acting in the matter only as partisans and, having no grounds, the committee should seat Mr. Keys.

The committee rendered a minority as well as a majority report, the next day. The majority report was from the Democratic members of the committee. They said the only question in the case was as to the legal residence of Mr. Keys. The evidence in the case led committee to believe that Senator Keys was eligible at the time of his election, and that the charges to the contrary were unfounded. The minority report recommended that the seat of Senator Keys be declared vacant. After a sharp debate the majority report was adopted.

A Newspaper Man's Qualifications.

(From The Chicago News.)

To be a good reporter these qualifications are necessary: Health, the news instinct, a sense of humor, the ability to write a simple style in a legible hand, eternal vigilance, temperance, amiability, patience, determination and ambition. Then, furthermore, it behooves the reporter to be a constant student and reader, informing himself fully on every variety of subject that interests mankind. For the profession of newspaper reporting we have the highest regard, and we find pleasure in this opportunity of saying that from the companionship of newspaper reporters we have derived incalculable profit, for of all classes and conditions of men (excepting, perhaps, the printer), the newspaper reporter seems to abound most liberally in wit, humor, invention, generosity, good nature, patience, pluck, fortitude and those other qualities and accomplishments which do much toward brightening and bettering human life.

Sound Suggestions to the State Delegates.

At the State Convention of Young Men's Christian Associations, at Trenton, the other day, President William D. Murray, of this city, spoke of the social side of the association work. His opinion was that the entertainments should be given by men and for men only. It is desirable to find out as much as possible about the young men who attend the social entertainments, and if they appear to be sufficiently interested, to invite them to the prayer meetings. He was opposed to turning a social meeting into a prayer meeting at its close. He thought the two meetings should be made separate. It is very useful to gather together in social gatherings the members and committees, not so much for the entertainment, as for the ultimate end of bringing young men to Christ.

Frank Bergen's Latest and Very Best.

Counselor Frank Bergen, President of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, is a noted bookworm, and his law office is the Mecca to which every canvassing agent for a new publication is sure to make a pilgrimage. Frank rarely sends any of them away discouraged if the book they are trying to sell is really a meritorious work. Sometimes, however, he loses patience and then comes an eruption like a volcano. Mr. Bergen was particularly riled the other day, when an agent asked him to buy a copy of Stanley's book "In Darkest Africa." "I take no stock in it!" roared the lawyer. "It was a foolish expedition to find a man who did not want to be rescued." And after thus expressing himself Frank tossed back the volume contemptuously to the agent, who beat a hasty retreat.

A SAVING APPARITION.

The Vision Which Saved a Son from Drink.

When Jack Harding entered the "Evangelical Alliance," early the first of January, Granville, the bar-tender, was polishing the mirror with a piece of chamois skin.

Not to seem in a hurry he paused at the radiator and watched the operation.

The "Evangelical Alliance" was the swell saloon of F., and was so named by its proprietor after the election at which the people had voted to increase the annual fee for liquor selling.

The election had been hotly contested. On the Sunday night prior the churches had closed and held a union meeting at the rink at which Hon. Tullius C. Double had spoken most eloquently, and at each polling place one of the pastors stood and distributed tickets and admonition of this tenor: "High license, yes," and the saloons were beaten, and so Thomas Swan had paid an even thousand dollars for his license, and had his windows marked in elaborate gold letters.

It was very early, and the "Alliance" was not dressed for the day. All the glass and silver was in confusion upon the bar to be polished and replaced on the shelves and brackets presently. A black boy was chopping ice in the dark corner back of the ice-chest. Two women on their knees were wringing out soft cloths from pails of hot water and wiping up the ashes and spittle from the tiles—but it was beautiful; a symphony, or rather more, perhaps, a fugue in marble, mahogany, onyx, cut glass and silver, to say nothing of it at its best, at night, by electricity, with the bar in perfect order, in its wealth of color, light and shade, and vocal with complacent voices.

When Granville had "done" the mirror and snapped the ladder together to pass it to the black boy, he faced Jack Harding who had waited by mighty will and at an awful expenditure of nerve—for he was a gentleman and didn't intend even a bar-tender should know how his whole being called for drink. "You don't look well, Mr. Harding," he said.

"Good God, you ought to see the inside. Give me some whisky," said Harding, startled by the greeting into being frank.

"A little absinthe," said Granville, balancing "the little priest" in his hand.

"Yes, thanks." Jack raised it toward his lips eagerly—looked at the great mirror, as the manner of drinkers is, started—and set the liquor down untasted. His face was ghastly.

"What is it?" said the bar-keeper, apologetically looking sharply at the rejected drink. "It's only a piece of charcoal off the barrel," and he reached for a silver spoon.

"No, it isn't that—don't speak my name—it is my mother," his eyes were wide staring at the mirror as if watching the approach of some one behind him.

The bar-keeper took a seltzer syphon and sent a jet whizzing into the glass of whisky and said: "Drink that, quick it will help you."

Harding's face brightened a shade as he seized the tumbler, raised it to his lips—put it down untasted and left the room.

Granville put the drink aside reflectively. Jack Harding has never looked across a bar from that day.—John G. Wooley, in Union Signal.

GENERAL BREVITIES.

THE New York Sun mentions a drunkard in that city forty-five years old who has a drunken father seventy years old, and a drunken son twenty-two years old. Alcoholism and heredity.

IT is not generally known that under the high license law of Nebraska, known as the Slocumb law, "treating" is prohibited. Section 32 says: "The person offering or accepting a treat is liable to a fine of ten dollars or ten days in jail."

THE Chicago Inter Ocean estimates that a saloon-keeper can live and even get rich if he has twenty "regular customers." Of course, says the Boston Traveller, the list has to be recruited often, as when the old customer gets to be a bum his patronage is no longer profitable. It is then that the boys of the family are gathered in.

AN Irishman remarked about Scotchmen in Ceylon: "They never were at home but when they were abroad; and when they came out to Ceylon they ate and they drank, and they drank, and they drank, and they died, and after that they had the audacity to write home and blame the climate."—Union Signal.

THE German spelling for beer is bier. In English a bier is a frame or carriage for conveying dead bodies to the grave. The step from beer to the grave is very short. * * * In appearance the beer-drinker may be the picture of health, but in reality he is most incapable of resisting disease. A slight injury, a severe cold, or a shock of the body or mind will commonly provoke an acute disease, ending fatally.—Scientific American.

A PAPER on heredity read at the annual meeting of the American Social Science Association credited forty per cent. of drunkards directly to inebriate ancestry and twenty per cent. to insane and mentally diseased parentage, so that sixty per cent. of all inebriates are "launched into existence freighted with diseased tendencies and impulses which burst into activity from the slightest exciting causes." What a legacy for more than one-half of our children.

"GOD hasten the day," says Frances Willard, "of a scientific motherhood that will build into her child before and after birth the beatitudes of wholesome appetite! Then will alcoholic drinks gurgle into their normal home, the gutter, instead of bespattering the temple of God; and tobacco will send the smoke of its torment from the bottomless pit where it belongs, rather than from that holy place, the organs of human speech and the cradle of that heavenly rainbow—a human smile. But we must begin with the babe in arms, for the grown-up man is 'up in arms' at the mere mention of such a revolution."

DARING ROBBERY.

Valuable Jewelry Stolen and No Clue to the Thieves.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., March 4.—A very daring and clever robbery was committed in this city between 6 and 7 o'clock last evening, by which W. E. Cross, jeweler, lost goods to the value of nearly $1,000.

It appears that while Mr. Cross was at tea, and while an electric light was burning in the front window of his store, a thief climbed through the transom over the rear door of the establishment and passing through the store went to the show window and robbed it of 12 gold watches, a tray of rings and a bracelet set with a small diamond. The thief did this while hundreds of people were passing the store. It is customary for the jewelers of this city to close their stores at 6 o'clock, as was the case with Jeweler Cross.

When Mr. Cross returned at 7 o'clock to place his most valuable goods in the safe he discovered the robbery. No clue to the thief or thieves has been found. The rear door of the store was found open.

The Mafia Murder Trial.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., March 4.—The trial of the nine Italians, supposed to be members of the Mafia, is the sensation of the day in the Crescent City, and the testimony elicited on the trial is being followed with the closest attention. The evidence introduced thus far points conclusively to the active participation of the four men, Scaffedi, Bagnetto, Politz and Monasterio, and the evidence has been given in so straightforward a manner as to commend its reliability.

The Late Oliver Hoyt's Will.

NEW YORK, March 4.—The will of Oliver Hoyt, late of Stamford, Conn., has been filed for probate in the Surrogate's office. Nearly $100,000 is left to benevolent institutions. The Methodist Missionary Society gets $20,000; Wesleyan University, $25,000; Cornell College of Iowa, $10,000; New York East Conference, $5,000; New York Conference, $5,000, and the American Bible Society, $10,000. Mr. Hoyt left a very large estate.

Effect of French Tariff in England.

LONDON, March 4.—The trades treaties committee has issued a report declaring that the proposed French tariff is an act of industrial hostility toward England, as it will practically prohibit exports to France by imposing 34 per cent. duties. The chief sufferers, it is claimed, will be textile manufacturers.

Cleveland and Blaine Favorites.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 4.—A poll of the Missouri House on preferences for Presidential candidates resulted as follows: Cleveland, 35; Palmer, 10; Boies, 7; Gray, 1. Eleven were non-committal and 11 against Cleveland. The Republicans were unanimous for Blaine.

Four Years for Perjury.

BROCKTON, Mass., March 4.—In the Superior Court John McCarty, formerly a shoe manufacturer, was before Judge Braley for sentence on the charge of perjury in the insolvency court and was given four years in the State prison at hard labor.

Broke Up in Disorder.

MONTREAL, March 4.—A mass meeting of Conservatives was held during last evening in Drill Hall. Before half the speakers announced had spoken the large crowd became unruly and were charged by the police. The meeting broke up in disorder.

Suspended from the Ministry.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., March 4.—At the Bowman Evangelical conference the Revs. Heil, Haman, Smouyer and Sampson were suspended from the ministry for bringing charges against Bishop Esher when they knew he had been examined and exonerated.

The Cremation Was Secret.

PITTSBURG, March 4.—The remains of Emma Abbott were secretly cremated in this city. The ashes were taken to New York and placed in a vault.

Mrs. Burke-Roche Granted a Divorce.

WILMINGTON, Del., March 4.—The Court granted a decree of divorce to Mrs. James Burke-Roche, giving her the custody of her children.

When You and I Were Boys.

When you and I were boys, old friend,
The world was bright and new;
Our pleasures were so plentiful,
Our sorrows were so few,
And whether spring-time breezes shook
The blossoms from the trees,
Or parching air of summer bore
The drowsy hum of bees;
Or whether autumn frosts cast down
The brown nuts from the bough,
Or winter snows were falling, we
Were happier than now.

Such fragrant flowers never bloom
As those we gathered then—
Wild roses from the green road-side,
Sweet-Williams from the glen;
The summer skies are not as blue,
Nor summer days as long;
No wild-bird voices now as sweet
As was the red-bird's song,
When 'mongst the op'ning poplar buds,
In those dear, balmy Junes,
He feasted on the honied sweets
And trilled his merry tunes.

Such peerless nuts and berries now
Are never seen, I trow;
Such paw-paws as we garnered then,
Now surely never grow.
The games the children play at school
Are not like those we played,
Around the ancient log school-house,
Within the forest glade.
The gray wood-moss is not as soft
As that our bare feet trod,
Nor is the grass as green as when
We gamboled on the sod.

Of sassafras and slip'ry elm,
We went in mad pursuit;
We scoured the woods for young beechdrops,
The grapevine's tender shoot,
Our faces stained with berry juice,
We played as Indian braves;
And many were the mullein stalks
We laid within their graves.
We waked the echoes far and near,
With boyish shout and noise—
Ah, those were glorious days, old friend,
When you and I were boys!

When you and I were boys, ah me!
Though we may fondly yearn,
Those perfect days of long ago,
To us will ne'er return;
For Father Time has placed his mark
Upon your brow and mine,
And 'midst the glossy raven locks
Some threads of silver shine,
And though we wealth and honor gain,
And taste matured joys,
We'll miss those halcyon days of youth,
When you and I were boys.
—Toledo Blade.

My Baby.

For thy dear sake, my little one,
I stifle many a bitter sigh,
For thy sweet life I count it gain
My cherished wishes to deny.

Oh sacred trust, my baby fair,
How can I count thy worth to me;
Salvation for my erring soul
In thy clear eyes I daily see.

Dear little arms that cling and twine
Around thy mother's lonely heart;
Dear little hands laid in my own,
God grant that we may never part.

Sweet little voice, and broken words
More eloquent than songs of love,
A spell is in thy lowest tones,
That lifts me into realms above.
—Annie Russell, in N. Y. Ledger.

When Woman's Rights have come to stay
Oh, who will rock the cradle?
When wives are at the polls all day
Oh, who will rock the cradle?
When Doctor Mamma's making pills,
When Merchant Mamma's selling bills,
Of course 'twill cure all woman's ills.
But who will rock the cradle?

When mamma to the court has hied,
Oh, who will rock the cradle?
She has a case that must be tried,
But who will rock the cradle?
When Captain Mamma walks her decks,
When Banker Mamma's cashing checks,
When all our girls have lost their sex,

His Light Put Out.

He had worn a colored blazer on the Nile;
He had sported spats in Persia, just for style;
With a necktie quite too utter, in the streets of old Calcutta, he had stirred up quite a flutter for awhile.

The maids of Java thronged before his door,
Attracted by the trousers that he wore,
And his vest, a bosom venter, shook Formosa to its center; and they hailed him as a mentor by the score.

On his own ground, as a masher on the street,
He outdid a Turkish pasha, who stood treat,
He gave Shanghai girls the jumps, and their cheeks stuck out like mumps, at the patent leather pumps on his feet.

But he called upon a Boston girl one night;
With a necktie ready made, which wasn't right; and she looked at him, this maid did, and he faded and he faded, and he faded and he faded out of sight.
—Tom Masson, in Clothier and Furnisher.

Her White Apron.

I've seen her pearly shoulders gleam,
In ball-room toilets each a dream.
I've seen her in her Lenten gray
And in her habit ride away.
But in that spotless apron white,
Domestic, dear, she's my delight.

I love her when all fresh and fair
She bids good morning on the stair,
In pretty gown, becoming, neat,
With dainty slippers on her feet,
And with her apron, white as snow,
Tied on in a bewitching bow.

Those floating streamers tucked and laced,
How close they wind around her waist.
And see her dimpled knuckles rest,
Contented in the pockets' nest.
Ah, when that apron white she wears,
I thank my stars they're narrow stairs!
—Lulu W. Mitchell, in Good Housekeeping.

Fate.

"The maiden I'm to marry," the dreamy poet said,
"Must be as fair a flower as nature ever knew;
Her soul must be as holy as the heavens overhead,
Her love must be as boundless, and her eyes must be as blue.

"Her smile must be as sunny as a summer's afternoon,
Her voice must be as gentle as the sighing of the breeze,
Her lips must be as ruddy as the reddest rose of June,
And her kisses even sweeter than the honey of the bees.

"Her figure must be fashioned in a dainty, graceful form,
Her mind be mild and peaceful as the calm, unbroken sea,
Her thoughts must all be tender, her heart be kind and warm—
Such a maiden I'm to marry," was the poet's revery.

But the maiden that he married had eyes of swamp-like green,
Her voice would shame a fog-horn, and her golden hair was red;
Her sunny smile meant business, and she made him shirk the scene
And quit his blasted foolishness, and earn his daily bread.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL WAYS.

Rev. Dr. Meredith Interestingly Describes Them.

How the Largest Sunday-School in the Country Is Housed—Music, Teachers, the International Lessons and Chinese Pupils.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Rev. Dr. R. R. Meredith is an authority on the modern Sunday-school. Perhaps he is the most generally recognized authority in the country. His commanding influence in Sunday-school work dates back from a dozen to fifteen years. In Boston his weekly exposition of the International Lessons filled Tremont Temple winter after winter every Saturday afternoon. When he left the Hub two or three years ago for Brooklyn large offers were made him to remain and devote himself to that work altogether.

Since he became pastor of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church, in the City of Churches, great audiences of Sunday-school workers have gathered every Tuesday evening to hear his discussion of the lesson for the succeeding Sunday. Without regard for denominational lines, people of all creeds and of both sexes fill his enormous normal class, which thus becomes, probably, the most forceful agency in the country for the training of Sunday-school teachers; Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists alike finding matter of interest in his clear-cut, luminous and intensely practical Christology. Question and answer fly fast, and persons especially interested in Sunday-school work often come long distances, even from other States, to attend.

Dr. Meredith's Sunday-school connected with the Tompkins Avenue Church is one of the largest in the country, numbering over two thousand. With the very large branch school belonging to the Park Avenue Church and presided over by an assistant pastor, there is brought under his supervision probably the greatest number of Sunday-school pupils influenced by any man in any country.

These circumstances give especial interest to his opinions on Sunday-school methods, the more so that the quarters occupied by his Sunday-school—the success of the Tompkins Avenue Church having compelled it to put up new and imposing buildings—are called the most modern, best arranged and most carefully considered with respect to their uses of any Sunday-school rooms in the country; they are, indeed, the last word in the Sunday-school architecture.

"What is now the approved method," I found opportunity to ask him a few days ago, "of housing a Sunday-school? Does experience favor one large room or a considerable number of smaller ones?"

"Both," he answered. "The well regulated modern Sunday-school of any size requires the one large room for preliminary assemblage and the smaller rooms for class work in the different departments.

"In our Sunday-school we have the large main hall with ante-rooms, and about it on three sides are the class-rooms. These are of half the height only of the large room, so that we get two stories or tiers. All the partitions are arranged to shove up and down or to one side, and all are on a line with the eyes of the superintendent, so that when the school opens every thing is thrown into one great assembly chamber, without barriers to sight or to hearing. Afterward the partitions are drawn and each class has full liberty for its own work, and the children can ask their questions aloud instead of whispering.

"This separation is absolutely necessary, for the teachers ought not to have less than forty-five minutes with the older pupils, while twenty or twenty-five minutes is enough to tire the little ones.

"In my Sunday-school we have on one side, off the main floor, one large room for the primary department, which includes what people used to call the infant classes, that is children who have not yet learned to read. We throw all these into one great class and teach them together. They have rising seats arranged in concentric semi-circles, so that all may see the blackboards. We give them object teaching to interest them and call out their intelligence, and we make great use of large colored cards and pictures."

"At how early an age do you think it profitable for a child to come in?"

"Many mothers bring children of three and sit with them. I approve of this because the child's mind thus opens from the very first amid the right surroundings. The Sunday-school room seems homelike to it, and there is a good deal of value to be attached to these first impressions on the consciousness.

"The room above the primary department belongs to the juvenile department. Children are transferred to this just as soon as they can read. They remain in it until they are twelve or thirteen years old. The juvenile department occupies one room only, but it is divided into thirty-five different classes under as many teachers. It is the aim to keep the classes small so that each pupil may get individual attention. Some classes include as many as twelve children but the most not above nine. For my part, I think eight about the best number.

"The room is furnished with thirty-five tables and each class gathers with the teacher about one of these.

"The floor of the main Sunday-school hall is given to the intermediate department, broken into seventy-four classes of young people from twelve to seventeen or eighteen years. This also is furnished with tables supplied with maps, reference books, etc., and about these sit classes and teachers.

"All the work of the Sunday-school library is attended to outside the session. We do not allow any running about of librarians to distract attention.

"One side of the Sunday-school hall opens, as I said, upon the ante-rooms, and about the other two sides are the Bible class rooms. There are two stories of these, twenty-eight in all. The rooms vary in size, accommodating from forty down. Some of the classes are mixed, in others the sexes are separated; this is as circumstances dictate; we have no rule. Some of the classes are taught by men, others by women; the largest mixed class is taught very successfully by a young man."

"The large majority of Sunday-school teachers are women?"

"No, a full half of mine are men; I have just about as many men as women right through the school."

"But before we drop Sunday-school architecture, let me say that the present general arrangement of Sunday-school rooms was originated by a Dutch architect of Akron, O., whose name was Snyder. He planned the first modern Sunday-school for Louis Miller, of the Chautauqua Association, when Miller was settled at Akron about twenty years ago. Snyder's ideas have been greatly developed and modified, and I myself have introduced conveniences he never thought of, but for the main outline now followed by all progressive city schools the credit belongs to him.

"Many Sunday-school workers do not agree with me, you understand, as to the advisability of keeping the primary department all in one great class or as to having the little ones present with the older scholars at the opening of the school. Some would divide them for more individual teaching, and would have their rooms wholly separated and would almost make of them a separate school with separate administration. But I believe in getting for a short time all pupils together, for the sake of the esprit de corps, and to let the little ones fully realize that they belong to a great body."

"What do you regard as a Sunday-school teacher's most essential qualifications?"

"A teacher must have average intelligence and common sense; more than this is desirable but not necessary. The one thing that can not be dispensed with is the consecration to do something for God. It is not that you do it for your own soul's sake or even that you do it for the good of the children, but that you do it for God. This carries every thing else with it; whatever you do for Him you must do well, and so the consecration carries with it the study, the constant effort, the concentration of the powers."

"You do not attach importance, then, to the 'higher education' of Sunday-school teachers?"

"I have had in my school at the same time a comparatively uneducated working woman and a brilliant young man fresh from college, and the woman went far beyond the other in the results she obtained because her heart was warmer to the work; if the college man had had her fervor and had then added to it his education he would, of course, have been more efficient, than, as things stood, was either of them.

"You can't stand out for classical scholarship; I've got to have two hundred and eighty teachers and if I have that number of classical scholars in my congregation I don't know where to lay hands on them.

"But Sunday-school teaching is growing all the time more and more intelligent. The Sunday-schools have fully purged themselves, I think, of the complaints that used to be lodged, and in some cases with justice, against them. I attribute this largely to the public schools. Such a public school system as that of this country trains a body of clear-headed, intelligent citizens.

"The International Lessons, against which so much has been said, have also a good deal to do with it. With all their disadvantages the lesson sheets give the average teacher far more than she would be in any way likely to get for herself. They do such a preliminary work of study and exposition that she has no excuse for going before her class without full, intelligent comprehension.

"The International series has won its way. Not a religious paper in the country would dare ignore it, and the secular press finds itself obliged to give it progressively more and more attention."

"In your Tuesday evening normal class do you mark out courses of reading for teachers in Oriental history and customs?"

"No; some of the teachers do so themselves for their pupils. My aim in popular exposition is to make the Bible practical. It is not worth the paper it is written on except for what it can do for us to-day. I don't care any more about what happened to Jesus than I do about what happened to Julius Cæsar except so far as Jesus is a living force to enter into our lives now; boys and girls must take Him home and have Him with them Monday morning."

"What do you think of present methods of teaching the Chinese in Sunday-schools?"

"I can not say any thing about them except as I have seen them in one city, Boston. There I was for some time familiar with the work of Miss Carter, who had as many as two hundred and sixty under instruction. She went about among the poor laundries and so entered into the lives of the poor creatures that they felt toward her as to a mother, and they came to her with every trouble. She did infinite good; but she was a very judicious woman and very careful in her selection of teachers.

"I do not believe the present system of assigning a teacher to every Chinese pupil can be changed; the Chinese can not be taught in classes. But the teachers should be mature women, not young girls. When a Chinaman makes love to his teacher, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred it's the teacher's fault. She could have inspired him and ought to have inspired him with very different feelings. She needs tact and—years."

"Has there not been a marked advance of late in Sunday-school music?"

"Indeed, yes; off in the wilderness somewhere there may be schools still singing 'Hold the Fort,' and other such jingle music matched with nonsense words, but all the new music is of a much higher order. In our school we use the 'Laudes Domine,' teaching the children the same hymns that are sung in church and prayer meeting."

"The superintendent's position must be becoming, in the larger schools, of more and more importance?"

"In no long time the superintendent will be engaged at a high salary to give his entire time. Then instead of assistant pastors we shall have pastors' assistants. The superintendent will be such an assistant, and if he is, as he ought to be, the best business man in the parish, five thousand or six thousand dollars will not be too much to pay him. He will work throughout the week among the congregation for the Sunday-school. The South Church in New Britain, Conn., has a salaried superintendent, and the practice is sure to be followed. City Sunday-schools are becoming great and complicated organizations."
ELIZA PUTNAM HEATON.

Indians as Smokers.

Every Indian worships tobacco. Give the Sioux a sufficiency of beef and tobacco and there will be no more war between them and the United States. They do not get any tobacco from the Government in these days, so they sell what little else they do have, and with the proceeds procure cigarettes and tobacco. It used to be that the red man was satisfied with dried red willow bark, but he has been civilized very materially, and now insists on the best brands of the most thoroughly cultivated and manufactured weed. Some of the older fellows still mix the willow with their smoke—they prefer the Kinnick-Kinnick—but the younger men take the tobacco straight. Their love for cigarettes amounts almost to a passion, and yet the Indian is master of the situation. He can smoke enough cigarettes to kill every dude on the face of the earth, go on the war path for a couple of months and starve, and yet turn up with a physique that seems uninjured. The suggestion that unlimited cigarettes were cheaper than soldiers thus falls to the ground and becomes valueless.—Washington Star.

The Speed of Thought in Dreams.

During the Franco-Prussian war a telegraph operator was receiving a press dispatch concerning a battle that had just occurred, in it Prince Bismarck's name was frequently repeated. Worn out from three days and two nights' continuous service, without sleep, the poor operator took down the "Bis" of the old warrior's name and then fell asleep. In his sleep he dreamed that he visited the scenes of his childhood's days; went hunting with some Indians; had a great deal of sport, passing through an experience that would take days to perform, and finally, after returning from the chase, and during a dispute over dividing the game, he woke in time to hear the instrument click out the final syllable of Bismarck's name and succeeded in making a complete copy of the message. At the rate of about forty words per minute (the average at that time,) the operator could not have slept more than the 44-100th of a second; only during the time that the middle letter of the name was being recorded by the instrument!—St. Louis Republic.

Wonderful Progress.

"Is Cumbell progressing in art?"
"Tremendously. A year ago he had a studio; but now he has an atelier."—Puck.

"CONFIDENCE BEGETS LOVE."

CHILD. "Gran'ma, kiss me good-night. Sister is asleep, but we so love to hear you tell of all the ladies that call you Mother."
Mrs. PINKHAM. "Yes, darling, when you are older perhaps you may do as I have done."
CHILD. "Everybody loves you, gran'ma; I wish everybody would love me."
Mrs. PINKHAM. "Everyone will love you, my child, if they can confide in you."

The above dialogue tells its own story; even the little child, without knowing why her grandmother is so universally loved, sees in her face a light of intellectual sympathy that satisfies her. That sympathy has extended itself all over the world, for wherever civilized women exist, Mrs. Pinkham is known and reverenced. Send stamp for "Guide to Health and Etiquette."

LINGO FACES A JURY

Mrs. Miller's Alleged Assassin on Trial for His Life.

CHALKLEY LECONEY PRESENT.

The Murdered Woman's Husband the State's First Important Witness.

The Direction of the Cross-Examination Creates Surprise—It Seemed to Throw Suspicion on Miller—What the Defense Expect to Prove—Trial of Sadie McMullen, the Akron Murderess.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 5.—Francis Lingo is on trial for his life. The murder of Mrs. Annie Miller on Sept. 25 last, near Matchtown, following, as it did so closely upon the termination of the great Leconey trial; the dangerous connection of Lingo with the latter, and the rapidity with which suspicion was fastened upon him for the former, led by a natural sequence of events to his arrest. Then, as now, he made dogged professons of innocence.

The court room was packed with people who came from the surrounding country. Among the auditors was Chalkley Leconey, the man who escaped with his life on a charge of murdering his niece. He shared with Lingo the eager scrutiny of the crowd. Leconey is well aware that the public believes that the murder of his niece lies between himself and Lingo, and to him Lingo's conviction means to a certain extent his own vindication. Lingo is a negro of medium size, strong and thick set. His face is one that a stranger would distrust. His defense is an alibi.

Judge Westcott said he would produce witnesses to account for Lingo's movements from the time he left Thomas Young's farm, where he worked up to noon of the day of the murder, until 4 o'clock of the day of that afternoon, when he returned to work. Lingo's counsel also declared that the piece of new flannel belonging to Lingo's shirt was torn the day before the murder while Lingo was passing through the woods.

Out of a panel of 48 a jury was soon obtained, when Assistant District-Attorney Ridgway opened for the prosecution. The first witness called was the murdered woman's husband.

His Examination Creates Surprise.

He swore that he left her at home and started for a neighboring farm. When he returned at 9 o'clock his wife had started for Moorestown. He drove into Camden for a load of coke and did not return until 4 in the afternoon. He drove to the station several times that evening, but his wife did not return. The next day he instituted a search, and her body was found in the woods near Merchantville.

Lingo's counsel, ex-Judge Westcott, held Miller under a fierce fire of cross-examination for over an hour. The witness grew very much embarrassed at times. When asked when he was in the woods where his wife's body was found, Miller answered quickly:

"I was not there on the 25th."

"I did not ask you whether you were in those woods on the day of the murder. Now why did you volunteer the statement that you were not there?" asked Mr. Westcott.

The witness could not reply. The direction of the cross-examination excited surprise, as it seemed designed to throw suspicion on Miller. He will probably be called as a witness for the defense.

THE AKRON MURDERESS.

Sadie McMullen on Trial for a Horrible Crime.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 5.—The trial of Sadie McMullen, the Akron murderess, has begun here before Judge Lewis in the Supreme Court. Pale, slender, self-possessed, and dressed with simple taste, with her luxuriant brown hair flowing loosely over her shoulders, pretty blue-eyed Sadie walked into the court room to be tried for her life. She is a little creature, though almost a woman in years. There is nothing about her face in repose that indicates a murderous spirit, nor yet insanity.

The officer who had her in charge led her directly before Judge Lewis, where her lawyer, E. A. Hayes, of this city, and counsel, Major E. O. Farrer, of this city, and H. L. Steiner, of Akron, had seats. District-Attorney Quinby represented the people.

"What is the plea?" asked Judge Lewis.

"Only not guilty," was the reply.

So it appeared that the special plea of insanity was not to be made. However, this does not prevent the defence proving insanity if possible.

The crime for which Sadie McMullen, who is only 17 years of age, is to be tried, was one of peculiar and provoked atrocity. On Friday evening, Oct. 31, 1890, Sadie, then living in Akron, enticed Delia Brown, aged 6, and Nellie May Connors, children of the neighborhood where she lived, to go with her for a walk. They went in the direction of the New York Central Railroad trestle over Murder Creek. Miss McMullen dragged the children to the middle of the trestle, and after a fearful struggle threw both off into the creek. The dead and mangled body of the Connors girl was found several hours later. Her body was cruelly bruised and her brains had been dashed out by striking the stone abutment.

Little Delia was found a few feet away breathing painfully. She miraculously escaped being killed. She lingered between life and death for several weeks and finally recovered. After throwing the children from the trestle Miss McMullen went to a bridge in the rear of Brown's saloon and jumped into the creek. Simon Brown, the father of the girl she almost succeeded in killing, heard her cries and saved her life.

Veteran Republicans to Meet.

BOSTON, March 5.—Stephen M. Allen, the presiding officer of the Worcester convention, held July 20, 1854, in which the Republican party was formed, has issued a call for a meeting of the Republicans of Massachusetts, to be held in Tremont Temple on April 15. The meeting is to be a free and open one, for individual expression of sentiment, and such recommendations as shall be thought best for the use of the Republican party and the people of the State and the Nation.

Looking After State Legislators.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 5.—For the first time in a week the full vote of all parties was brought out in the balloting to-day for United States Senator. Five ballots were taken. The last, the 140th of the session, resulted: Palmer, 101; Streeter, 97; Oglesby, 6. Five members, three Democrats and two Republicans, are very sick. They occupied couches near the Speaker and were attended by physicians.

Escaped from a Burning Building.

BOSTON, March 5.—Ex-Councilman Robinson's dye house at West Roxbury was burned by a fire which was discovered at 1:20 p. m. The loss on building, stock and machinery is roughly estimated at $100,000; insurance about $38,000. Over 100 men and women were employed in the place, and there was considerable alarm among them when the fire was discovered and a rush was made for the nearest exit. All got out safely.

NORWALK, Conn., March 5.—George N. Hamilton, station agent for the Housatonic Railroad at Winnipauk, has disappeared, taking with him quite a large sum of the company's funds. The Kemp-O'Connor Race Off.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Wm. O'Connor telegraphs from Toronto that Kemp's backers have forfeited the $500 deposit for the single-scull race with O'Connor, and the race is off. O'Connor says he will not enter the race for $1,000 with Hanlan, Teemer and Gaudaur. He is ready to row anybody for $5,000 a side and the world's championship.

CANADA'S ELECTION

Both Parties Working Hard to Win To-Day's Battle.

THE LIBERALS ARE HOPEFUL

A Reduced Tory Majority Would be the Death-Knell for the Administration.

The Feeling Among the Mass of the People is Intense—They Believe the Industrial Future of the Dominion Will be Determined by To-day's Struggle. Politicians in a State of Uncertainty.

OTTAWA, March 5.—Reports received here from the principal towns in the Dominion say that the election is passing off quietly.

The polls in this city are well manned by both sides. Each party loudly boasts of an assured victory, but both are really in a state of uncertainty.

The Liberals expect not less than 17 majority in to-day's elections, while the Conservatives claim that they will have 57 majority. A Liberal majority of 17 would be a loss of 33 seats to the government. This is the exact number that they lost in 1874.

The feeling among the mass of the people, as well as among the politicians, is intense. Nobody of any sense on either side believes that annexation cuts a figure in the fight, but every sane man believes that the industrial future of Canada for many years will be determined by to-day's voting if the result should be decisive. An indecisive victory for either side would only prolong the struggle.

A reduced Tory majority would really be the death knell of the Macdonald administration.

There is considerable excitement over the discovery that Sir Adolph Carron, as Militia Minister, has given orders to keep B Battery under arms at the Citadel throughout the day. People are naturally asking what this is for, and why Quebec is thus declared in a state of siege, no violence being anticipated from any quarter, except, perhaps, from the ruffians in Quebec West, with whom the civil authorities are thoroughly competent to deal.

MADAGASCAR'S MONSTER.

He Slaughtered Three Hundred Persons in a Horrible Manner.

LONDON, March 5.—Later advices from Madagascar show that the horrible massacre attributed by a sea captain arriving at Marseilles to the French Governor of Nossi Be, was, in fact, perpetrated, by the Hova Governor of an isolated province of Madagascar.

The Governor, Ramiastra, was provoked because a petition had been presented against him to the central government, and he perpetrated a most cruel massacre of nearly 300 men, women and children, slaughtering the victims in a horrible manner, with many tortures. He compelled those he spared to build a monument with the heads of the victims.

The central government has taken steps to bring the monster to justice.

Bills that Were Vetoed.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—In the 50th Congress President Cleveland vetoed 161 bills and joint resolutions, while in the 51st Congress President Harrison vetoed only 11. Among these were the following: Act for the erection of public building at Bar Harbor, Me.; to authorize Oklahoma City to issue bonds to provide a right of way for the Choctaw Coal & Railroad Company through Oklahoma City; act to establish a record and pension bureau in the War Department and to create the present head a colonel in the army; act for the relief of the administratrix of the estate of George B Lawrence.

CONNECTICUT'S TROUBLE.

Communications from Gov. Bulkeley to the Senate Not Received.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 5.—In the Senate Senator Thayer introduced a resolution instructing the doorkeepers not to admit to the floor of the Senate any secretary of Morgan G. Bulkeley.

The "whereas" to the resolution recites that "one Austin Brainhard has repeatedly disturbed the proceedings of the Senate by appearing with communications from Morgan G. Bulkeley, who assumes to be Governor of Connecticut, and is trying to force recognition of his claims by the Senate. After the resolution had been defined by Mr. Thayer and opposed by Senator Clarke, on motion, the former was laid on the table in order to give several Senators who were absent an opportunity to be heard.

Governor Bulkeley sent a communication to the Senate which that body refused to receive, and which its clerk deposited in the waste paper basket. He appointed Frank Day of Brooklyn, reappointed Joseph Allsop of Middletown, the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, members of the State Board of Agriculture.

DOUBLE SUICIDE.

Terrible Deed of a Young Philadelphian in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O., March 5.—Ernest Salinger and Isidore Fraenthal, students in the Hebrew Union College, entered into a compact to end their troubles by suicide, and shortly after 1 o'clock in the morning they were both found dead at their boarding house, No. 495 Race street.

The young men purchased a revolver yesterday with which to accomplish their self-destruction. Salinger shot himself in the left side just below the heart. Fraenthal then used the weapon and fired a bullet through his brain, dying instantly.

Salinger was 21 years old and lived in Philadelphia. Fraenthal was 19 and his parents reside in St. Louis.

MADE HIS WILL IN A TRANCE.

An Attorney Tries to Prove that the Testator Was Hypnotized.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., March 5.—During the trial of the Wordin will case here Attorney Judge Stoddard, who appears for the contestants, made an effort to prove that the testator was hypnotized when he made a will.

It was during the examination of Henry E. Stainford, who seems to have had a wonderful influence over Dr. Wordin, whose relatives are now seeking to prove was not in his right mind when he made a will leaving many of them out in the cold. The witness made the remarkable statement that he could, in a measure, read Mr. Wordin mentally.

He said that when Mr. Wordin came to see him he always knew before a word was spoken what was up. He further stated that all he had to do was to touch the testator and the latter would become subservient to the witness' will. The witness, in reply to questions by Mr. Stoddard, said he knew nothing about hypnotism or mesmerism, and that he exercised this influence over the testator simply because the latter trusted implicitly in him.

The evidence was listened to with great interest. It is probable that Stainford will be recalled and questioned further concerning the strange influence he had over Mr. Wordin.

STABBED IN SCHOOL.

A Boy Drove the Blade of a Penknife Into a Companion's Back.

KEYPORT, N. J., March 5.—A stabbing affair which may prove fatal occurred at the graded school here while the school was in session. Allie Richardson had an ill feeling against John Johnson. While Johnson was seated in school they quarrelled. The woman teacher did not see them.

Richardson drew a pocketknife and drove the blade into Johnson's back. The blade went through his clothing and two inches of it entered the flesh. The blood began to flow freely and, falling to the floor, Johnson screamed. This startled the school.

Prof. Arrowsmith was called in, and he at once sent Johnson to Dr. J. E. Arrowsmith, who dressed the wound.

Richardson has been expelled from the school. Nothing else has been done with him.

BOULANGER BLAMED

He Concocted the Plot Against the Empress Frederick.

LORD SALISBURY IS INCENSED.

It is Said He Will Expel the French Exile from British Territory.

Failure of a Scheme that Would Have Brought on a Crisis Between France and Germany—Mare Trouble in Buenos Ayres—Parnell Talks to the Workingmen of London—The Prince's Poor Health.

LONDON, March 5.—It is reported in official circles that the British government has conclusive proof that General Boulanger and his supporters concocted a plot which resulted in the explosion of public opinion against the Empress Frederick. Lord Salisbury is said to be greatly incensed, and proposes to expel Boulanger from British territory.

Boulanger is believed to have inspired the assaults in the Boulangist press upon the Empress, and to have planned even greater insults than was actually directed to her. Had the precise hour of departure been known the Boulangists would have made a demonstration that could not have failed to bring about a critical situation between the two governments.

Boulanger has thus made himself odious to Germany and to England, where the Empress has always been popular, while France offers him only the asylum of a jail.

England has always been a refuge to political exiles, and how eager is counted astone, but it is quite another thing to harbor a men actually engaged in plotting against a neighboring and friendly nation. As Boulanger is not a British subject, the government has entire discretion, so far as order him out of the country. Should such a step be taken, the French conspirator would probably be without a friend in Parliament.

THE PRINCE WAS SHOT.

Another Scandal and an American Singer Figures in It.

LONDON, March 5.—Some excitement has been caused by the publication by a weekly journal of a story connecting a young and talented American singer with the death of Prince Baudouin of Belgium.

It was stated that the heir to the Belgian throne was calling upon the singer one evening after the opera in Brussels, when Prince d'Ligne, whose chateau is near Mons, unexpectedly entered the room. Some words ensuing between the two gentlemen, the Prince, who considered the presence of young Baudouin unwarrantable, drew a revolver and shot his rival in the lungs. From the effects of this wound he subsequently died, after being removed to his residence.

Queen Victoria's Drawing-Room.

LONDON, March 5.—The drawing-room held by Queen Victoria at Buckingham Palace was notable for the unusually large and brilliant attendance. This was due to the presence of the Empress Frederick of Germany, and the desire upon the part of courtiers and others to show sympathy with the Empress after her recent unpleasant experience in Paris. Every member of the royal family now in England made it a point to be present, and, as the court is now out of mourning, the drawing-room was one of the most successful ever held in Buckingham Palace.

Parnell Talks on the Labor Question.

LONDON, March 5.—In an address in this city Mr. Parnell devoted himself to the labor question and the course of Parliament regarding the question. He said he deplored the spectacle of the English Liberal party taking the active leadership in a movement to prevent labor from obtaining its just rights. When Mr. Parnell mentioned the name of O'Brien it was loudly cheered. The speech, in Liberal opinion, was the beginning of an attempt to detach the English labor classes from Davitt, who has heretofore enjoyed a monopoly of Arrests in Buenos Ayres.

BUENOS AYRES, March 5.—There is considerable excitement in financial circles here, and fears are expressed that there will be a run upon a provincial bank. The difference which took place between Prudente Pelligrini and the managers of the private banks, the President having declined financial assistance for his government, has proved fruitless. The 2 per cent. tax on private bank deposits was to be repealed if the bankers came to the government's assistance.

German Manufactures and the World's Fair.

LEONARD JEROME'S DEATH.

He Was Famous as a Clubman, Financier and Turfman.

LONDON, March 5.—The funeral of Leonard W. Jerome, the well-known New York clubman, speculator and turfman, will take place to-morrow.

The body, after being embalmed, will be conveyed by a special train this evening to this city, where a private funeral service will be held in Grosvenor Chapel at 12 o'clock to-morrow, Canon Lee officiating. The casket will then be conveyed to Kensal Green and temporarily placed in the mortuary chapel that held the body of young Abraham Lincoln. It will rest there until Mrs. Jerome has somewhat recovered from the effect of the shock, when it will be shipped to America, accompanied by the widow and the members of the family.

Mr. Jerome had been in ill health for more than a year past and spent most of his time at various sanitary resorts both in England and on the Continent.

At first his health seemed to be benefited by this constant change, but latterly he has been afflicted seriously with his old enemies, rheumatism and gout, which finally brought about a complication of diseases which hastened his death.

Mr. Jerome was moved from Buckland's Hotel, in this city, three weeks ago to Lyon Mansion, Brighton, where he died. When removed he was extremely ill and unable to walk.

His wife and three daughters, Lady Randolph Churchill, Mrs. Leslie and Mrs. Moreton Frewer were present at his bedside when death occurred.

He was conscious to the last, although he died in great pain.

The Australian ballot system had its first trial at the charter election in Burlington, Vt., and the first Democratic Mayor was elected. The result was due largely to a split in the Republican party. Three Republican and two Democratic Aldermen were elected.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Because of the Rev. Dr. A. A. Lewis having been called to a distant city to attend a funeral, the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes will occupy the pulpit of the Seventh-Day Baptist church Saturday morning.

Charles W. McCutchen is absent from the city but he contributes to the success of to-night's concert, just the same. He has engaged at his own expense H. R. May, of New York, to sing with the tenors of the chorus.

Carmon Parse is home from Thomasville, Ga., feeling first-rate after the long journey of eleven hundred miles. Plainfield is good enough for him, and he is glad to get back from a climate that is 80 degrees above zero one day and making ice the next.

An apology is due Miss Marion Weed. Her name was omitted from the list of to-night's soloists in yesterday's PRESS. We were divulging the secret of the appearance of an amateur protegee of Mr. Fitzhugh's, and forgot Miss Weed. The embryo star is named Miss Wernig, and there is a treat in store for you.

At the house of the bride's mother in Newark, at 6:30 o'clock last evening, the marriage took place of Miss Belle Scott, formerly of this city, and Forman G. Neighbor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Neighbor, of East Front street. The Rev. Mr. Wells officiated. The happy groom is connected with the Standard Oil Company. Mr. and Mrs. Neighbor will make their home in this city.

Plainfield May Have Sewers in Spite of the Landlords.

Thanks to the efforts of Councilmen Hetfield and Spangenberg, who went to Trenton at once when they heard that the people's sewer bill was in danger, it was passed yesterday without that injurious amendment which Councilman See is accused of trying to tack on to it.

As soon as it receives the Governor's signature it becomes a law, and the city of Plainfield can at once make a contract with some company to sewer it whether a particular few consent or not.

THE PRESS would call the particular attention of the people to the fact that Assemblyman George Kyte, who represents this district, voted for the bill as it passed and as the people wanted it.

Louie Catches a Hawk.

A steel trap, set by Louie Schutt and baited with a deceased fowl, caught a large hawk a few days ago back of the barn of Elias Allen, Louie's grandfather, at Washingtonville near North Plainfield. The bird was subsequently caged after a fierce struggle.

THE CHILDREN'S health must not be neglected. Cold in the head causes catarrh. Ely's Cream Balm cures at once. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into the nostrils. The worst cases yielding to it. Price 50c.

ONE of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and, much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm, and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN CHORAL AND MELOPOIA.

Clementina DeVere is Coming, and if You Don't Like Her You Can Say So.

The engagement of Clementina DeVere to appear in this city at the last concert of the Plainfield Choral Society, is accomplished. The date, however, on her account, has been changed from May 14 to 18. The programme is to be that grand oratorio, The Creation. By this engagement at a great expense, the Society again evidences its intent to give its subscribers the best that can be obtained.

There is also displayed again a very commendable effort to do better than the Melopoia. The latter society brought Emil Fischer here, and the Choral followed with Dr. Carl Martin and Will Rieger. The Melopoia introduced to us the supremely beautiful Mary Howe, and now the Choral Society is to even excel this—vocally.

The relative merits of these sopranos are merely matters of opinion; but in the case of the latter, if you don't entirely approve of Miss DeVere's voice you will be permitted to say so without calling down on your head the little spite of Wm. B. Chapman or the mighty disapproval of certain members of the Melopoia. In fact they will gleefully applaud you and with alacrity join in criticism of conductor Fitzhugh also. But whisper a word, as has THE PRESS, concerning conductor Chapman's plainly apparent ignorance of time and lack of musical knowledge in many respects, or find in Miss Howe's voice, as has THE PRESS, only something to wonder at and nothing to love—whew!

JEALOUS AGAIN OF PLAINFIELD.

Elizabeth Commuters Sigh for Even the Privilege of Standing up in the "Gilt-Edge" Express Trains of Crescent City Society.

A group of Elizabeth commuters have written to the Journal a semi-humorous, dolefully plaintive letter, requesting that "our popular and genial townsman, Mr. J. H. Olhausen, general superintendent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, 'start a tracer for the lost 8:57 A. M. train. On Monday morning"—he says—"it did not make its usual appearance at 9:10, and the shivering commuters, after stamping their feet to keep them warm, at 9:25 took the '9:15,' which had just arrived. Possibly that '8:57' express came some time during the day, but not in time to be of the slightest benefit to any business man. Of course Mr. Olhausen has not had his attention called to the delinquencies of that '8:57,' but at the busiest hour of the morning there is practically no communication between Elizabeth and New York between 8:45 and 9:15 A. M., a period of half an hour, when it is most needed, especially for stock brokers and members of the different exchanges. If some arrangement could be made in case of a delay, of which the railroad people are always advised, to have a 'special' made up to leave Elizabeth at 9, or even to stop the 'Gilt-Edge Imperial' Plainfield express passing through here about 8:55 and permit the privilege of standing up, it would be much appreciated, and Mr. Olhausen would become so deservedly popular that the next nomination for council from one of the new wards would positively be thrust upon him."

Rehashing Ancient History.

The Somerville Messenger, referring to the story told by the Somerset street "journalist" concerning the "recent" burning of "Primrose's Hotel" on the Watchung mountain top, says that the facts stand as follows:

In 1877—14 years ago—a man called Primrose kept a one-horse hotel on the mountain a mile northeast of Bound Brook. One fine night, in that year, the hotel, a small frame building, was burned, and the most prominent part of its contents (a lot of very bad liquor kept for the delectation of Sunday visitors—its principal patrons) was supposed to have been destroyed with it. None of the inmates were burned, and Primrose had no horses in the barn, which is still standing. He failed to get any insurance (the company believing that he had himself started the fire), and disappeared. Over 10 years ago Chester Cleaves built the house still standing on the site of the old Primrose Hotel.

The feeble attempt of the "jonrnallst" to work up a sensation out of material that was old news a dozen years ago is making his sheet more than ever a laughing-stock throughout the State.

The Burglar at Music Hall.

One of the recent successes among American plays is the popular comedy-drama, "The Burglar," which will be given at Music Hall, next Monday evening. When "Gus" Thomas wrote "The Burglar" he treated a phase of human character that few authors had used to advantage in a play of merit. A young man, with home, fortune, friends; educated, handsome, and loved; dwelling in the sunshine of a wife's love, is yet a burglar. Hunted down driven from home by shame, an outcast, whose only companions are thieves, he comes into the home that might have been his own, and in the room he seeks to pillage he meets his own child. This character is convincingly played by A. S. Lipman. There is comedy in the play, and Harry Corson Clarke and Hattie Schell take care of this part of the entertainment. Gertie Homan, who is the most charming of child actresses, will be seen as "Editha." She was the original in this role at the Madison Square Theatre, New York.

NOTHING BETTER THAN THE TROLLEY.

Even the Storage-Battery, Says Electrical Expert Sorrell, Has Been Proved in Every Way Inferior.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Some of your readers may think, by reading C. E. B.'s letter, published in your paper last Saturday, that I am unduly prejudiced against the storage battery system. Permit me to say that I have no prejudice at all. My opinions are merely the result of personal experience. I have had charge of storage-battery cars with instructions to keep them running. I have succeeded in keeping them running; but after they had been on the road a few weeks, some of the batteries had to be replaced at the end of nearly every trip, the shaking of the car having destroyed them. The cars that I had under my charge ran only from three to six months before every battery had to be replaced.

The motor equipment for the cars is the same whether the trolley system or the storage-battery be used, and as it is the motor that drives the car it is rather curious that the storage-battery should drive the car better than the car propelled by electricity from the overhead wire, as it is the same motor driving the car in both cases.

I cannot see that there is any advantage to be gained by a storage car being able to go around obstructions. The place for the car is on the track, and if your correspondent had ever tried to run a street car, with its two tons of storage-battery, over the cobbles, he would probably find a bigger obstruction in the street than the one he was trying to avoid.

Your correspondent says that the reason why the 267 roads now using the trolley system do not use the storage-battery system is because they do not own it. It is curious to note that a great many of the roads now using the trolley system have first tried the storage-battery, which has been put on the road and maintained, free of charge to the railway companies, by its own advocates. The railway companies have wanted the storage-battery, and yet after giving its promotors every opportunity to prove their claims, have contracted for, and put in the overhead system.

The electrical business is a larger child for its age than any other of its business kin, and nearly every valuable invention has been a subject for lawsuits. Yet these law-suits have not kept the article off the market, nor stopped its use. The storage-battery is one of the oldest of the electrical inventions, and I cannot quite see why "temporary litigation" should keep it out of the market for street railway purposes, if it had proved successful in that field, for it certainly is wanted eagerly enough, and has been tried long enough, to have given Yankee ingenuity opportunity of devising some means of "beating the devil around the bush" if he was worth beating.

Will They Build a Little Town of Their Own?

A PRESS reporter has discovered that the same firm which recently purchased the Shackleton works at Bound Brook have bought the old "Yellow Tavern" property and the Crater, the Ludlow and the Jacob Field farms. As the firm talk of employing 800 men eventually, probably they will build a town for them on this new property.

When we reflect that so many human beings die of Consumption we must come to the conclusion that everybody should be provided with Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the poor consumptive's friend.

NO ONE CLAIMS THE BODY.

A Nameless Grave for the Man Found Dead at Millington.

The body of the stranger found in a deserted hut near Millington and Basking Ridge, in the mountains back of North Plainfield, has not been identified. Coroner Hughson investigated the case, and decided that an inquest was not necessary, and gave Undertaker Bishop a permit to bury the body. Those who called at the undertakers had no interest in the mystery beyond a morbid curiosity. The body will be buried in the Basking Ridge Cemetery.

When it became known to the citizens of Basking Ridge that the remains of a man supposed to have been murdered lay in the undertaking establishment they hurried to the place. Mr. Bishop said that over fifty persons had sought admission and they were still coming. Mr. Bishop thinks the man has been dead at least a week. He thinks the man may have been a tramp who had sought shelter in the deserted hut, and was frozen to death.

About one week ago Fred Nishwitz, a farmer living near, saw a stranger walking in the direction of the hut. It is thought that this man is the one found dead.

Last Monday afternoon three boys from Millington went out to hunt muskrats. The Passaic river courses through that region, which in many places is quite wide. It was said that the boys had great luck, and that they went to a little deserted hut to strip off the pelts. The muskrat story, however, is discredited by those who are familiar with the circumstances. They say the boys were out enjoying an "egg cook". The three boys had secured the eggs and started for the old hut to cook and enjoy them. As they walked in, the house was found to be very dark. One of the lads said:

"Suppose a man was hiding here?"

The three stood and gazed at each other in mute silence. Then one of them said:

"If there was we could get away with him."

They began moving about, when suddenly one of them saw what looked like a human form stretched upon the ground.

"It is a man," shouted one of them.

"I guess he is stuffed with straw," said another.

The boys looked closer, and saw the dead body. Forsaking their "egg cook," the boys, frightened and pale, scampered out of the hut. When they reached Millington they told the authorities what they had seen. The town people soon heard of it and were much excited. The rumor spread that a murder had been committed and that the corpse had been found in the old hut by the three boys. Every one who could spare the time started for the scene of the murder and came back wondering how the man met his death.

Coroner A. N. Hughson, of Morristown, was notified, and on reaching Millington ordered the remains removed to the undertaking establishment of R. C. Bishop, at Basking Ridge. Tuesday morning Mr. Bishop got the body. He said he found it with head lying towards the opening at one end of the hut and both feet under an old stove. It was frozen stiff. It can only be conjectured how long it had been there when discovered by the boys. The hut, Mr. Bishop says, has a roof sloping in both directions. The doors were long ago removed, and the hut is in decay. It was once used by charcoal burners. The spot is a lonely one, and just the place to be associated with a mystery of this kind.

Mr. Bishop says the man was attired in an old suit of clothes and a shabby overcoat. He wore flannel underclothing of a coarse grade and had no socks on his feet. His shoes were heavy and plain. A search of his clothing was made, but it contained nothing. Mr. Bishop describes him as fully fifty-five years old and wearing a full beard mixed with gray. His hands did not have the appearance of hard work. The body was discolored, and it was difficult to distinguish marks that might indicate that the man had been murdered or injured in an accident.

So far as known, suspicious characters have not been seen in the region. From his clothing the villagers conjectured that the man may have come from Stirling, where a silk factory employs a number of hands of the class to which the dead man apparently belonged, or else from Plainfield or Somerville. No one seems to be missing from these places, however. Nothing of value was found on the body, and there was nothing to show that he had been on a hunting trip. Another mystery of the Jersey mountains seems to have been unearthed.

The camp has not been occupied in a year. The region is the loneliest in the county, and after cutting all the good hickory timber, the lumber men had abandoned it.

—"The Burglar" Monday.

THE INNOCENT SUFFER MOST.

Netherwood's "Commercial Evangelist" Tells Where Rum's Blows Fall Cruelest.

S. A. Haines, of Netherwood, known from one end of the country to the other as "the commercial evangelist", as founder of the Commercial Temperance League, and as Chaplain of the Travelers' Protective Association of America, has been delivering addresses by the wholesale in the West. Two Sundays ago he spoke before three big audiences at Sioux City, Iowa, and the following Monday evening he lectured in the Unity church at that place for the benefit of the Woman's Exchange. His Sunday addresses were: in the morning at the First Methodist Episcopal church, in the evening at the First Baptist, and in the afternoon at the Peavey Grand. His afternoon lecture is given considerable space in the Sioux City Journal. He proposed to talk, he said, for the benefit of the woman's temple of Chicago. This he considered one of the grandest works which has ever been undertaken, and it would, he believed, mark an epoch in the country's history. "For who"—said the speaker—"are better fitted to accomplish the overthrow of the rum power than our mothers, wives and sisters?" In view of the collection he proposed having taken, he announced that his subject would be, "Lend a Hand".

On these simple words—says the Journal—he delivered a temperance address which would do credit in its various phases to the most witty, the most pathetic, the most logical, and the most eloquent of lecturers. Always ready with a happy incident, he never allows his audience to lose sight of the argument he is making, and after a laughable story always makes the argument more convincing by its application.

The speaker quoted a passage from a New York journal which said that the liquor traffic "depended for its existence on debased manhood, degraded womanhood, defrauded childhood, and held a mortgage on every cradle in the land." "And yet,"—said the speaker—"after this, the strongest indictment that could possibly be written, this paper advocates the 'legalizing' of the business. Embody all other evils with which flesh is afflicted and they will not compare in enormity with the evil of the liquor traffic." Yet this traffic, as the paper stated, depends for its existence on what?

"On debased manhood." Is not he debased who, after living with a wife for years, would after her death sell her body to a medical institution for money with which to go on a spree, and to keep life in the drink traffic? Is not he debased who would in a quarrel with his wife, gouge out her eye, and after a few months gouge out the other? And yet when he is brought to justice, that wife stands ready to defend him from the consequences of his sin. Is not that debased manhood?

It depends upon "defrauded childhood". Yes, childhood cheated of its rights, cheated of its education, of its honor, because popular sentiment legalizes the business which finds a place for the money which should go to the education, clothing and feeding of children. Men say if a man must drink, let him take the consequences. But it is because he does not take the consequences that 150,000 children are beggars in the streets of New York city. They take the consequences.

As many as 100,000 drunkards die every year. Their places are taken by those who drink moderately. Their places are filled by those, in turn, who have but taken their first drink, and from every 135th house in the land this year one boy will go out into the world to take his first drink, and start on the downward road.

The speaker devoted considerable time to the subject of treating, and considered it the worst feature of the traffic. He made an earnest appeal against it. "If drink you must, at least stop treating"—he said.

Her 101st Birthday.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 5.—Mrs Sallie Cannon, who lives at No. 3 College street, this city, is making arrangements to celebrate the 101st anniversary of her birth on Monday next. Relatives from all parts of the state will attend. It is said that the woman is the best preserved person of her age in the State. She has always lived in this city.

Signed With a Quill Pen.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The International Copyright bill is now a law. THERE is no end to the artfulness of womankind. There comes a story from Ridgway, Pa., to the effect that a man there, while blowing smoke rings in the presence of a young lady, was surprised to see her run her finger in one and tell him we'll be married next spring. What could the poor fellow do except to bow his head in meek submission?

DISCOURAGED!

Blue, Disheartened, Depressed!

That is your condition, simply because your nerves are weak, your brain tired, and your head aches; because you pass restless nights, wake tired, and have lost your vim, energy and snap; you are gloomy, depressed, and have a sense of anxiety, or foreboding, or are suffering from spring debility.

You are discouraged, not because you are sick, for in your soul you know that there ought to be some means of cure.

"Oh!" you wail, "I have tried so many things and failed." You coward, you baby!

Your nerves have simply gone back on you.

Do you think that because you have failed to find the right cure once, twice, a dozen times, that there is nothing good in the world? Is it the part of a noble human soul, when health, happiness, life itself is at stake, to give up hope, to become weak and discouraged simply because a bottle of this or a bottle of that, or a doctor here or a doctor there failed to cure?

Confess it—you are not sick beyond cure, but have only lost your pluck.

Courage is one of the biggest attributes and nothing so quickly shows the weakling as discouragement. The courageous or non-courageous soul is what makes us men or mice.

Suppose the matchless artists of the world had lost courage in the long and bitter hours of their disappointments! Suppose our great inventors, meeting obstacles on every hand, allowed their wondrous genius to droop with discouragement ere their the steam engine, the telegraph or telephone were discovered! Suppose the learned astronomers, searching the skies night after night through weary years, had become hopeless, disheartened, discouraged before gravitation became a known fact!

An indomitable will to try and get well is all you want—try, even in the face of a hundred failures, and success will surely crown your efforts.

Get Dr Greene's Nervura from your druggist—you know what it is—the greatest and grandest medical discovery of the age, the pure, vegetable tonic for the brain, the strengthener of nerve, the invigorator of blood and body, and build for yourself a new nerve, a new power, a new vigor.

Courage is Perseverance.

For two years I was one of the most miserable of mankind; I had indigestion and nervous dyspepsia, everything I ate disagreed with my stomach, which caused me to have a fluttering of the heart. I was very nervous at all times—cold feet and hands, sleepless nights, and, in fact, was cranky and ugly.

In all it was a miserable existence for me until I used Dr. Greene's Nervura. After trying all other remedies that I ever knew or heard tell of, and after giving up all hope of getting cured, I concluded I would try Dr. Greene's Nervura. After taking two bottles, I began to feel the effects of it and continued until I considered myself cured. I had now no more indigestion or dyspepsia; my nerves were strong; no more trouble with my stomach or fluttering of the heart; no cold feet or hands; I sleep well and get up refreshed; in fact I feel I am myself again, all due to Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Any one troubled with the same disease, who gives it a fair trial, I am positive will be benefited by it. CHAS. A. TITSWORTH.

233 7th street, Jersey City, N. J.

Dr. Greene, of 35 West Fourteenth St., New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled.

N. B. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write Dr. Greene about your case, and a carefully considered letter, fully explaining your disease and giving you a perfect understanding of all its symptoms will be returned, free of charge.

ECHOES OF LONG AGO.

A Section Where the Old Mill Songs Are Still Heard.

The Darkies' "Quarters" on a Decolate Plantation—The Old Hand Mill at Work—The Song and Poetry of Slavery Days.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Many are the curious relics of the "old regime" to be found in the "black districts" of South Carolina. Wherever the whites are in the majority, progress has modernized the customs; new ideas and new discoveries have been adopted, and the good old fashions are memories only. But on many of the old cotton and rice plantations in the "black districts"—long since deserted by their former owners, but still occupied by a gray-headed remnant of ex-slaves, their children and their children's children—the condition of affairs is very different. Here there has been no progress—quite the opposite, indeed—and here many of the primitive usages of thirty years ago are still in vogue.

But before speaking further of the relics, a word for the old plantations on which they may be found. The old plantations are interesting enough, because of their former beauty and the luxury of their former appointments—because of their present dilapidation and the wild picturesqueness that surrounds them. To begin fittingly, here is the "big gate" at the entrance of the long avenue, bordered by moss-mantled century oaks—here was the gate—to-day it is gone like the fencing, for only a zig-zag ridge of rotten plank and post winds through the riotous thicket and marks the line of the old fence. The avenue is knee deep in dead leaves, the oaks are fettered by grape vines, drooping under tons of moss, and from long neglect look like a company of bushy-headed giants drawn up in battle array against the genii of the weird solitudes about them. The once handsome dwelling at the end of the avenue is tottering to the fall; shorn of steps, shutters, window-panes; pilfaged of every portable ornament, rotting and ruined. The smoke-house, with its hundred diamond-shaped eyes, through which clouds of snowy smoke were wont to ooze, after enveloping the freshly-dressed hams hanging from the ceiling inside, and thus helping to "cure" them; the kitchen, wherein three hundred and sixty-five feasts per annum were prepared in "the good old days;" the stables that once harbored many a blooded courser; the barns, the dwellings of the house servants—all leaning, falling or fallen.

Say that a stranger is approaching the "quarters" (which in slavery days meant that long row of negro cabins far a-field in which the field hands dwelt). He would see a quaint little settlement of diminutive, dilapidated houses, patched and propped in every conceivable fashion, and surrounded by little patches of turnips, cabbages and potatoes, a few fowls and pigs, a host of gaunt curs, piles of oyster shells, stacks of fodder, potato banks fenced in with rails, an occasional peach or pear tree—all these, with the inhabitants, he would see at a glance and while approaching.

Not long since the writer, accompanied by a photographer and two burly blacks to carry the camera and pull the oars, journeyed far into the country, over water and over land, for the purpose of obtaining a picture of the only ante-bellum stone mill within many miles of the city that diligent inquiry could locate.

Let us examine it in detail.

First, the large square frame over which the two men are standing supports two heavy circular stones. Their surfaces are rough, like coarse sandpaper; the bottom stone is stationary, the top stone movable. In the center of the lower surface of the upper stone there is a "scoop," like the impression of a cannon ball on the soft earth, chiseled there to fit loosely over an iron cone. This cone is attached or fits loosely over the top of an iron rod, which runs loosely through the center of the lower stone, and on downward through the heavy wooden crossbar beneath. The iron rod is "threaded" and "nutted" both above and beneath the wooden bar, making it possible to lower or raise the cone, for a purpose which will soon appear. The sides of the cone are grooved to facilitate the grinding process. In the center of the upper stone there is a round hole which, after passing half way through the entire thickness of the stone, widens into the "scoop" before mentioned, to fit loosely over the cone. Through this hole the corn is "fed" to the mill, a handful at a time, the grain passing through the grooves in the sides of the cone, and on between the two stones, to be ground into grist or flour, and husk. The two stones are separated by perhaps the thirty-second part of an inch of space, the two rough surfaces almost touching. But this space may be increased or diminished by manipulating the nuts already described

Near the outer edge of the upper stone there is a notch an inch deep and an inch or more in diameter. Into this notch fits the upright pole which is grasped by the hands of the grinders. The top of this pole runs through a hole in a horizontal plank supported by two uprights at a distance of about four feet above the stone. The hole through the plank is much too large for the pole, leaving plenty of room for the "play" which is required.

And now, when all is ready, let it be remembered that the cone fits loosely over the top of the iron rod, the upper mill-stone fits loosely over the cone, and the bar runs loosely through the lower stone.

The rest is plain. The men as they stand exert their strength—one pushing, the other pulling; the upper stone revolves, slowly at first, for it weighs several hundred pounds; then faster and faster, until it rushes around with a speed that would take it across the country at twenty miles an hour, did it suddenly jump from its position and strike terra firma at the proper angle.

No "prentice hand" can feed the "mill." Only those who are adepts ever venture to try it, for the speed of the rushing stone is never slackened in the least while the mill is being "fed." With the utmost ease and grace the accustomed hand drops the grain into the "mouth"—the hole in the center of the upper stone—without allowing the rapidly revolving pole to strike his arm—a catastrophe to be dreaded as one would dread the blow of a sledge hammer. And the feeder does his work with one hand, be it remembered, while he helps to turn the stone with the other.

The better to comprehend what becomes of the corn after being "fed" to the mill, let us imagine the upper mill-stone a wheel, the "mouth," then, would be at the hub, and the tire, around the rim of the stone. The corn disappears at the hub and flies out, in the shape of grist, at the tire, from between the stones, being showered against the four sides of the mill-frame as sand flies from a rapidly moving wheel.

But what of the mill songs?

From the long, long ago, there comes to me even as I write, that rushing sound which nothing can imitate, and its energetic accompaniment. With the eye of memory I see again the old quarters and the old mill, and Minda, Mima, Pompey and Peter grouped around it. As usual, they are singing; as usual Minda leads, and this is what they sing:

MILL SONG.

Now and again Pompey or Peter gives vent to a resounding "whooper," but with this exception the doleful monotony of the chant is never broken until the corn sack is empty, or until there is a pause to change the tune for another equally as dismal and monotonous.

Another chant which comes to mind is one that better suits the mortar and pestle for "beating" rice. To this tune I can not recall any fixed set of words, but as all negro ballads sung to beguile the hours of labor invariably contain some reference to the work of the moment, the following words will come very closely to the mark. The tune, however, is a bona fide "black district" gem:

MORTAR AND PESTLE SONG.

I take it for granted that few, if any, of our Northern friends have ever seen the negroes shout. Come, I do not mean that a "shout" such as Mr. Webster defines may be seen, nor do I refer at all to Mr. Webster's shout. To shout, according to the colored country folk, is to engage in a religious dance, and to this dance alone is reference made. The act of shouting is grotesque enough. On certain nights of the week and often on Sundays during the day the inhabitants of the plantations in the black districts gather themselves together by prearrangement—generally at one of their cabins—for purposes pious. When all is ready and the exercises are about to begin, when the aged are seated upon stools and benches against the walls, and the children are snugly packed away between their legs; a "bredder," or brother (i. e., a church member), raises himself and his voice in prayer, beginning, continuing and ending (with slight variations) much in this wise: "Oh! dow good shoppord (shepherd) whom we wash up (worship) ah, hab massy pun dese outdacious (audacious) sinnahs, which is eat ob de onforbidden fruit when er know say e ain for tetch." (Should not be touched.) "Pun all dese exmonstrous, ondestunt (indecent) sinnah-ah," etc., etc. After the prayer the shouting begins. Another "bredder," or perchance a sister, raises a tune afflicted with melancholia; the juveniles and the middle-aged take their places in the center of the room and march in a circle; a back to each breast, like a company of soldiers in single file, each hip supporting the hands of the sinner next behind it. In this circle male and female alternate—a man, a woman, a boy, a "gal," etc., and the dancing is done in perfect time with the music, which latter is furnished by the voices and the hand-clapping of the wall-flowers. To describe the dance is beyond me, the contortions of body, legs and arms being simply indescribable. I can only furnish some specimens of the shouting hymns, and here they are:

Another that I remember well runs thus:

Something awfully esthetic, and which is sung by the young bucks in the field or on the hunt, was pathetic ally as follows:

BOAT SONG.

But of all the old plantation songs that haunt me like an echo of the past, the following boat song is perhaps the most worthy of consideration. Whether the lines rhyme or not, there is poetry in them, and there is religion and pathos in them. I quote several of the lines and give the tune below:

BOAT SONG.

In singing the above song the negroes adhere to their general rule of leading part and chorus. Peter, for example, sings: "Oh! the ship is out"—and stops; the others sing: "a sailing," etc. In the second part Peter sings: "Sister Katrin"—and the others: "Hole you light," and all: "On Canaan sho'."

I have said that in this song there is religion, poetry and pathos. When I explain that the "Sister Katrin," or the "Bruddur Thomas," who are asked to "hold their light on Canaan shore," are the relatives or friends who have recently departed, others will, perhaps, agree with me.

And what of the tune? The imagination must assist those who would be pleased with it. At regular intervals it must be punctuated with the strokes of the oars; and the manner of singing it—the different parts—must be remembered! The pathos in the words, too, and the river—often the night and the moonlight. It is not an imaginary tune, but one which I have known from infancy. It is as popular to-day as I remember it a quarter of a century ago, and as presented it is absolutely correct as to time as well as music. The words are also negro words. Who composed them Heaven knows, but I learned them when I learned the tune.

The Charm of the Cuckoo.

The habits and mannerisms of the cuckoo have been more acutely observed than perhaps those of any other bird. For thousands of years naturalists have been trying to understand and explain its mysterious ways, but have not fully succeeded. There yet remain many impenetrable and seemingly never to be understood mysteries connected with it. Enough about it has, however, been found out to prove that it is the bird of the strangest habits known. A native of this continent can hardly realize the charm of the notes of the cuckoo. From a musical point of view there is not much in them, but the name of the bird is evidently onomatopoetic; that is, formed from the sounds emitted by it, and this name is the same, or nearly the same, in the languages of all the countries it frequents.—The Continent.

Big Story of Small Things.

In a curious old work entitled "The Curiosities of London," we find the following particulars concerning a minute padlock: "In the twentieth year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Mark Scarliot, a blacksmith, made a lock consisting of eleven pieces of iron, steel and brass, all of which, together with the key, weighed but half a grain. He also made a chain of gold, consisting of forty-three links, which after fastening it to the lock and key above mentioned, he put about the neck of a common flea, the whole being so minute that the little insect could draw them over a silver plate with perfect ease. All of these together, lock and key, chain and flea, weighed a slight fraction less than one grain and a half."—Chicago Journal.

CAROLINE ISLANDERS.

They Wear Coats-of-Mail Made of Cocoa-Nut Threads.

The full armor worn by a warrior of the Caroline Islands is one of the most curious bits of savage workmanship in the world.

The Caroline Islands are a small group, marked by a few dots on the map of Polynesia, just where the one hundred and fifteth meridian of west longitude crosses the tenth parallel of south latitude.

Caroline Islanders dwell in the midst of plenty, and have attained an unusually high degree of skill in a good many of the arts of comfortable living. Among the rest they have learned how to make excellent cloths and mattings of various vegetable fibers, of rushes, strips of leaves, etc. They contrive powerful weapons, too; and, as they fight with enemies who are equally well-armed, they have learned to provide for their safety the defensive armor shown in the illustration, a specimen of which is preserved in the Museum of Paris.

This suit consists of two separate parts—the clothing and the cuirass. The clothing, worn next to the skin, is made by weaving (or rather netting) by hand, a web of coarse cords, twisted out of the husk of the cocoa-nut, each cord being tied into a hard knot between each mesh. The knots are crowded close together, and thicken the cloth so that it would not be easy to stab or cut through it; it also protects the legs against being torn by thorny shrubs or scratched in clambering over the sharp coral rocks.

The trousers fit close, and are elastic enough to mold themselves to the shape of the leg. They reach high up upon the waist and are sustained by two back-bands which take the place of suspenders; but instead of passing over the shoulders and down in front they are tied together, necktie fashion, under the chin. The shirt or waistcoat, of the same material, is short, made all in one piece like the trousers, and of the same knotted material; this is slipped on by poking the head through a slit in the top.

But the main curiosity in this armor is the cuirass, or chest-and-head protector, the like of which is known nowhere else. The roof, or substance of the cloth, is of cocoanut threads the size of wrapping twine, but tightly twisted and tough, while the warp upon which these are woven is much heavier; so that the finished cloth is as thick as our heaviest canvas. The threads are crowded very compactly together, also, so that no slight force would be needed to force a blow through. The selvage is bound over a stout cord, and ornamented by alternate plaits of black hair and yellow fiber. Ornamental designs are worked in with horse-hair, too.

But the form of this outer war-jacket is still more remarkable. It consists of two parts, joined into one garment by the bands covering the shoulders. Through the round hole between the shoulder-bands the head emerges, while the broad back part is folded around under the arms on each side and laced firmly to the front flap by stout cords. This done, there stands erect behind the wearer's head a fan-shaped shield, kept stiff by its well-bound border and held erect and fixed by cords passing down to the shoulder on each side.

Encased in this armor, a fixed shield worn to protect his neck and head from blows behind, and a thick palm-leaf shield held before his face upon his left arm, the Caroline Islander is well-fitted to go into any sort of fight his savage neighbors may be able to get up, though bullets and swords would find his ingenious precautions of small account.—Ernest Ingersoll, in Wide Awake.

Kicked by a Dead Mule.

An old Union soldier tells this story of a mule's last kick:

In the First Division, Second Corps, we had a mule noted for his wonderful kicking powers. In fact, he was ready to give any one a kick, upon all occasions. On the road to Richmond he got his leg broken in a bridge, and was taken out of the team and shot, and was, to all appearances, dead, when a soldier ran up, seized the mule by the tail, and exclaimed:

"Now kick!"

And the mule, having just one kick, let him have it, breaking the soldier's jaw, and sent him rolling in the ditch. The soldier never heard the last of being kicked by a dead mule.—N. Y. World.

A Clincher.

A young man home, from college, wishing to inspire his little sister with awe for his learning, pointed to a star, and said:

"Sis, do you see that bright little luminary? It's bigger than this whole world."

"No 'tain't," said sis.

"Yes, it is," declared the young collegian.

"Then why don't it keep off the rain?" was the triumphant rejoinder.—Spare Moments.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

President Harrison Ready to Go Duck Shooting.

WILL PROBABLY START TO-DAY.

To be Accompanied by Ex-Senator Sewell of New Jersey.

Several Congressmen Making a Last Request at the Departments—Major McKinley Pushing Mr. Rathbone for Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General—An Oversight About the Mint Building.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—President Harrison expects to start on his duck shooting expedition this afternoon if affairs will permit. He will be accompanied by ex-Senator Sewell, of New Jersey.

Senator Stanford is trying to induce the President to make his transcontinental trip in time to attend the Stanford University dedication ceremonies. This would bring him to San Francisco in April.

He has not yet decided positively just when he will leave for the coast, but it is pretty certain that he will start next month. The President will probably go direct to California and on his return visit New Orleans and other Southern cities.

Speaker Reed will leave here to-day for New York, and in the evening he will tell the Federal Club of the record made by the Republican majority in the 51st Congress.

LEAVING THE CAPITAL.

Congressmen Make the Rounds of the Departments Before Going Home.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—There was an animated scene in the departments yesterday and to-day, Congressmen making a last request or seeing that things are fixed all right for their districts before going home. At the Postoffice Department there was a large crowd, and among the early callers was ex-Congressman McKinley, who came to say goodby and also to put in a good word for Chief Inspector Rathbone for Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General.

Major McKinley has been using his influence for some time to have Mr. Rathbone promoted to the new place just created, and he was closeted with Mr. Wanamaker for a long time. Major McKinley had a carriage in use all morning, and was riding from department to department saying farewell. As he drove away from the Postoffice Department he said: "I shall not leave Washington until Monday, and then I go home to Ohio."

Every departing train is carrying crowds of Congressmen from the scenes of their triumphs and failures. The corridors and rotundas of the hotels are crowded with trunks, mail bags and document boxes addressed to the homes of ex-members. The government furnishes a neat white iron-bound box of all sizes to members to put documents in.

The boxes have strong locks and some are large enough to contain a bedstead. In these boxes a great number of members have packed their household belongings and under their franks are sending home through the mail their goods and chattels. Great mail bags full of soiled clothing and fancy trappings are seen going through the streets in mail wagons addressed to some Congressman's home in a distant State.

Mexico's Exhibit at the Fair.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Lieutenant Baker of the United States navy, recently appointed Commissioner of the World's Columbian Exhibition to the Republic of Mexico, has been formally presented to President Diaz by Mr. Ryan, the United States Minister, and delivered the invitation from the President of the United States to that republic to participate in the exposition. President Diaz in reply expressed the greatest interest in the exhibition and said that Mexico would do herself credit at Chicago.

Senator Hearst's Successor.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—It is the impression of many friends of ex-Gov. Murray of California that he will be the successor of the late Senator Hearst. He is a Kentuckian by birth, and served in the Federal army during the rebellion, reaching the rank of brigadier-general at the age of 21. He was United States Marshal in Kentucky under Grant and Governor of Utah under President Arthur. Being free from factional connections in California his friends consider him a strong compromise candidate.

Philadelphia Will Have to Wait.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The Philadelphia members of Congress and others were made happy last Monday by the passage of the bill authorizing the erection of a two-million-dollar mint building in that city. It now turns out that by an oversight no appropriation for the erection of the building was embodied in the bill or in any of the general appropriation bills, therefore the authorizing act cannot be put into effect at present, or, at the earliest, not until the next Congress provides the necessary appropriations.

The Total Appropriation.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—A statement prepared by Representative Sayers of Texas shows that the total permanent annual and miscellaneous appropriations made by the Congress just ended were $1,008,270,371 against $817,993,850 made during the 50th Congress. Mr. Sayers is the leading Democratic member of the House Appropriations Committee.

Mr. Huston is Still Treasurer.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The resignation Treasurer Huston is still in the hands of the President, who has not yet accepted it. He may accept it at any time and may not accept it at all. Mr. Huston has left for his home in Indiana, where he will remain for a week or perhaps indefinitely.

Ran Away With $40,000.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.—J. Weiser Bucher, son-in-law and confidential manager of Ira T. Clement, one of Northumberlan County's wealthiest and foremost business men, is a defaulter to the extent of from $10,000 to $50,000.

Connecticut's Senate Adjourns.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 6.—After a very short session in which nothing was accomplished an adjournment was taken until next Wednesday at 2:30 p. m.

DANIELS CONVICTED.

The Defaulting Agent Sure to Receive a Severe Sentence.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., March 6.—Daniel M. Daniels, on trial here on charges of gross immorality, has been convicted and will get a severe sentence.

Daniels is the defaulting agent of the Metropolitan Insurance Company. He has been a most active member of the Methodist Church, and when he got short in his accounts the pastor and five members of the church endorsed a note for him, which they had to pay.

During the trial Daniels admitted that he had a wife in Wales, while the woman with whom he was living and with whose daughter he has been intimate, confessed that she had a husband living in Pittsburg and had eloped with Daniels.

Supt. Pierce Makes a Statement.

ALBANY, March 6.—Supt. Pierce of the Insurance Department makes the following statement: "My attension has been called to a letter issued by Wm. Rasquin, jr., and addressed to Geo. Crawford, in which he claims to be a partner of mine, and upon that ground claims influence in the Insurance Department. The letter and statement in it are utterly and unqualifiedly false. Mr. Rasquin is not and never has been a partner of mine."

Schooner Wrecked—Crew Saved.

PORTLAND, Me., March 6.—The schooner Helen, Captain Ames, Rockland for New York, lime laden, reported anchored near Cape Elizabeth yesterday afternoon and last night, went ashore during the night. The life saving crew took off Captain Ames and three of the crew, who were badly frostbitten and suffering greatly. The schooner went to pieces in a short time and is a total loss.

Twenty Years for a Sneak Thief.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.—Robert Hackett, a notorious sneak thief, was sentenced by Judge Gordon to 20 years in the Eastern penitentiary for the larceny of clothing and other articles from dwelling houses. Since 1876 Hackett has served 19 years in prison for similar offences, his last sentence having expired in October last.

The Oriental Mills Again.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 6.—The Oriental Mills has again assigned to Samuel Arms. It is understood that this is an additional safeguard to the first assignment. The Messrs. Reed are desirous that the property shall be divided equally among the creditors and that no one creditor shall have any preference.

Sherman Denied a New Trial.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 6.—Judge Lambert has handed down a decision in the case of the People vs. Stephen W. Sherman, convicted of grain stealing, denying the defendant's motion for a new trial. Sherman is now out on bail, pending the decision of the appeal. His sentence was five years.

Royalty at the Horse Show.

LONDON, March 6.—Queen Victoria, the Empress Frederick, the Princess Marguerite of Prussia, and the Prince and Princess of Wales, drove in open carriages to-day from Buckingham Palace to Islington, where they passed some time in inspecting the horse show at Agricultural Hall.

Corbett Leaves for 'Frisco.

OGDEN, Utah, March 6.—Parson Davies, who has been respecting for some time at Ogden Hot Springs, was joined yesterday by Jim Corbett, and they left for San Francisco where Corbett will go into training for the fight with Peter Jackson.

Suffocated by Gas.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 6.—Joseph Coultas, a stereotyper employed by R. Hoe & Company, of New York, was found dead in his room at the Brower House here, having been suffocated by gas. The burner was turned on at full head.

THE TUNNEL HORROR

The Jury Finds the Railroad Officials Guilty.

THEY WILL BE ARRESTED TO-DAY

Warrants Out for Chauncey M. Depew and the New Haven's Directors.

They Are Held Responsible for the Deaths of the Six Persons Killed in the Accident—Criminal Proceedings to Follow at Once—Engineer Fowler Only Indirectly Responsible.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Coroner Levy's tunnel accident jury found a verdict last night which held the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, through its officers and directors, solely responsible for the deaths of six persons who were killed in the accident.

In plain, straightforward language they charged the deaths of two of these unfortunates upon the stoves which the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad used in its cars in violation of the laws of the State.

Criminal prosecution is to follow at once these comprehensive findings.

Mr. Chauncey M. Depew and the other directors of the railroad who live in New York will be arrested to-day and held on bail to await the action of the grand jury.

The district attorney, through his representative at the inquest, has promised that he will use every effort to follow out the indications of the jury as to the persons criminally responsible for the disaster.

The jury's verdict relieved Operators McManus and Ames from any share of blame, and held Engineer Fowler only indirectly responsible. The engineer will be held with the officers and directors or the railroad for the grand jury's disposal. Recommendations for action by the Legislature looking to the better protection of life in the tunnel will be forwarded to the Legislature by the coroner.

WILL THEY SURRENDER?

The Question of Extradition Arises in the Case of the Railroad Officials.

NEW YORK, March 6.—The question of extradition between the States of New York and Connecticut will again be raised by the issuance of warrants for the arrest of the officers and directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, in accordance with the verdict of the coroner's jury in the tunnel accident investigation. The majority of the officials reside in Connecticut, and it may be necessary, after the service of the warrants, to secure extradition papers from the Governor of that State. It is probable that the officers and directors when arrested will waive any rights of this nature, but should they decide to demand their free legal privileges it will be interesting to watch the course of Governor Hill when asking Connecticut to turn over the prisoners to some court within his jurisdiction. There is a chance for peculiar complications.

Railroad Constructions Awarded.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 6.—Chief Engineer Ring has awarded the contracts for work on the Buffalo extension of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. Between Geneva and Willard, James H. Sullivan of New York gets sections 1 to 6 inclusive, and Richard Doyle of New York section 7 to 13. Between Odessa and Van Etterville, McDonnell & Sayre of South Bethlehem, were given sections 44 to 50, and John Shields of Flemington, N. Y., sections 51 to 57. The work is to be pushed very rapidly.

Steamer Burned.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Shortly after 3 p. m. a fire occurred on the steamer City of Richmond of the Hartford & New York Transportation Company, which lay at her dock at Pier 24, East River. The flames spread with great rapidity, and the vessel was burned to the water's edge. She cost $150,000. One of the crew was suffocated in his bunk, another was badly hurt in trying to escape from the vessel, and a third, who is missing, may have perished.

Sentenced to State Prison.

MOUNT MORRIS, N. Y., March 6.—Jerry Keating, who was found guilty of manslaughter in the first degree for complicity in the killing of William J. Joslyn, of Mount Clemens, Mich., in this village on Sept. 29, last, was sentenced to five years in State prison. Fred Digert, another of the four charged with complicity in the killing, and who was out on bail, has been re-arrested.

Burglar Rob a Bank.

FREEPORT, Pa., March 6.—The Freeport Bank was entered by burglars during the night. They forced the combination off the vault door, then drilled and forced the combination lock off the middle door, getting into the large steel safe inside. They stole $150,000 in money, bonds and other valuables. The burglars gained entrance through a back window.

Crushed to Death.

TAMAQUA, Pa., March 6.—The bottom of a coal car of a rapidly moving train on which Samuel Holderman and another brakeman were standing suddenly gave way, carrying Holderman beneath the car where he was crushed to death. His comrade escaped a similar fate by catching hold of and clinging to the crossbar of the car.

Death of a Massachusetts Judge.

BOSTON, March 6.—Judge Robert C. Pitman, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, died at Newton after an illness of only a week.

Killed His Wife While Insane.

FRANKLIN, Pa., March 6.—Thomas Moore, a wealthy merchant of this city, slept and killed his wife at 2 a. m. in a fit of insanity.

THE MILLER MURDER TRIAL.

The Accused Negro Listening Attentively to the Testimony.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 6.—Interest in the trial of Francis Lingo for the murder of Mrs. Annie Miller near Matchtown does not abate. On the contrary, the proceedings in the Camden court house served to show even greater anxiety and interest than was exhibited yesterday.

The Commonwealth continued the examination of witnesses, and by the manner of testimony sought to be elicited outlined by intimation the theory of the prosecution, a theory which it would seem is well understood by the defence, to judge by the deliberate and skilful cross-examination, which attacks and attempts to break the main points.

Lingo listens attentively to the testimony and presents a stolid front. Only on occasions does an expression of deep thought come over his face. His general manner is more self-possessed and confident than anything else. Chalkley Leconey was again an interested listener.

Miss Collins, a sister of the murdered woman, testified that Lingo ate breakfast at the Collins farm on the morning of the murder. The sleeves of his flannel shirt were ragged, but not torn. She added that her sister lived happily with her husband.

County Physician Isard testified that he had examined the body of the murdered woman and that death was due to a wound inflicted by a razor or some other sharp instrument.

THE ENGINE RAN AWAY.

Terrific Explosion Caused by the Bursting of a Three-Ton Fly Wheel.

DANBURY, Conn., March 6.—The breaking of a governor belt on an engine in Green & Fanton's hat factory caused the engine to "run away," and the increased speed caused the three-ton fly wheel to burst. The explosion was so terrific that nearly every one in the building was thrown down.

Flying iron shattered the floors and roof for 50 feet, and a piece weighing half a ton fell on the factory of Davenport & Vorgal and broke in 20 feet of the roof. Several pieces went through the trimming room where 60 girls were at work and caused a panic. Two girls, Lizzie Feely and Katie Lagoon, leaped out of the window 25 feet from the ground and received internal injuries.

LABOR LEADERS INDICTED.

Coke Strikers Will be Tried for Assault on Pit Boss Louden.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., March 6.—The grand jury of Fayette county indicted the strikers and labor leaders who were prosecuted for assaulting Thomas Louden, pit boss at W. J. Rainey's Fort Hill works.

The operators of the Pennsylvania Coke Works have effected a settlement of the wage troubles with their employes and their plant will be started to-morrow. The workers are to receive the old scale of wages until the new scale is signed and all non-union men now at work will be discharged. There is great rejoicing over the victory.

Organized Labor and the World's Fair.

CHICAGO, March 6.—The executive committee of the World's Fair directory has practically agreed to concede the demand of organized labor in the city for an eight-hour day and the appointment of a board of arbitration. These are two of the five propositions submitted to the directory by the labor committee. As to the employment of union labor, as far as possible, a minimum rate of wages of $1.50 per day of eight hours for unskilled labor, the executive committee is not ready to commit itself. The whole subject will come up for final disposition to-night.

Deadlock in the New York Senate.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 6.—The struggle in the State Senate over the change in the rules proposed by the Republicans, depriving the Lieutenant-Governor of the privilege of naming a Senator to preside in his absence, when the President pro tempore is present, resulted in a deadlock. The day was passed without the transaction of business, dilatory motions and debates, often heated, taking up the time. Two messages from the Governor were announced, but neither could be received.

A. O. U. W. Officers Elected.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 6.—The New York State Grand Lodge, Ancient Order United Workmen, elected Charles H. Corbett of Sherman, Grand Master; A. C. Harwick of Penn Yan, Grand Foreman; B. E. Meade of Brooklyn, Grand Overseer, and N. J. Horton of Dunkirk, Grand Recorder.

No More Secret Cremations.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 6.—The remarkable secrecy observed during the cremation of Emma Abbott two weeks ago has caused a change in Pittsburg city regulations. It has been decided a dangerous privilege to cremate secretly, and hereafter a public permit must be taken out as in the case of burial.

Jack McAuliffe's Pool Room Raided.

NEW YORK, March 6.—The pool room owned by Jack McAuliffe, the prize-fighter, in Brooklyn was raided by the police. McAuliffe and six employes were held in $1,000 bail. The pool room had been opened only a few days and was the only place of the kind in Brooklyn.

An Ovation to Chris Magee.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 6.—Chris Magee of Pittsburg is here on his first visit of the season and it has naturally created a flutter. He held a levee in one of the Senate's private rooms, nearly every Senator paying his respects to him. He is keeping his business very quiet.

High School Burned.

[illegible] and two [illegible] were discovered in the Monroe High School early in the morning, but too late to save the building. Two young men, Thos. Pemberton and Albert Bost, perished in the flames.

THE TORIES TRIUMPH

Sir John Macdonald Returned to Power in Canada.

THREE MINISTERS DEFEATED.

The Liberals Reduce the Conservative Majority to 15.

The Tories Are Elated Over Their Small Victory—Several Political Surprises—The Liberals Predict that Sir John Will Soon Have to Appeal to the Country Again.

TORONTO, March 6.—After one of the hottest campaigns of his 40 years of political life Sir John Macdonald has again been returned to power, but with a sadly reduced majority. The majority of 31 which he had when he dissolved Parliament is diminished to about 15.

In Ontario his former majority of 36 is reduced to less than five in Quebec, which was usually been his great stronghold, his majority of 15 is changed to a minority of about seven, or a net loss of over 20 seats.

The maritime provinces, where the Liberals were sanguine of making a clean sweep, disappointed all of their expectations and are virtually the means of sustaining the government.

Little change was expected in the North Western and Pacific provinces where the government had a majority of 17 in the last Parliament. This representation is practically unchanged.

Several Surprises.

There were a number of surprises in the election returns. John Carling, Minister of Agriculture, London, Ont., was defeated by George F. Foster, Minister of Finance, and formerly Minister of Marine and Fisheries, in Kings County, New Brunswick, and Hon. C. H. Colby, President of the Privy Council, in Stanstead, Quebec. The other Cabinet Ministers were re-elected.

Sir John Macdonald polled a surprising vote in Kingston, where the Liberals expected to defeat him. His majority of 17 at the last election is increased this time to over 300. Hon. Peter Mitchell, Minister of Marine in the last Liberal Cabinet, was defeated in Northumberland, New Brunswick. All the other prominent Liberal leaders were re-elected, including Laurier, Cartwright, Mills and Charlton.

The Conservatives are not indulging in any great amount of jubilation. Their losses in the battle, both officers and men, is not calculated to imbue them with any great amount of hilarity.

The Liberals are greatly encouraged by the showing they made in the election and confidently assert that Sir John cannot carry on the government with his meagre majority and will ere long be forced to make another appeal to the country, when they expect to defeat him.

THE HORSE THIEF SAFE.

Governor Hill Refuses Another Requisition from Connecticut's Executive.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 6.—Governor Hill coolly defies his critics. He was presented with another requisition from Connecticut, signed "Morgan G. Bulkeley, Governor," and asked for the return of John I. Colbert, accused of stealing a horse at Danbury, Conn., and now languishing in Auburn, N. Y., prison cell.

The Governor said "No." He "would not hand over a prisoner on the strength of a requisition signed by an individual who is not the Governor of Connecticut."

In a thousand-word opinion the Governor declares that Judge Morris was elected Governor of Connecticut. He says he has proof to back the assertion. Bulkeley, he says, is a usurper. "Morris is acting as Governor of the Nutmeg State so far as he is permitted to do so."

Kelly Will Send More.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 5.—The news that Gov. Hill had again refused to recognize Gov. Bulkeley caused no little surprise. Gov. Bulkeley said that while it was a shameful proceeding on the part of Gov. Hill, he would continue to base requisitions on New York's Governor as often as he believed proper. It was but a waste of money, he said, but it was his duty, and he proposed to do it.

The United States the Promised Land.

LONDON, March 6.—The British emigration returns show that the United States is still regarded as the promised land by the greater number of British emigrants. For the month of February alone the emigration to the United States far exceeds that of all other countries combined, being 10,000 to a total of 14,000. Australia comes next, Canada ranking third.

Think He is Jack the Ripper.

DUBLIN, March 6.—The man Gavan, guilty of the murderous stabbing in a train at Inchicore, has been decided to be sane. He has been in prison twice for stabbing people without any apparent motive, and the police are impressed with the likeness of the descriptions of Jack the Ripper.

Strange Case in Prison.

VIENNA, March 6.—It has transpired that Herman Markovitz and a female accomplice, who tried to kill King Milan in 1882, were confined in prison. The exposure has created such a sensation that Milan now declares that Gerasanine, who was Premier at the time, shall institute an inquiry as to the facts.

Bishop Keane After the Parnellites.

DUBLIN, March 6.—There is considerable [illegible] over the [illegible] of the Bishop Keane of the diocese of Down, Connor and Dromore. The Bishop practically excommunicates Catholic supporters of Mr. Parnell.

BATTLE WITH A MANIAC.

Officers Have a Desperate Struggle With a Madman Armed With an Axe.

WATERBURY, Conn., March 6.—Confronted with a madman armed with a keen-edged axe, Sheriff McDonald and his assistants were placed in a critical position. The maniac was George Nichols, who was released from the Middletown Insane Asylum last year as cured.

After his release Nichols went to Simondsville, where he fortified himself in a hut, which he called his castle.

Sheriff McDonald was sent to capture him. Arriving at the hut, Nichols was found sitting on a small stool outside. Lying across his lap was a keen-edge axe.

When the officers approached he got up and would not let them come any nearer.

Sheriff McDonald calmed his fears by giving him some cigars and telling him that he wanted to buy some land, which Nichols thinks that he owns in the vicinity.

When the men saw a chance they rushed at Nichols and bore him to the ground. One of the men was severely bitten in the hand by Nichols. The insane man was driven to Waterbury. By the time the officers had reached that point they were covered with blood which flowed from injuries given them by Nichols, who kept up a continual scratching and biting.

Nichols will be taken to the Middletown Insane Asylum.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Marion A. Taggart left town to-day to visit friends at Cincinnati.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Chapman, of Eighth street and Central avenue, have removed from Plainfield.

Arrangements for the funeral of the late Jeremiah VanWinkle have not yet been completed. They will be announced to-morrow.

The Rev. F. E. McAllister, of Trinity church, Elizabeth, will preach at Holy Cross church this evening. Service will begin at half-past seven o'clock.

Edward Nelson, ticket agent at the North avenue railway station, is very ill with congestion of the lungs. Pneumonia is feared, but Dr. Fritts, who is in attendance, hopes to ward off that disease.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills is just now holding a series of meetings at Hudson, N.Y., several churches co-operating in the work there. At the close of these special services the evangelist will speak a week at his home, Providence, R. I., preaching daily at the Plymouth Congregational church, of which his brother the Rev. Thornton A. Mills, is pastor. His next place of labor will be Westfield, where he will begin March 14.

JUMPING ON KYTE, NOW.

He is Accused of Voting for a "Villainous" Bill.

Yesterday's PRESS announced the glad tidings that the people's bill, allowing a contract to be made at once to build sewers in Plainfield, had passed, and that Assemblyman Kyte voted for it.

When the bill came up Assemblyman Potts offered the wicked amendment—said to be inspired by Councilman See of this city—which makes the companies who want to put the sewer down gain the consent of the real estate owners along the line of work and have one-quarter of them sign a contract. Of course that would have killed all the people's rights in the bill. They could have no sewers until the landlords were pleased to consent.

Assemblymen Line and Kyte of this county, objected to the amendment and it was lost. The bill was then passed in its original form. But until it read THE PRESS, the discarded organ of Mr. Kyte's party on Somerset street did not know how that Republican Assemblyman had voted, or even that the bill had passed. The organ measured others by itself, and supposed Mr. Kyte would vote against anything a Democrat proposed whether the people suffered or not. So the organ said the bill was "villainous" and implied that everyone who voted for it was a horse thief and a sot.

Poor Mr. Kyte! That thus so soon your turn should come. 'Tis but a lesson though that such as he would teach you. There's naught that thou should'st vote for if from Democratic source it come. The people's rights be—you know what. Kill evermore their interests and their welfare blast, rather than that a drop of praise should fall on one who is not loved of "Mc & Carey."

Street Cars a Sure Thing Now.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company filed articles of incorporation with the Clerk of Union county at Elizabeth yesterday. The shares of stock number 500, of which Elias S. Ward, of Newark, Thomas Nevins, of Orange, and Chandler W. Riker, of Clinton Township, own 164 shares each. The other incorporators are John B. Brown, Levi Hetfield, James Jackson and John T. Fritts, all of Plainfield, and each of whom own two shares. The company's capital is $50,000, and it is expected to have the railroad built and in complete operation by next Fall.

A CURE of unusual severity developed into a difficulty decidedly catarrhal in all its characteristics, threatening a return of my old chronic malady, ca arrh. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm completely eradicated every symptom of that painful and prevailing disorder.—E. W. Warner, Rochester, N. Y.

AGAIN A SUCCESS.

Plainfield's Choral Society at its Second Private Concert Introduces a Fresh Soprano and a New Tenor, and Renders a Programme Both Light and Heavy, That is Particularly Agreeable.

PEOPLE shivered in their seats last evening when the second private concert of the Plainfield Choral Society opened with Gade's "Spring's Message." A Plainfield audience is always cold in enthusiasm, but last night they were cold in body—their faces were turned towards the chorus singing, "Oh! welcome, voice of balmy Spring," but chills crept up and down their backs.

This discomfort, however, was soon forgotten in the excitement of expectancy and the comfort of realization. THE PRESS had disclosed the secret that a young girl yet unknown in the more public musical circles, was to be introduced, and that a treat was in store for all. She warmed that audience thoroughly, before she finished.

This lady, Miss Ella Wernig, was well received. She is very young; which fault—if it be one—time will remedy. Her voice is clear and very flexible. Her first selection, Polonaise, "Mignon," by Ambroise Thomas, displayed her powers of execution. Her articulation and rhythm is excellent and her intonation pure, as was especially evident after a succession of difficult intervals and runs without accompaniment. She was recalled, and sang very sweetly, "Winds in the Trees," by the same composer.

Miss Marion Weed, who has won many friends since her first appearance here over a year ago, became more of a favorite than ever, last evening. She sang with pure and mellow tone, and her solo, "The Heart's Spring Time," by Wickede, with its encore "Swing, Robin, Swing," by Neidlinger, were among the most enjoyable selections of the evening. Her appearance also adds greatly to her charm. Her solos, as Armida, in The Crusaders, were also well rendered, though the almost continuous hard singing very slightly affected the intonation toward the end.

Wm. J. Lavin was, on the whole, satisfactory. His solo, Romanza, "Celeste," by Verdi, was rendered quite dramatically, but he spoiled the ending by taking the last note falsetto. His voice is light, and he sang with forced tone, which, after Rinaldo's many solos in The Crusaders, told upon his voice.

Carl E. Dufft was as fine as ever. The only disappointment expressed in him was that his only solo in the first part of the programme was the one from Lohengrin, which was not of his own choosing. He sang, however, in that and as Peter the Hermit in The Crusaders, with rich and even tone and was altogether pleasing. By the way, the Prayer from Lohengrin did not come up to what was expected of it. The quintette was out of tune in the first place. The chorus did very well, but there was a feeling of uncertainty throughout.

"Still as the Night," by Bohm, arranged and adapted by Mr. Fitzhugh, with humming accompaniment, was very pretty and well rendered. "When Love and I went Maying" showed that the Choral Society can sing that style music if they try. It was given with a lightness and delicacy unusual.

Gade's "Crusaders" at its third appearance, was better rendered than ever. The attacks were good—notably in the midst of Armida's and Rinoldo's solos and duetts. The Chorus of the Spirits of Darkness was delicately rendered. The songs of the Sirens and the Crusaders, were also very good, together with the "Jerusalem" chorus.

The orchestration was excellent throughout The Crusaders, though, of course, too loud at times, and though the horns were once noticeably behind. The accompaniments of the soloists in the first selections were very enjoyable.

Resistless Logic That Went for Naught.

(From The Unionist-Gazette.)

That was a fine argument made before the Keys investigating committee by Craig A. Marsh, Esq., counsel for contestant, on Monday. It took place in the Senate Chamber. Mr. McDermott kept away till it was about concluded and then gave a short address. Mr. Marsh went over the evidence with resistless logic. He rose to the full height of the occasion when he exclaimed: "I know it requires moral courage of a high standard for a man to lay aside his party claims at such a time as this to do what conscience says is right and duty demands, but this is a memorable occasion in which it will be a grand thing to do right." Mr. Marsh is entitled to full credit for handling the case admirably from beginning to end.

The Usual March Fake.

The first shad to be caught in the Raritan river was captured by "Tony" Wason, Wednesday. He had set a shad net just below the dam. The fish was a roe, weighing only two ounces short of five pounds. Mr. Wason carefully packed it on ice and sent it to the Executive mansion at Trenton, where it formed an important part of Gov. Abbett's dinner last night.

OBITUARY.

Jeremiah VanWinkle.

Jeremiah VanWinkle died at his home on Central avenue at three o'clock this morning. Though he had for a number of years been an invalid, his death was very sudden.

Jeremiah VanWinkle was born at Jersey City Heights in 1825. To-morrow would have been the sixty-sixth anniversary of his birth. His father was Daniel G. VanWinkle, who died about three years ago. His mother, Rachael Van Winkle, is also deceased.

In the Fall of 1845 the VanWinkle family removed to the neighborhood of New Market. The succeeding years of Jeremiah's early manhood found him alternately selling groceries in Oliver Runyon's Plainfield store, plying carpentry tools at Jacob Thorn's shop, and teaching school. As he was possessed of a good education he advanced steadily upward, and was soon found occupying positions of high trust. For a time he was book-keeper for the Chicago house of Titsworth Bros., and later assisted in the management of the Titsworths' clothing business in New York. Then he became teller in the First National Bank of Plainfield, and held that position a number of years. About ten years ago he was stricken with paralysis, and from that time his health failed him altogether. From 1871 till 1886, inclusive, he served as City Treasurer of Plainfield, continuously, being re-elected each year. His ill-health compelled him to withdraw from the office at the close of 1886. He served the city for years as active fireman, President of the Fire Board, and Chief of the Fire Department. He was a member of the committee that first introduced the use of steam fire-engines in Plainfield. He was a member, and for years an official, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and his memory will long be revered as that of a thoroughly honest, upright Christian man.

He leaves a wife and eight children. His first wife, Isabella, daughter of Elisha Runyon, to whom he was married about 1850, died when was at Chicago, about 1853. His surviving wife is his first wife's sister Violet. The sisters were nieces of the venerable Abraham Runyon, father of Chancellor Theodore Runyon, who died recently at Jeremiah's late residence. Jeremiah was a brother of John H., the counselor, ex-Mayor of North Plainfield and formerly Corporation Counsel of this city.

The Ordinance is Already Dead.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Twenty-five dollars a year is a good deal of money for a man to pay, who has a living to get, a horse to feed, and, in most cases, a family to support. It is a great convenience to housekeepers to have fruit and vegetables brought to their door when they have no time to go to the store, or when their children are too young to be left alone. It would be well for the men whose influence threatens to bring about the proposed increase in tax to look in the Bible and read what God says about oppressing the poor.

LIVE AND LET LIVE.

Plainfield, N. J., March 4.

[Had the tender-hearted correspondent read THE PRESS of Tuesday, March 3, thoroughly, she would have known that the ordinance proposing an increase in peddlers' license fees was unanimously killed by the Common Council on its third reading, and that the tax therefore remains the same as hitherto.]

Big Engines on the Jersey Central.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company has recently placed in service on its fast "Blue Imperial" trains between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington three new engines, which are said to be the finest and fastest ever built in this country. They have driving wheels 6 feet 6 inches high, and cylinders 20 inches by 24. They attract great attention on their trips through Plainfield. Another recent addition to the motive power of the company is eight powerful ten-wheel passenger engines, designed for service on the mountain divisions. These are the heaviest ever constructed, each weighing 67½ tons. One of these machines performs the work heretofore requiring two of the ordinary class, and takes the heavy express trains up the mountain grades with ease.

Good Work at the Reform Club.

The Reform Club had a rousing meeting last night. Twelve signed the pledge, and several old members who had backslidden renewed their broken vows and were welcomed back to the fold. A set of resolutions adopted, extolling Councilman Ackerman for his consistent vote against all liquor licenses, will be published in these columns to-morrow.

—The Tea and Coffee Growers' Association make important announcements in their new advertisement to-day.

Who would feed children with morphine? and yet, a great many cough medicines contain that very thing. Hires' Cough Cure is absolutely free from poison, and is an absolutely safe remedy for pulmonary troubles. Let no dealer talk you into taking anything else.

By innumerable cures, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has won for itself a most enviable reputation.

I've been suffering for the past three weeks with a strained wrist. I tried Salvation Oil, and find myself, after having used one bottle, entirely cured. CHAS. KETZER, 199 Mulberry street, Baltimore, Md.

WORKED HER OWN RUIN.

Jennie Wiley's Slanders on Her Parents Answered by a Relative.

NOTORIOUS Jennie Wiley, granddaughter of the late Alexander Wiley of this city, the young woman who is locked up at Elizabeth on a charge of killing the six-year-old colored child, Pearl Beekman, is, as already stated in these columns, a daughter of Clinton Wiley of Jersey City. She told a pathetic story to a PRESS reporter of how she was turned away from home by her father because she persisted in wanting to marry a man not of his choice. She said that finding herself homeless she was driven to a life of shame to save herself from starvation. She appealed to her relatives for aid, she said, but they refused her help, and she was finally picked up by a woman who gave her food and shelter, gained her confidence and then tempted her to lead a bad life. The story was false on the face of it, for she gave no reason why the man her father objected to did not marry her after she had been driven from home for him, except that "he died." Nor does she explain why all her relatives took sides against her.

A reporter interviewed a relative of the girl the other day. He preferred not to have his name mentioned in the matter but he talked freely about the girl's career. Upon being informed of the story she had told THE PRESS, he said, "That is all false to begin with." She was never driven from home nor did we ever know that she wanted to marry anyone. She went with the ball players around here a great deal and I think it is to them she owes her downfall.

"On the night she left home for good, she started out the door to go to a store near by. Her brother cautioned her to return in an hour, as the old folks were out. 'You have been staying out too much of late,' he said, 'be sure to come back in an hour at the outside.' With a toss of her head she crossed the threshold. We never saw her since. We never heard of her again except through outsiders."

From her present attitude I think she is trying to gain public sympathy to save her from the gallows or a long term of imprisonment. God knows, I pity the girl, but there was really no excuse for her conduct. From first to last it was her own doing."

Jennie still shows evidence of her former beauty and of the good breeding she received from her mother—that mother that is now lying almost at death's door as a direct result of Jennie's misconduct. So sick is she that her relatives carefully keep all newspapers from the house where she lies, for fear the news of Jennie's last escapade would kill her.

WON'T LEGALIZE BOOKMAKING.

The Jersey Race-Track Bills to be Smothered in Committee.

A leading Democrat said at Trenton, yesterday, what THE PRESS said a week ago—that the race-track bills would be smothered in the House Committee on Revision of the Laws. If racing is to be continued on the tracks in this State, the managers will have to take the risk of interference on the part of the authorities, and the bookmakers will be subject to arrest and punishment as heretofore. Early in the session certain members of the Legislature were in a mood to pass the bills, believing that such courses as Linden and Monmouth Park were entitled to protection, but since such a hue and cry has been raised against the betting evil the Legislature has decided that bookmaking shall not be legalized.

There is a story that the Legislature will pass the bills next week, in order that Gov. Abbett may veto them and get another such round of applause as he received last year when he refused to sign similar bills.

Leading members of the Legislature deny this, however, and predict that the bills will be killed by the open and direct methods should they emerge from the hands of the committee.

Friends of Dumb Animals.

The meeting of the Union County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals held Tuesday night was well attended by members from Plainfield, Elizabeth, Westfield, and elsewhere. A number of new members were elected, among them several ladies.

The president reported a number of cases looked up, and convictions made. The society needs the hearty co-operation of every person in the county who is interested in the welfare of dumb animals, and asks that all such persons join the society, and by reporting any case of cruelty to the nearest "Special Agent" help the good work along.

The society proposes to have agents in all the out-lying towns, and hopes soon to see the day when cock fights will be a thing of the past, and the inhabitants will not be under the painful necessity of seeing sick and lame horses driven and beaten on the streets.

The city and county officers are bound by law to assist the society to the full extent of their power, and are working in hearty sympathy with the special agents of the society.

It costs but fifty cents a year to become a member of this society, and each member can do much good work.

A FANWOOD MAN WANTS TO KNOW.

Extravagance of Public Funds. He Says, and Nothing to Show for the Money.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—As the township election of Fanwood approaches, the denizens of the Plains hold pow-wows nightly, ranged upon sugar barrels, nail kegs, and the various other kinds of bulky merchandise that constitute the make-up of a country store. As each of those assembled delivers his oration between the whiffs of tobacco smoke—the ending sentence of which is invariably, "I tell you what: it is time this present township ring was broken up!"—the spokesman of the group emphasizes the declaration with, "By gosh, you are right, by thunder!"

While one of these pow-wows was in session, a stranger happened in their midst. His curiosity was awakened by their indignant attack on the town's lawmakers. He ventured to inquire why they so vigorously attacked their officials, and was shown the town report, by the spokesman of this conclave. "See here"—was said—"last Fall the Collector sent out invitations to step up to the Captain's office and settle. This started a commotion among the taxpayers. When they found that they were assessed $3 38 on each $100 valuation they wondered where all of this money was to go. Now the annual town report is given to them, and they are figuring to see what has become of this money.

"The first snag that they encounter is that of the road moneys. The tax bills show that in Scotch Plains Road District No. 2, they have paid $1.30 on $100 valuation. They voted last Spring that 69 per cent. of this should be expended for crushed stone for the roads; 38 per cent. to purchase fine stone for sidewalks; and 23 per cent. for repairing roads and labor. The total amount to be expended on roads and sidewalks amounted to about $1,700. Now what have we to show for it? Practically nothing. The roads are in a worse condition than they were a year ago. Our sidewalks are in a horrible state, and the money is all expended. The report shows that $591.19 was expended for crushed stone. The overseer received $1,113.18 for work on roads and sidewalks. Take the report of 1889 for this same district. It shows $463.27 expended for crushed stone, $373.82 paid to the overseer for labor, preparing roads for stone, spreading stone, hauling stone upon roads, and covering the stone with gravel. What a contrast! A larger surface of roads dressed with stone, for less money! This year gravel was considered unnecessary, and mud taken from the gutters was considered preferable to to gravel for top-dressing the crushed stone."

He again glanced at the reports: "You see here, for 1889, that the salary of one of the town committeemen is placed at $134.91, in payment for the performances of various duties encumbered upon him by the statutes, and also supervising the placing of the crushed stone upon the roads of the township. This was the first year that the town council assumed the supervision of placing crushed stone upon the roads. The old adage, 'a new broom sweeps well,' was forcibly exemplified, as shown by the report of that year, 1889. The stone was hauled by contract, spread by contract, covered by contract, and this accounts for the showing of a good record for that year. The report of 1890 shows that the same town official for the same services, receives an increased salary of $162.30. The overseer was permitted to perform the work by the day, employing his own teams, and to suit his own convenience. Do not the figures and statement show that it is about time to have a change in town affairs? Is it to be wondered at that the tax payers clamor for a change? The tax-payers have always exhibited in a substantial manner a generous disposition, to have good roads. They have often expressed themselves that they want good roads. It would be an inducement to bring people here to live. But we want also a low taxation to couple with such inducement. We don't want to show that our rates are almost double of the city of New York. Are you surprised that we feel indignant at being taken advantage of by some people, and that we do not receive an equivalent for our money expended? But cannot it be said that history is repeating itself? The statutes show that in the early history of the State the office of pathfinder was created, and the duties were defined by law in order to make the roads passable. For many years the office of road overseer has been sought for by many individuals as a sinecure whose only object is to perform as little work as possible and receive as large compensation for services as the people can bear. It is the custom for the ruling power of the star chamber politicians to dictate to the makers of the ticket that they must bait it on the tail end with liberal wages for the workers on the road, to catch the labor vote. These 'bait' wages are always in excess of what could be obtained for the same kind of work elsewhere."

Is it not time, in this enlightened age, that the legislators should repeal these old customs and give the people a law providing for a better system of road working, and for the people receiving an equivalent for their money? There is another important question that our legislators should also give attention to, and that is the providing of some law whereby the roads could be prevented from being all cut up when the frost is coming out. We have two stone crushers situated at the foot of the mountain. To reach a market for their stone they have to haul their 3 and 4 ton loads over the village roads. The rims on their wheels are narrow. They all follow in one track, and when the road bed is soft it does not take long to cut the road bed hub deep with ruts. This is done by men who contribute but a small share towards keeping the roads in repair. Such people should be compelled by law to do their full share towards keeping roads in repair. Other States have statutes requiring the use of wide-rimmed wheels, and provide a fine for hauling heavy loads when the roads are soft. We require some such protection. Mr. Assemblyman from this district, please assist your constituents.

NEW JERSEY'S REFORM SCHOOL.

Over 500 Wayward Boys Cared for During the Year.

The twenty-sixth annual report of the State Reform School shows that 535 wayward boys were cared for during the past year. There were 372 boys at the school at the beginning of the year, and 121 were committed during the year; 189 were discharged, leaving 346 in the institution, 300 white and 46 colored. Of the 121 committed, 33 per cent. were of foreign born parentage and 34 per cent. did not know where their parents were born; 58 per cent. were but thirteen years of age or under, and three were but nine years old.

Atlantic, Cape May, Mercer, Ocean and Salem counties each sent 1 boy; Gloucester and Hunterdon each 2; Cumberland, 3; Middlesex and Morris each 5; Union, 6; Bergen, 7; Monmouth, 8; Camden, 13; Passaic, 14; Essex, 16, Hudson, 35; 103 were white and 18 colored; 69 were Protestants and 52 Catholics; 38 were committed for petit larceny; 14 for breaking and entering; 17 for entering and larceny; 11 for incorrigibility; 11 for vagrancy; 8 for disorderly conduct; 3 for malicious mischief; 11 for care, discipline and instruction; 37 had been previously arrested; 6 had used intoxicants; 86 had used tobacco; 78 were born in New Jersey and 11 in New York; 14 escaped from the institution.

The maintenance of the institution for the year cost $59,280.61.

To Build up South Plainfield.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company will soon begin the erection of a turntable at Bound Brook. They expect in the near future to make Bound Brook the terminus of the local New York trains. Since the Valley people have secured a route through to New York they are going to build up Oak Tree, South Plainfield, New Market and the other towns along their road and solicit local travel. Work was begun Monday on a route surveyed from Landsdown to Pittstown which will be known as the Pittstown branch of the L. V. R. R.

FIGHTING AN EXCISE BILL.

Opposition to the Measure Prepared by the Liquor Dealers of New York.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 6.—The Assembly Excise Committee gave a hearing on Mr. Schaaf's general excise bill providing for an entirely new excise law—the bill prepared by the liquor dealers of the State. Among those appearing were J. Noble Hayes and W. Harris Roome of the New York City Reform Club, Rev. W. W. Attebury of the New York Sabbath Committee, Father Walworth, Dr. McLeod of Albany and Dr. Andrew H. Smith, of the Church Temperance Society.

Rev. Mr. Attebury denied that workingmen were behind the bill or were its advocates. Certainly the workingmen's wives and families were not for it.

Senator McCarron spoke for the bill, saying that the present law had proved inefficient and this one was to take its place and make a good law. It might not be perfect, but it would be an improvement.

Father Walworth spoke against the bill. He said that every section of it breathed of immorality. It gave children the right to drink and defiled the Sabbath, which God Himself had made holy. It would only pass the Legislature by the aid of ungodly men, and every man who voted for it would have to answer at the throne of God for an action which meant damnation to thousands of souls.

There will be a further hearing next Wednesday evening.

BAD FOR THE SPINNERS.

The Clark Thread Company Strikers Will Not be Taken Back.

NEWARK, N. J., March 6.—The Clark Thread Company issue what they declare to be their final order.

It is to the effect that none of the old spinners will ever be taken back in the employ of the company under any circumstances.

When Treasurer Clark arrived home from Europe he went directly to the mill office and had a consultation with his son, J. Willie, and his nephew, W. Campbell Clark. The incidents of the strike since he left Newark were carefully gone over. A statement was given out that he had set the seal of approval on everything which had been done during his absence. Thus the expectation that the homecoming of the treasurer would bring about a change for the better for the strikers was dispelled.

SERVICEABLE KENNEL.

Plans Which Any Intelligent Youngster Can Execute.

Now a word about kennels. Of course, house dogs do not require any kennels. The best place for a pet dog to sleep in is a basket made for the purpose, with a rug or carpet bed. The basket should not be kept over night in the kitchen, as a dog that has the free run of a kitchen is apt to eat more than is good for it. If the dog is kept out-of-doors, it should have a kennel. There are a great many different kinds of kennels. Where more than one dog is kept on a place, as is the case with dog fanciers, the kennels are usually almost as big as a small barn. As few of my readers own a large number of dogs, I will pass this kind of kennels by with a word of advice: It is always best to give each dog a separate sleeping-place. Where several dogs are huddled together at night, breathing the same air, there is great danger of illness; and when a disease once appears it is apt to spread.

The artist has made a sketch of the single kennel that I think is the best that can be made, and I have seen almost every kind of dog-kennel that has ever been tried in this country. It is a little house about four feet long, two feet wide, and three feet high. It has a peaked roof, sloping on two sides. It has an adjustable bottom that can be removed when the kennel needs cleaning and disinfecting. It should stand on four posts, about six inches from the ground. In front of the kennel, strung on two posts, there should be a stout wire, about fifteen feet long, and about three feet above the ground. It should be about three feet from the door of the kennel. On this wire there should be an iron ring, and to this the dog's chain should be attached. The dog can run up and down the wire, going into and coming out of the kennel at will. This gives him exercise, and keeps him confined within limits at the same time. I should have said before that the kennel ought to be divided in the center by a partition. In the inner room the dog sleeps. If in winter-time the weather is too cold, a piece of carpet might be hung over the outer door.

So much for the kennel itself; now a word about its location. It should be set upon dry sandy ground, where the rain is quickly absorbed, and it should face the south, so as to be better protected from the winter winds. Every fortnight the kennel should be turned over, the bottom removed, and the interior thoroughly disinfected. Some good disinfectant, such as bichloride of mercury, should be applied with a brush to every crevice in the building, and it should be left with the interior exposed to the sun to air and dry. The best bedding for summer-time is made of cedar or pine shavings. In the winter-time nothing is better than rice straw. The kennel I have described is for a dog of the size of a collie or setter; if the dog be smaller, such as a fox-terrier, a smaller kennel will answer.—Harper's Young People.

A TRUE CAT STORY.

Some of the Remarkable Tricks Performed by a Baby's Pet.

I am going to tell you a story of my own every-day cat.

He is two years old and is named Paddy. I gave him this name myself when he was a tiny kitten.

My father and mother and I think that Paddy is a very bright, cute cat. I will now tell you why.

He jumps through a hoop, and over the back of a chair, and over a cane; but these are not the remarkable things. He really stands straight upon his hind legs and "begs" as you may have seen a dog do. Then he catches the meat in his mouth or paws. It is real fun to see him. I have never seen any other cat that could do this thing; and I have lived five years and a half.

The picture I send is one that my papa took so you all could see how cunning Paddy looks when he stands up.

My papa has a camera and he likes to take pictures of Paddy, and of me too.—Babyland.

A Matter of Taste.

Marjorie is very fond of raisins, and at the tea-table one night was picking them out of her cake and eating them, leaving the crumbled cake.

Her sister, thinking she would try the force of a good example, said: "I like my plums in my cake."

"I don't," replied Marjorie. "I like 'em best in my mout."—Harper's Young People.

A POKER-PLAYING CAT.

The Wonderful Intelligence of a Gambler's Feline Pet.

In a high-toned gaming-house at Wichita, Kan., a correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat was lately introduced to a sagacious cat that for the past few years has proved a veritable bonanza to his master. The animal belongs to a professional gambler known from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and goes by the euphonious name of Pete.

For centuries monkeys have made not only their own living but have furnished many a meal and countless nights of good lodging, to say nothing about the incidentals, for the swarthy sons of sunny Dagoland, but it has hardly been suspected that a cat could take the place of the monkey.

Pete plays cards, or at least takes such part in a poker game as entitles him to a rake off. When he was young, obscure and a waif the gambler, of whom he is now the constant companion, and who would as soon be without his wad as without his talisman—for as such he regards his pet—found him in a gutter in San Francisco and adopted him. That was eight years ago.

The superstitious master, like such distinguished poker players as the King of the Sandwich Islands, had an abiding faith in the efficacy of stroking a cat's tail as a means of changing luck, and for this purpose Pete was a constant visitor to the gambling houses frequented by the sport. Early in his business career Pete learned what some men never have sense enough to understand, and that is, that it pays to be both obliging and pleasant, and he cheers many a weary soul by the amusing way he has of straightening up the "thrown down" hands.

He invariably squats on the corner of the table, and when it comes to a "show down" and the chips are raked in, Pete then commences to get in his work for himself and his master. He extends his tail to the loser, who will, if he is a genuine gambler, invariably take hold of it and shake it. At the conclusion of this ceremony Pete reaches out his paw, picks out a red chip if a white one is not handy, starts to the bank and gets it cashed and then returns to his master with the "tin."

By this Napoleonic method of financiering Pete usually manages to rake in from one dollar to three dollars a night, and he has enough accumulations to keep him in indolence and luxury during the rest of his natural life. While not depraved, Pete is fond of his beer and generally disposes of a couple of glasses during a night's session.

WOMEN AND MARRIAGE.

Some of the Things Which Deter Them from Entering Such a State.

There are three general causes which bring marriage into disfavor (with women): philanthropy, higher education and self analysis, writes Mrs. Kate Gannett Wells in the North American Review. The first has been a powerful factor in its subtle influence against marriage. The mental atmosphere is permeated with the idea of responsibility for another's happiness. Woman now feels herself accountable for the welfare of humanity, and through the exercise of that responsibility has found occupation for mind and heart, which has prevented absorption in her own affairs.

Higher education has affected marriage, inasmuch as it has opened new avenues of employment for women, has fortified them for life as a whole, and has led them to regard marriage as an incident. It has given girls a communistic feeling which makes them prefer to teach where there are other teachers rather than to live on a hill-top and read aloud to their parents, or to retire to a farm or a tenement and bake and brew for their husbands. The higher education has separated marriage and motherhood. Almost all women love children, and would gladly use their knowledge for the delight and profit of a family, but they do not want the intervening marriage.

Analysis has advanced from being a method in text-books to the study of one's self. The age is analytic. Once work was so constant that married women did not realize their loneliness or the want of appreciation which befell them. Now society and the middle class have leisure to examine their states of mental solitude, and to see just where husbands are wanting.

FOR LITTLE PEOPLE.

MINDING MOTHER.

Boys, just listen, for a moment,
To a word I have to say:
Manhood's gates are just before you,
Drawing nearer every day;
Bear in mind while you are passing
O'er the intervening span,
That the boy who minds his mother
Seldom makes a wicked man.

There are many slips and failures
In this world we're living in,
Those who start with prospects fairest
Oft are overcome by sin;
But I'm certain that you'd notice,
If the facts you closely scan,
That the boy who minds his mother
Seldom makes a wicked man.

Then be guided by her counsel,
It will never lead astray.
Rest assured she has your welfare
In her thoughts by night and day.
Don't forget that she has loved you
Since the day your life began.
Ah, the boy who minds his mother
Seldom makes a wicked man.
—Mortimer C. Brown, in Yankee Blade.

BERT'S POULTRY YARD.

A Little Boy's Earnest Effort and the Good Results That Came From It.

Living near a quiet Western village was a widow with two children, a boy and a girl. This good woman was much respected in the neighborhood. She did general sewing for the wives and wove rag carpets. Her husband had been the village tailor, and at his trade made but a scanty living for his family. Upon his death it became necessary for her to move from the village, as in her destitute circumstances she could not pay the rent; besides the lot was not large enough for a good garden.

Friends interested themselves in her welfare, and a suitable house was soon provided. Of four farmers whose lands cornered, each donated an acre at the joining corners; other farmers and some of the villagers added their mite, and a small but comfortable cottage was erected thereon; also convenient buildings. Upon these premises the widow and her personal effects were moved, and she had lived there three years when our story opens.

Of course, she felt deeply indebted to her kind neighbors; but in so many ways had she assisted them in busy times or during sickness, they all felt that she was a blessing to the neighborhood, and willingly would have contributed more assistance, had she allowed it; but blessed with a vigorous constitution and good health, she quite easily provided for her little family, and besides had earned a good cow, some pigs and a few chickens.

Her little boy, Bert, was now eleven years old; indeed, old enough to begin scheming how he might do more for his mother than simply the chores. After due deliberation he counseled with his mother, and gaining her consent, began preparing for raising poultry for profit, instead of as merely a domestic supply. To begin business with, he had over thirty common fowls, six of the duck family, a pair of stately geese, two henturkeys and a big gobbler that was the boss of their little poultry world. With a trifling expense the hen-house was perfectly cleansed, and rearranged for convenience, and sundry other small matters attended to.

Early in the spring, one of the neighbors was compelled by business to go to the city, some twenty miles distant, where, as it chanced, a friend of his was extensively engaged in the poultry business. Knowing of Bert's inclinations in that direction, he kindly offered him a chance to go along and see the poultry yard and he also said his friend would undoubtedly give him many useful hints in regard to the business, and, what was still more important to Bert, would quite likely sell him some eggs, from thoroughbreds at reduced rates. Bert eagerly accepted the offer, and with the proceeds from the sale of a calf, he accompanied his friend.

The trip was of much interest to the lad, and many things in the city were wonderful to his sight, but when he got into the fancier's yards, his enthusiasm knew no bounds. Every thing was of interest to him, from the well ordered house, with its apartments of egg-room, heating-room, hatching rooms, feed-rooms, etc., to the well-kept yards, with their multitudes of inhabitants of many varieties. Having been made acquainted with Bert's circumstances by his friend, the kind fancier took great pains in showing every thing, and explaining use methods; and gave him much valuable information about rearing and caring for poultry. He also described the good qualities of various kinds, and told his young visitor which would be the most desirable and profitable varieties for him to begin with.

Before leaving the yard, Bert had bought two sittings each of black Hamburg, white Leghorn, and Plymouth rock chickens; also a sitting each of the famous bronze turkey, Toulouse geese and Rouen duck; and as a protection from hawks, added a half dozen Guinea fowl eggs. The poultrymen enjoined Bert to let no one have any of these kinds for less than fancier's prices, and gave him a price list of both fowls and eggs, but, in consideration of his youthfulness and circumstances, let him have his eggs at about one-fourth the regular price.

The following evening the happiest boy in four counties alighted at the widow's door with his baskets of much-prized eggs. As several of his hens had evinced a sitting disposition, he favored their inclinations inside of a week; also, after a small argument with his sister, who had three or four hens sitting on common eggs, he robbed them, and gave them a fresh start with the imported eggs. During the following weeks it seemed as though his hens, ducks and turkeys entered into the spirit of his undertaking, as many of them hatched two broods and a few even three.

The house, stable and hen-house being on the same acre lot with their shrubbery and fruit trees, the three remainder lots were cultivated. The two lots across the road were put entirely into corn, while the adjoining acre contained a half-acre potatoes and a half-acre of miscellaneous garden vegetables. [illegible] sitting hens, and having these extra lots of garden to care for, our young [illegible] was very busy; indeed, had not the adjoining farmers kindly cultivated his crops in fine shape, he would quite likely have been beaten by the weeds, although working manfully. His mother and little Anna supplemented his efforts by working in the garden, and largely caring for the poultry. Through the season this was the busiest and perhaps happiest family in the township; and their yard was a lively scene, with its clucking mothers and swarms of young, for whose welfare little Anna was ever anxious, and in almost constant attendance during the day time.

Bert was well paid for his energetic industry. The corn crop was large, and trading part of it to the farmers for wheat, oats or buckwheat, he had more than feed enough for the coming year. Some of it was sold, while the balance was sent to mill to be ground into meal for the next season's young, and also to repay the neighbor of whom he had borrowed for the present year's feeding. During the season family expenses had been fairly maintained from the sale of garden stuff and butter; winter supplies were bought by the potato-and corn crops, and the proceeds from a turkey shoot, and with the income from his surplus poultry, he built poultry fences, added somewhat to buildings, made other necessary improvements, and subscribed for a poultry journal.

The beginning of the new year he was able to take an accurate account of his stock, and found he then had on hand nine bronze turkeys, twenty-one black Hamburgs, fifteen white Leghorns, eleven Plymouth Rocks and twelve common hens; six Toulouse and twenty common geese, nine Rouen and twenty-three common ducks, and four Guinea fowls. Likewise he was able to figure up some losses incident to the business, mainly owing to wet weather, lice or accidental deaths. Anna knew exactly the whole history of the untimely deaths, for she was the self-appointed sexton of a carefully-guarded little cemetery under the lilacs, where she had shed not a few sympathizing tears.

The succeeding season was so successful that the young poultryman laid up a snug sum over and above all expenses, and began to speak of needing more ground; and when a third season was crowned with success, he felt justified in buying a ten-acre tract, through which the creek ran—his mother, of course, being willing—and the close of the fourth year they moved house, barn and stock upon it. The next year was one of unusual activity; trees and shrubbery to move; yards to inclose; new grounds to improve; crops to care for in the old-home lots. However, Bert was equal to the occasion, and, in addition to these duties, he built an inexpensive, but strong, dam across the creek at the lower end of his field, thereby making a fine field of action for his swarm of water fowls.

In another season he had added a horse and cart to his possessions, as a much-needed help in marketing, hauling feed and offal from the butcher shop and in cultivating his crops, thus curtailing expenses, as he had in the past paid for such work. He was now thoroughly established in a growing and paying business, with every thing convenient for its successful continuance. Besides he had the comforting satisfaction of knowing every thing was paid for, and he had the full respect of every person in the entire community, the entire confidence of every business man in the neighboring towns and a fair-sized bank account in his favor. Lastly, he had a good, comfortable home, presided over by the kindest, happiest and proudest of mothers, and a sunny-tempered and helpful sister. Assuredly, he felt many times blest.

"Tall oaks from little acorns grow" is a trite saying, and the reader may well think little Bert verified it.—West Shore.

Being Polite.

It is never too early to begin to be polite. I know a little girl, who is only twelve years old now, who for at least five years has written a letter acknowledging any courtesy received that she could not acknowledge by voice. She always answers all letters within a reasonable time; every little gift, no matter how small, is acknowledged at once, and this has become such a habit that if any thing prevents her writing it distresses her greatly. Being polite is as much of a habit as is cleaning her nails or brushing her teeth. No one will ever hear that little girl, when she grows to be a woman, say that she had no time to write a letter if it is impolite to neglect writing it. No one will ever hear her say that she has no time to return a call or acknowledge any social attention. She will make time, for she will feel that it is as much a part of her duty to acknowledge and return social attentions as it is to keep her house clean, or care for her children, or do any of the things that our mothers have to do.—Interior.

CHILDREN'S WISE SAYINGS.

—"Can you count far now, Tommy?" "Yeth. I can count ath far ath J."—Harper's Young People.

—A little girl sent out to look for eggs returned without success, complaining that all the hens were standing about doing nothing.

—"My dear child, what are you crying so for?" "Oh, dear! My father has gone and lost me, and I know my mother will scold him when he gets home."

—A little girl who was studying English history was asked what the Prince of Wales would be when the Queen died. "Please, sir, an orphan," replied the scholar.

—"Time is money, my boy. Remember that." "I think there must be some mistake about that, father. It's so hard to pass in some localities."

—"In what part of the body is the liver?" asked a teacher, while examining the class in physiology; and she was a good deal surprised when the tall boy replied: "South of the lungs."

—"What are you crying about, little man?" "I gotter stummich ache." "Does it hurt much?" "Oh, I don't mind that; but I only had one piece 'C. pie. Couldn't had more stummich ache if I'd eat two pieces—boo—hoo—hoo!"

JOHN LIKED FUN.

A Horse That Made Sport of His Four Young Masters.

John was tricky. Those who thought him a "beauty," smart and obedient, knew that he was mischievous and full of his "jokes."

John certainly did have a love of fun in his "make up" which made him a jolly companion for four boys who in turn did like to "plague the poor old chap," the family horse.

John was black-coated, strong and intelligent. His tricks were not vicious ones. He never kicked, balked nor ran away, being sober and well conducted when driven or ridden by the senior members of the family.

He had a fondness for his master who petted him a great deal. The women could drive him. He brought them home in just the same condition they started out.

It was only with the boys of the family that John ventured to "joke."

There were four of them—Ernest, Walter, Henry and Albert—bright young fellows who delighted to tickle John's nose with a fragrant smelling apple, snatching it away when he prepared to enjoy it.

John was a pig in his love for mellow ripe apples. The boys thought it fun to tease him a little and make him anxious to get it, before giving it up to him.

They really did teach him to play "hide and seek" with them.

One of his tricks was to sigh and swell up his body when being saddled, if one of the little boys was about to ride him.

Of course the saddle was invariably turned after they had ridden a little distance.

Another trick was snatching a cap from their heads and galloping away with it to the furthest corner, whinnying defiance to the capless youngster.

One May afternoon as I sat beside a window some boyish voices called: "We are going to ride out to Muddy Fork. John is lazy—don't have enough to do."

John looked at me, and I plainly saw fun in his eyes. He made a nip at an apple geranium and then went along as sober as judges are said to be.

His expression plainly said to me: "These four boys seated upon my back are hunting for fun; I'll help find it."

Ernest and Albert whistled gayly, Henry and Walter urged "lazy bones" along.

"Such a good horse as he is. It isn't every one that would carry such a load of restless boys," was my thought, as John slowly crept along, head down, apparently meditating deeply.

In an hour, four boys, wet and muddy, walked in at the gate, angry and ready to "have it out with that sly old horse."

"What has he done?" I inquired.

"Done!" chorused an indignant quartette of boyish voices. "He poked along as if he was almost asleep until we got into the water. All at once he laid down, spilled us off his back and just galloped back home."

"He did it on purpose, of course he did. He thinks he can play tricks on us little boys. He don't dare try 'em with the men."

"I'd like to pound his back," said one.

We went to the back gate and saw him standing there, looking meek and subdued, only—I detected a twinkle in his eyes.

He received a scolding which he did not heed. A few minutes afterward I saw him in the stable-yard with four boys perched upon his back.—Ella Guernsey, in Prairie Farmer.

Fond of Biting Off Noses.

A missionary, writing of the degraded condition of the people of the Gilbert islands, in the South Pacific, says: "The further you go north in the Gilbert islands the less you see of the horrid scars which on Tapitouea disfigures, or, as they think, distinguish all the male sex. But at the same time, as you go north, there seems a greater intent to kill than at the south, where the intention seems to be to lacerate and make the most horrid wounds, those which will produce the greatest amount of misery. One singular propensity of an excited Gilbert islander is to bite off noses. This accounts for the great number of noseless persons one meets. A few years ago one of them in his wrath climbed up and bit off the nose from the figurehead of the Morning Star! It has since been replaced with one of lead.

On Babies.

"Aunty, what have you brought me?" is Freddy's first question when visitors come.

His mother took him severely to task about it, and the little fellow promised "not to do so any more." A day or two after one of his aunts called again, and Freddy, with a triumphant glance at his mother, exclaimed:

"Aunty, what have you brought my little brother?"—Jury.

Try It for Yourself.

The time required for a journey around the earth, by a man walking day and night, without resting, would be 428 days; an express train, 40 days; sound at a medium temperature, 33½ hours; a cannon ball, 21½ hours; light a little over one-tenth of a second; and electricity passing over a copper wire, a little under one-tenth of a second.

CUTTINGS IN CORK.

How Boys and Girls Can Have Lots of Fun Without Expense.

The decoration of a small box in cork costs but little in labor and nothing in cash, particularly if a system of rosettes be devised, such as are here shown.

Make a couple of hundred of these carved roundels and glue them on in two rows, and you will hardly believe the result is your handiwork.

"Carved roundels" sounds very artistic, indeed. Perhaps a sketch, showing how the roundels are made, may quell any alarm the phrase may have inspired. Take a few old bottle-corks and cut them like this:

Hold your knife at half a right angle as you cut the cross-pieces, and then cut in from the sides, also at half a right angle; and in this way you will produce the "incised work."

THE WAY TO CUT THEM.

If you want four rays, make two cuts across; if you want six, make three in the manner shown by the artist where he has put the knife in.

The cork tree is said to be an oak yielding a valuable bark. It may not be inappropriate, therefore, to model out of cork another source of bark more or less worthless.

BULL-DOG.

Try a bull-dog. His body is one cork; his head is another; his legs are four matches; his tail is another match; his nose, his mouth, his eyes are made with a red hot skewer. To stick the head on to the body, use a double-pointed match, and thus give him the power of twisting his head round if you feel so inclined. A comical little fellow is this cork bull-dog, and when you get so far as a dozen of them they look very well indeed.

Having succeeded with a dog out of cork, try a stork out of cork, or any other bird more or less recognizable.

Materials for bird: One bottle-cork (used), two matches, one hairpin. Average cost, nothing; time, ten minutes.

Cut the body first. Cut the head out of one of the body fragments. Stick in the neck; stick on the head with the beak in it; stick on the legs; stick the legs in the stand. Can any thing be simpler?

Never chop a cork; cut it as if you were sawing it. Above all, do not use new corks; their roughness is their chief artistic merit.

To make a figure that will move, take four sticks for the arms and legs, cut a cork for his body and thrust in his limbs. Cut a round knob out of another cork, mortise in a nose, cut out a mouth, and, with a skewer or hairpin, burn out his eyes and buttons.

Then, with a piece of match, fix on his head, and if you can find some feathers, give him a topknot.

Cut a nick in the side of his right foot, and in his waist fix a couple of table forks. Then stand him on a string sloping from one end of the room to the other, and away he will go as gracefully as any live rope-walker.—Wm. Alva, in Golden Days.

ORIGIN OF DOLLS.

The Meaning of the Word "Doll" Explained at Length.

It is a safe assertion to make that every girl has at some time or other played with dolls; in fact, it is almost impossible to imagine a girl without a doll. Of course, the older ones have outgrown their dolls, and only keep the old favorites as souvenirs of childish days and pretty playthings, and it is quite likely that they would be puzzled to explain why they call the little image a "doll," and not, as the French do, a "puppet," or, with the Italians, a "bambino," or baby.

What is the meaning of the word "doll?" To explain, it is necessary to go back to the middle ages, when it was the fashion all over the Christian world for mothers to give their little children the name of a patron saint. Some saints were more popular than others, and St. Dorothea was at one period more popular than all.

Dorothea, or Dorothy, as the English have it, means a "gift from God." But Dorothea or Dorothy is much too long a name for a little, toddling baby, and so it was shortened to Dolly and Doll, and from giving the babies a nickname it was an easy step to give the name to the little images of which the babies were so fond.

"CONFIDENCE BEGETS LOVE."

CHILD. "Gran'ma, kiss me good-night. Sister is asleep, but we so love to hear you tell of all the ladies that call you Mother."

Mrs. PINKHAM. "Yes, darling, when you are older perhaps you may do as I have done."

CHILD. "Everybody loves you, gran'ma; I wish everybody would love me."

Mrs. PINKHAM. "Everyone will love you, my child, if they can confide in you."

The above dialogue tells its own story; even the little child, without knowing why her grandmother is so universally loved, sees in her face a light of intellectual sympathy that satisfies her. That sympathy has extended itself all over the world, for wherever civilized women exist, Mrs. Pinkham is known and reverenced. Send stamp for "Guide to Health and Etiquette."

Royal Baking Powde Leads All.

"The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, for I have so found it in many tests, made both for them and the U. S. Government. The Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable Baking Powder offered to the public.

"HENRY A. MOTT, PH. D."
Late Chemist for U. S. Government.

"All chemical tests to which I have submitted it have proved the Royal Baking Powder perfectly healthful and free from every deleterious substance. It is purest in quality and highest in strength of any Baking Powder of which I have knowledge.

"WM. McMURTRIE, E. M., PH. D."
Late Chemist-in-chief U. S. Dep't of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

"The strength of the Royal is shown to be 23 per cent. greater than any other.

"As a result of my investigations I find the Royal Baking Powder far superior to the others. It is pure, contains none but wholesome ingredients, and is of greatest strength.

"F. X. VALADE,
"Public Analyst, Ontario, Dominion of Canada."

The latest investigations by the United States and Canadian Governments show the Royal Baking Powder superior to all others in leavening strength.

Statements by other manufacturers to the contrary have been declared by the official authorities falsifications of the official reports.

DEPEW UNDER BAIL

Cornelius Vanderbilt Signs His Bond for $25,000.

SEVERAL OFFICIALS ARRESTED.

They Are Charged With Responsibility for the Deaths of the Tunnel Victims.

Directors Hunt and Miller to Surrender on Monday—The Directors of the New Haven Road Will Waive All Requisition Proceedings—Employes of the Company Will Not be Arrested.

NEW YORK, March 7.—President Chauncey M. Depew of the New York Central, President C. P. Clark of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and Director Park of the same road, surrendered themselves to the coroner and were all held in $25,000 bail.

Director Park was the first to arrive at the coroner's office. He was accompanied by his son who qualified as his bondsman in the sum of $25,000. While the coroner was accepting bail for Mr. Park President Clark came in and surrendered himself. Frederick P. Tilford of Park & Tilford gave the required bail for Mr. Clark.

When President Clark was arraigned his legal representative, Counsel Taft, raised an objection to the issuing of warrants for any officers of the road other than the president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer. The comptroller and agents of the road, he said, were only employes of the road and not officers in the sense of being responsible for the action of the road. The coroner viewed the matter in the same light and then reduced the number of those listed.

A detective from the Central office called on Mr. Depew and requested him to come down to the coroner's office. He showed no warrant. In the course of an hour Mr. Depew appeared at the coroner's office and gave himself up. The arraignment before the coroner was informal. He gave bail in $25,000, the sum demanded. Cornelius Vanderbilt went on his bond.

Arrangements were made whereby Directors Hunt and Miller, both aged men, should appear next Monday. President Clark assured the coroner that all the officials of the road would appear in person and give bonds.

Operators McManus and Breen were discharged, but Engineer Fowler was held under $10,000 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

Will Waive Requisition Proceedings.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 7.—The majority of the officials of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, against whom warrants were issued by Coroner Levy, of New York, were seen and indicated a willingness to waive requisition proceedings. One of the persons for whom the coroner has issued warrants, Charles Rockwell, has been dead over six months.

EX-SPEAKER REED'S VIEWS.

He Talks About the Late Congress at a Banquet in New York.

NEW YORK, March 7.—A dinner was given by the Federal Club at Delmonico's last night in honor of Hon. W. H. Arnoux. Covers were laid for 150. Chauncey M. Depew presided, and the speakers were Thomas B. Reed, Henry Cabot Lodge, Theodore Roosevelt, General Stewart L. Woodford and ex-Judge Arnoux. Major McKinley was kept away by the illness of his wife.

Ex-Speaker Reed was the first speaker. He said: "I trust that I appreciate as much as any other man the advantage of having good friends. Half of the struggle of life is to get a hearing. Advertisement is the absolute pre-requisite to the sale of goods, and your best advertisers are your enemies. Your friends sometimes go to sleep; your enemies never do. The general public do not pay much attention to your advertisement, but proceed to examine your goods.

"The 51st Congress has been extensively advertised, but the public will soon proceed to examine what has been done. Whenever this country awakens to the fact that the doctrine of human liberty must prevail from one end to the other, then justice will be done to the man that enforced an honest count and an honest law. I will challenge the world to point to the equal of the 51st Congress for the great good it has done. We have done more than pass great measures. We have shown the people of this country that it is possible to have responsible government.

"What I claim," he continued, "for the House of Representatives is not what it has done, but what it has rendered possible for all time to be done." Mr. Reed was heartily applauded at the conclusion of his speech.

Messrs. Roosevelt and Lodge condemned Governor Hill and eulogized ex-Speaker Reed and the 51st Congress, the former in the course of his remarks complimenting ex-President Cleveland for his anti-silver letter.

A Late-Sailing Movement.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 7.—The Buffalo vessel owners met at the Merchants' Exchange to-day to organize on the plan of the Cleveland Vessel-Owners' Association, with the special purpose of forming an agreement to hold their vessels in port till May 1 or later. The late-sailing movement has been urged on all hands as especially necessary this year. There has never been a time when so little freight was ready to move early. There is no coal, either hard or soft, seeking an early market.

The Election in Canada Discussed by Statesmen.

SECRETARY BLAINE'S OPINION.

The Administration Utterly Indifferent as to the Result Over the Border.

Senator Frye Says the Sentiment is Favorable to Closer Trade Relations With the United States—The President's Trip Postponed Until Monday—The New Judgeships Sought For.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The result of the Canadian election is generally discussed here in political circles, and several Congressmen have been interviewed on the subject.

Senator Frye, of Maine, says the election shows a growing sentiment in Canada favorable to closer trade relations with the United States, but it is evident that Sir John Macdonald is all-powerful there. He is sustained by men who have the power, and propose to retain it as long as they can.

Senator Aldrich, the father of the Tariff bill in the Senate, says he does not believe that the election in Canada will have any political or commercial effect in the United States.

"There appears to be a growing sentiment in Canada to establish closer business relations with the United States. The feeling there is stronger on that subject than it is here. The result of the election, instead of discouraging the Liberal party, is calculated to stimulate its leader to greater efforts in the future. It was precipitate to attempt to overthrow the governmental party.

"There are many people in this country who believe the United States will spread out to such an extent, some day, as to render it necessary to acquire additional territory.

"If Canada is willing, the United States would rather annex our northern neighbor than Mexico, as the people of the former are much more in touch with our institutions and business policies."

No Interest in Canada's Election.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Secretary Blaine said he had nothing to say with regard to the Canadian election except that there seemed to be an impression in some quarters that President Harrison's administration was interested in the election. "As a matter of fact," he said, "the administration is utterly indifferent as to the result. None of the members of the Cabinet took any interest in the matter, and cared less about it than Canadians usually do about our elections."

THE REPORT DENIED.

The Third Assistant Postmaster-General Says His Accounts Are All Right.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The report extensively published that a discrepancy of $240,000 had been discovered between the accounts of the Third Assistant Postmaster-General and of the Sixth Auditor, indicating a deficiency of that amount in the stamp supply department, is denied in the Third Assistant Postmaster-General's office.

It cannot be surmised there where the story originated, but as nearly as it can be traced down, it seems to have grown out of the fact that a commission of experts, consisting of the cashier of the Boston postoffice and two professional accountants, have been examining the books in the great postoffices of the country for some weeks past. This is done from time to time, partly as a precaution and partly for the opportunity it affords for the department to get valuable suggestions as to the system of keeping accounts. Thus far the gentlemen engaged in the examination have no deficits to report.

New Judgeships.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—There are about a dozen judgeships of various degrees and salaries created by act of the late Congress, and these places are being eagerly sought for by ex-members of Congress. While the five judgeships of the Court of Indian Claims and several other minor ones will no doubt be filled during the recess this summer, the President has determined not to make the appointment of the nine new Supreme Court Circuit Judges until next December.

Their Excursion Postponed.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The President and party have postponed the time of their departure for a ducking expedition in Maryland waters until Monday next. They will not be away from the capital more than three days.

A Broomstick Delegation.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., March 7.—The strikers' wives at Fairchance have organized to compel a few men who are yet at work there to join the strikers. The women will give the workmen fair warning to stop work. If the men do not heed it they will be escorted home nights by the broomstick delegation.

Thousands for Harvard.

WORCESTER, Mass., March 7.—Edwin Conant, of this city, left an estate valued at $300,000. Harvard College is made residuary legatee, and it is estimated that it will receive about $100,000, which is to be put into a new building to bear the testator's name. Other bequests are made to charitable institutions.

An Illinois Senator Next Week.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 7.—It is evident that the Illinois Senatorial contest of 1891 is nearing the end. It is generally conceded that a Senator will be chosen on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, and it is probable that Alson J. Streeter will be the man.

BADIE M'MULLEN'S TRIAL.

The Case Goes to the Jury in Buffalo This Forenoon.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 7.—For the first time since she has been under arrest for the murder of little Nellie May Connors, Sadie McMullen lost her self-control and wept. It was when her lawyer, in summing up, depicted the awfulness of the death she would die if she were convicted of murder in the first degree. She wept again when District-Attorney Quinby summed up for the people.

The girl Sadie took the stand in her own behalf and told her story as though repeating a lesson. She denied having any recollection of the events of the night on which the murder was committed, and when Mr. Quinby asked her if she had written the letter to her aunt saying she was going to commit suicide she calmly replied that she had never seen it. She described her feelings when she felt an attack coming on, and said she never had any recollection of what she did or said while under the influence of what her lawyers termed epilepsy.

The case went to the jury just before noon.

IN LOVE WITH A NEGRO.

A Young White Girl Locked Up on Account of Her Strange Infatuation.

ROSENDOUT, N. Y., March 7.—A novel and interesting hearing has just taken place before Judge Edwards at Chambers in Hudson. It was upon the petition of one Edward A. Squires, a colored resident of Oyster Bay, L. I., who seeks to obtain the release of Ida May Flock, a white girl, now an inmate of the State House of Refuge for Women at Hudson. The proceedings were upon an application for a writ of habeas corpus, and Judge Edwards denied the petition.

Miss Flock, was committed to the institution in December, 1888, from Oyster Bay at the instigation of her relatives, one of the main causes of her commitment being that she was deeply infatuated with the negro, had accepted his attentions and threatened to marry him. The application for her discharge was on the ground that the sentence was cruel and severe and likewise unconstitutional. Squires, who has retained able counsel, purposes continuing the fight for the girl's release.

Police Stops the Hennessey Trial.

NEW ORLEANS, March 7.—The Hennessey murder trial has received a setback through the unruly conduct of Manuel Politz, who disturbed the court to such an extent that he was removed to the sheriff's office. There he attempted to throw himself out of the window. Had he succeeded, death, either from the fall or at the hands of the indignant crowd below, would have been inevitable. When being taken back to his cell Politz made a desperate but vain effort to escape. He will be examined as to his sanity. Rumors are thick that the jury is being tampered with.

End of a Long Strike.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 7.—The long strike of the Monongahela river miners has ended in a complete victory for the men. A settlement was affected by the operators conceding the demands of their employes and they will hereafter pay three and one-half cents per bushel for mining. Pressing demands for coal in the Mississippi River markets compelled the operators to come to the miners' terms. Over 6,000 miners will resume work Monday, after a strike lasting nine weeks and an estimated loss of over $1,000,000 in wages.

Not Anxious to Meet Sullivan.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 7.—Bob Fitzsimmons, champion middleweight pugilist, is the guest of Syracuse sporting men. When questioned in regard to the report that he has talked of challenging Sullivan, Fitzsimmons said: "I have no intention or desire to go against Sullivan. I am ready to meet any man in my own class, but will not make a fool of myself by trying to fight men who have the advantage of me in weight."

The Fatal Blue Envelope.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 7.—The fatal blue envelope is making the rounds of the Michigan Central Railroad, six of the conductors being discharged this week. SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Pa., March 7.—The two-year-old daughter of Mrs. Ludwig Sabul fell from its crib last night into a bucket of water and was drowned. A similar death occurred about a year ago in the same family. The authorities are investigating the case.

QUINCY, Mass., March 7.—Green & Prescott, publishers of the Quincy Patriot and Daily Ledger, have been sued for $20,000 by Dr. W. L. Faxon for the publication of alleged libellous articles on his management of the National Sailors' Home at Wollaston.

The Coke Operators Make Overtures.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., March 7.—The Dunbar Furnace Company proposed to their employes that they return to work at their old wages. Other firms have made the same offer. The big companies are holding out.

Robert Ray Hamilton's Death.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The evidence of the two commissioners sent respectively to France and the West to examine into the death of Robert Ray Hamilton is now in the custody of Surrogate Ransom. The complete details cannot now be given, because the surrogate's rule is not to make such documents public until he has passed upon the question presented to him. That question is: Has the death of Hamilton been legally established, so as to justify him in admitting Hamilton's will to probate?

SOME INSIDE FACTS

Parnell and McCarthy Write About the Irish Funds.

HOW THE MONEY WAS SPENT.

Dillon's Anxiety to Have Some Arrangements Made for the Evicted Tenants.

The Parnellites Make an Appeal for a Campaign Fund—Home Rule to be Kept to the Front and No Religious Domination Tolerated—Parnell to Issue a Manifesto to Irishmen in America.

DUBLIN, March 7.—Correspondence between Parnell and McCarthy has just been made public.

The interchange of letters grew out of the resolution passed by the McCarthyite section at one of its meeting a few weeks ago favoring a transference of the funds held in Paris to the credit of the Irish party to the Council of the Tenants' Defence Association of Dublin.

The correspondence opens with a letter from Mr. Thos. Dillon asking both Mr. Parnell and Mr. McCarthy to make some adequate arrangements for the relief of the evicted tenants in Ireland during the imprisonment of Mr. Dillon and Mr. O'Brien.

Parnell intimates an intrigue on the part of McCarthy and colleagues, and refers to a document of "unmeaning distraction."

McCarthy denies that light be thrown as to how National League moneys have been made. Parnell says the money was expended according to O'Brien's instructions. McCarthy says he is willing to compromise in order to release the Paris fund. Parnell will not compromise. He says he has carefully nursed the fund during many years, and has had the sole responsibility of selecting its investments, with the result that it is now many thousands in excess of what McCarthy or the supporters supposed

PARNELLITE APPEAL.

Home Rule to the Front and No Religious Domination.

DUBLIN, March 7.—In the appeal for money to form a Parnellite campaign fund the Lord Mayor of Dublin, the Right Hon. Joseph Meade and the High Sheriff of Dublin, James Parks, have been appointed treasurers of the fund.

The appeal puts Home Rule to the front and says that there must be no religious domination, as Ireland has had too much ascendancy to even tolerate a Catholic or a Protestant government rule under her own laws.

On Wednesday next Mr. Parnell will give his evidence before the Royal Mining Commission in London, which will institute an inquiry into the matter of mining royalties. Next week Mr. Parnell will issue a manifesto to Irishmen in America, and will for several successive Sundays address meetings in Ireland.

Sir John Pope Hennessy, in a letter to priests and other prominent persons in Ireland, claims that he has out-bid Mr. Parnell in the extent of the Home Rule measures which the gentleman desired. Sir John claims that his proposition calls for the control of everything, including the customs and fiscal systems, without which the development of Irish resources would be retarded.

On the opening of the Limerick assizes the judges rejoiced that the political condition had so greatly improved in the city and county, and congratulated the people that the plan of boycotting had vanished.

The statue referred to has groups around it representing the army and navy, and is designed for a soldiers' and sailors' monument to be erected at Portland, Me.

The United Empire League.

LONDON, March 7.—The United Empire League, for the commercial union of Great Britain and its colonies, is rapidly growing in membership and influence. It now includes 50 members of the House of Commons, prominent merchants and colonial statesmen. The Liberals, who are as earnest for free trade as ever, assert that the movement is the last resort of the fair-traders or protectionists. It is, apparently, a very lively institution.

Monte Carlo Again Startled.

MONACO, March 7.—Monte Carlo has again been startled by a sudden death. This time it is an English physician, Dr. Beegart, who had been winning enormous sums at the gambling tables. The entire value of the late Cardinal's estate is £3,074.

Monarchism is Dead in France.

PARIS, March 7.—The private adviser of the Compte de Paris, Senator Bocher, announces his intention of resigning such relation. Ill health is assigned as the cause for the Senator's action, but it is believed that a conviction that monarchism in France is a dead issue has really suggested M. Bocher's resignation.

Particular objection was made to marching Amazons in tights and ballet girls whose dresses didn't reach to the knees. All such pictures were placed under the ban, and the officers of the law are carrying out the order.

The Yale University Crew.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 7.—It has been decided that all of the candidates for the Yale University crew shall spend the Easter vacation at Philadelphia where they can be coached by Bob Cook. Praise for the Anti-License Councilman

At the regular monthly business meeting of the Plainfield Reform Club, held Thursday evening, the following preamble and Resolution were adopted unanimously:

WHEREAS, The Plainfield Reform Club, while sharing in the popular disgust and shame because of the recent conduct of Councilmen who defied the clearly expressed protests of our best citizens, nevertheless must remind our indignant neighbors that by nominating and electing such men they became primarily guilty of the consequences, and that those who play with fire must expect to get burned; and,

WHEREAS, The insincerity of high-license advocates is now proved by their failure to make any effort whatever to discourage the liquor business in Plainfield by increasing the license fee to $1,000, or as much higher as would at once force a reduction in the number of applications for licenses; and,

WHEREAS, The bar room and the liquor are alike in the hotel and the saloon, but most pernicious in the hotel because it is the home of the traveler where associations ought to be made and kept pure and respectable by law; and,

WHEREAS, Ernest R. Ackerman showed himself to be the only Councilman with enough Christian manhood to vote against all such licenses; therefore,

Resolved, That the Plainfield Reform Club recognizes in Ernest R. Ackerman the type of man this Christian city should honor, and extends to him the right hand of fellowship for his noble fidelity to principle.

Dishonor to the Contestants.

VOTING AWAY BOROUGH MONEY.

Questionable Legislation in Favor of Mr. Sebring's Electric Light Company, and Against the Desires of the People as Voiced by Mr. Hegeman.—Uncomfortable Truths Plainly Spoken.—But Mr. Smalley Continues to Rule the Roost.

The Borough Council of North Plainfield had another struggle over the street lighting problem last night. All was comparatively serene until Councilman Smalley introduced a resolution that the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps be authorized to erect twenty additional lamps, thus granting a portion of the petitions that had come to the committee, and increasing the number of lamps where the streets needed better lighting. In explanation of his resolution Mr. Smalley said that fifty extra lamps could easily be used, but that the committee would ask for only twenty, which would be utilized in such sections as "Bull Frog City" and Greenbrook road.

Councilman Emmons arose with the observation that if he might be permitted to make a few remarks he would state that all this was news to him, though he was a member of the committee. He had understood that the two other members were to weed out a few of the thickly-placed lights and distribute them around. The new electric lamps gave much more light than the old naptha lamps, and the 200 already erected ought to cover much more territory than the 184 naptha lamps formerly employed. The appropriation of $3,600 would all be eaten up by the 200 lamps, and 20 more would require an extra appropriation of $360. There seemed to have been some mismanagement, he said, and he didn't see where the extra money was to come from.

Councilman Sebring, with a gentle cherubic laugh, interposed the remark that to transfer lamps from present to other locations would be "robbing Peter to pay Paul", and added that the proposed new lamps were to cover territory never covered before.

Then Councilman Hegeman made himself heard, in no uncertain tone. It was an inopportune time—he said—to introduce such a resolution, just as the Council was winding up its existence. He protested against imposing on the succeeding Council a debt of $400, and asked some sharp questions of Mr. Sebring, Chairman of the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps.

Though under the new electric light system—he added—the borough had fourteen more lamps than before, the Greenbrook road and "Bull Frog City" neighborhoods had been deprived of even such lights as they formerly had. They had been poorly lighted before, and had no light at all now. On the other hand, certain localities had been given more light than was necessary. There ought to be a careful consideration of this question before increasing the taxes. A close inspection ought to be made, to remove unnecessary lamps from places which had been very well covered before, and which had now more lamps than required, to places where they were needed. He was surprised at the condition of affairs. The taxes of the borough were being reduced nicely, the people had got rid of the Somerset street and Johnston drive bonds, and new people were likely to come in and help the growth of the place. But if the Council were going to pile up the tax s they would drive people away. Such a proposition indicated bad management.

Councilman Sebring said that he would be pleased to have such changes made in the location of lamps as were thought necessary, and stated that if the committee could get along without increasing the number of lamps he should be glad of it.

Councilman Smalley asserted that he was so well pleased with the new light that he was anxious to have his taxes increased by the erection of additional lamps. He added that Councilman Emmons had refused to act on the committee. This last statement Mr. Emmons denied point-blank, and said that the balance of the committee had misrepresented things to him.

Councilman Needham hesitated about committing himself on the matter even after Councilman Emmons had asked him what he had to say about it. Finally he announced, in a smooth, conciliatory tone of voice, that he had great confidence in the committee's faithfulness and judgment, and consequently would indorse the resolution.

Councilman Hegeman had all this while been nursing a feeling of righteous indignation, and he was very determined and emphatic in his subsequent remarks.

It was a very philanthropic thing—he said—for Mr. Needham to want to distribute, blindly, through the committee, the new light in wholesale fashion throughout the borough, but this was a matter that ought to be looked into. It was all nonsense for the Council to vote away the people's money without searching the facts of the case. Why—he asked—had not lamps been put in "Bull Frog City" where there had been lamps before? Lamps had been squandered on the easterly side of Somerset street, and on the other side, while "Bull Frog City" had been left in worse darkness than before. The resolution of Mr. Smalley was not business like. It was not in the interests of the people. It was in the interests of the Edison Electric Light Company of North Plainfield. The new light was a magnificent light. If the company would keep up the voltage and continue to give the full 25-candle power the borough could get along with fewer lamps rather than more. When—he concluded—a man hires a splendid new servant that takes the place of two other servants, he doesn't go and hire a lot of others just for the sake of having them around and getting rid of his money: so why should more lamps be ordered when proper distribution would accomplish the proper and desired result. Why had extra lights been put in certain places where they were not needed, and why shouldn't those be removed to places where they were required?

Councilman Emmons also was of the opinion that "the citizens of 'Bull Frog City' and Greenbrook road should be lit up", and moved to table the resolution. He and Mr. Hegeman, however, were alone in voting to table, and the resolution ordering 20 more lamps was adopted by the following vote:

Aye—Councilmen Needham, Sebring, Smalley—3.

No—Councilmen—Emmons and Hegeman—2.

Councilman Buckle was absent.

Mr. Hegeman then moved that the Mayor and Committee on Fire, Water and lamps together go over the borough to remove to more urgent localities such lamps as were not absolutely necessary in present locations. This was carried, Councilman Smalley alone voting no. Councilman Sebring smiled blandly, leaned back in his chair, and wiggled his thumbs in the armholes of his vest as he voted yes. He seemed to be considering how easy it would be for him and Councilman Smalley, with perhaps the Mayor's assistance, to overrule the opinion of Councilman Emmons as to the necessity of lamps in present sites.

P. M. French was elected a member of the Borough Board of Health for four years. David C. Allen was made a special marshal. All special marshals were ordered to surrender their keys of the engine house, as the new lock-up is the only building to which they need to have access. Thomas McGann was confirmed a member of Warren Engine Company. The new borough lock-up was officially accepted by ordinance. Councilman Emmons gave Councilman Needham a mild but uncomfortable hauling-over for ordering borough pamphlets printed without throwing the competition open to bidders. The sign board "Willow avenue" was ordered removed from the corner of Washington avenue, and "Myrtle avenue" substituted in its place, as Willow avenue ends in Myrtle avenue, while Myrtle runs on to Washington.

MAYOR PLACE'S VALEDICTORY.

The Council adjourned without day, after listening to the following from Mayor Place:

Gentlemen of the Council:

As this is the last regular meeting of the Borough Council for the fiscal year ending the first Friday in April, before its adjournment I desire to thank all the members of it for their courtesy to me as their presiding officer during the past year.

I believe the records will show that no Council since the borough was organized has accomplished more good work on the whole than this Council has. The macadamizing of many important streets, the building of our much-needed lock-up, the increase of good sidewalks, in a quiet but satisfactory manner, to those interested, laying many good crosswalks, placing the fire department upon an efficient basis, and, above all, accomplishing the change of lighting our streets with electricity, in place of the former custom of naptha lamps, go far to commend the wisdom you have displayed in your economical administration of the affairs of the borough. I believe the work which this Council has done will not be forgotten by the taxpayers and residents, and that for such work you will receive their thanks. They unquestionably appreciate good government, and will not long tolerate any other. I congratulate you, and the people whom you represent, upon the prosperous condition of our municipality, and trust there will be no retrograde movement in its future management, for all alike are interested in its growth and prosperity.

And the Women Join in Praise of Councilman Ackerman.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, believing that the only way rightfully to protect our homes is completely to banish the saloon from our fair city, would thus publicly acknowledge our high appreciation of Mr. Ernest Ackerman's most worthy example in having the courage and principle to vote no to all the license applications. Such a noble deed will stand recorded when councils and saloons have ceased to exist. Plainfield's noble citizens must admire such sterling worth, and our Union rejoices that one of the eleven had strength of purpose, and conviction of right, to vote against all these dens of infamy. We sincerely pray that the time may speedily come when all our law makers shall abide by the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, which says: "There is no inherent right in a citizen to sell intoxicating liquors by retail."

By order of the Union,
MRS. T. H. TOMLINSON,
President W. C. T. U.

—Peck has just received a line of new French black crochet buttons.

A MOST EXCELLENT HEALTH TALK.

Dr. Hedges Proves Himself a Highly Entertaining Instructor.

A fine audience of young men listened to an intensely interesting and especially helpful "Health Talk", given by Dr. E. W. Hedges, at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, Thursday evening.

The talk was immensely enjoyed, and was calculated to do much good. After an appropriate introduction, the Doctor submitted three propositions:

1. In order to be happy, you must be well.

2. In order to be useful, you must be well.

3. In order to be successful, you must be well.

He then spoke in part as follows:

"The most important subject, from a worldly point of view, is health; and yet this is the last thing to which people devote themselves. The eminent men of the world have been those who have had sound minds in sound bodies. Honor, riches and power are of no use without health." He urged the importance of rescue rather than cure; and said that he would cite as the authority for what he said, a book that was twenty-eight hundred years old.

In answering the question "how to keep well," he referred to numerous passages in the Bible, especially to the twelfth chapter of Corinthians, and to the poetic description of an old man, found in Ecclesiastes.

"The blood"—he continued—"contains much more than was formerly thought, and to-day we realize more than ever that 'the life of the body is the blood.'"

He explained how wonderfully we are all guarded against unseen dangers by an innumerable host of defenders who do much to prevent the blood from becoming poisoned.

In speaking of food, he described the process of digestion; and in answer to the question as to what sort of food we should eat, reminded the audience that inasmuch as nature has provided glands for digesting all kinds of foods a mixed diet was best. He spoke of the great evil of constipation. A mixed diet was not only provided for by our physical organism, but the Bible taught that "everything that liveth shall be flesh unto you." He said that food should be different in summer from that in winter. Meats and fats were necessary in winter, to produce heat and energy; whereas in summer fruits and vegetables instead of hearty meat formed the proper diet. In answer to the question "what to eat," he emphasized the need of regularity, as this was one of the most important points to be observed. He said that the frequency of "Sunday" headaches was due in large measure to the fact that people on that day eat out of due time and also more than is meet. He urged the importance of eating slowly, as well as moderately. He stated, not only from himself but on authority of others competent to judge, that over-eating kills more people than over-drinking.

He said in regard to drink that a person cannot drink too much, providing they do not drink while eating or too soon after meals. This as to water, only.

In regard to alcoholics, he quoted the following, from a circular to medical examiners, issued by the Equitable Life Insurance Company, under date of January, 1891:

"Indulgence in Alcoholic Beverages.—Since bitter experience has taught the insurance companies that there is no one habit which impairs so many lives as undue indulgence in alcoholics, the examiner cannot be too careful in his inquiries, or too particular in his report in this matter. If no more suffices for a rating for life-insurance to say, simply, that a candidate is 'temperate' than it would for financial credit to say that he was 'solvent.' It is just as essential for one purpose to know definitely how many drinks, daily, the applicant takes, as for the other how many dollars he earns."

He emphasized the need of pure air, and, as a preventive to consumption, proper gymnastics for the lungs and due care in case of cold. "Consumption"—he said—"is never inherited, although children are born with a liability to it." He strongly urged that no consumptive has any right to marry.

About sleep, he said that every family has a regular time for sleep, and sleep is mentioned in the Bible as one of the greatest of blessings. Anything that will draw blood from the head will produce sleep. He mentioned a hot foot-bath, a hot bath, or a brisk walk of half an hour, before retiring, as a successful means to this end. Inasmuch as eating draws the blood from the head to the stomach, he advocated a light meal before retiring; this, he said, was the habit with tame animals. He advocated a periodic rest of one day of the week, and said that practical experience teaches us the importance of observing one day out of seven as a day of rest.

Of cleanliness, he spoke of the function of the skin, and described how it was filled with innumerable pores, and explained how a man who had been varnished died within twenty-four hours. "If"—said he—"by completely or very largely covering the pores, we produce death, just so, in proportion, is it harmful to neglect cleanliness." He explained how page after page of Bible teaching referred to this subject.

He referred to the importance of exercise, and of maintaining a cheerful disposition.

He made no reference to personal purity, as that had been talked of recently at the rooms.

He dwelt at some length on the injurious effects of impure water.

HE REPLIES TO MR. SERRELL AGAIN.

But C. E. B. Must Not Suppose That Plainfield is to Have a System Like the Old Style Ones He Speaks of.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Mr. Serrell in his advocacy in THE PRESS, Thursday evening, of the trolley with its overhead wires and hangers; its lightning arresters; and its motors like those used with the Storage battery system, makes the statement that he "cannot quite see why 'temporary litigation' should keep it [the Storage battery system] out of the market for railway uses."

The company that had placed the Storage battery system of railway cars in use in New York city, was sued by a strong company for infringement of certain patents relating thereto. The company that was sued knew every defect in the storage-battery as used on street cars; and the persons who originated the company had used the Storage battery system on street cars continuously for several years, and with results so different from those which were reached by Mr. Serrell, in six months, that they actually pursued the litigation, expending something like seventy thousand dollars in an effort to defeat what seemed to them an unjust and unwarranted patent.

The strong company that had instigated the suit knew every defect of the storage-battery system as used on street cars, and yet these well-balanced people actually brought a suit which could not result in anything but an indifinite expense, although certain to cost tens of thousands of dollars. These companies had employed electrical engineers who had made the storage-battery system a success in European cities, and when they came to apply their skill and knowledge in the newly-organized systems here, they were not defeated in their object, and their cars ran three and six months without having to replace the batteries—as Mr. Serrell admits that he had to do.

The litigation would not have been entered into if the system was known to be a failure. The persons that had the power to determine whether the suit should be brought and contested, all knew what there was of value to be fought over. They had knowledge of the fact that the storage-battery system on cars had operated continuously and successfully since 1882, that it had no element of danger in it, and that it was cheaper and more trustworthy than the "trolley" system." So they engaged in an expensive contest as explained.

Yankee ingenuity has not devised a means of "beating the devil around the bush"—as Mr. Serrell puts it—in the use of the telephone, and where a patent is strongly backed there will be no "beating." There were quite a number of failures in the use of storage-battery systems by such novices as Mr. Serrell, while, on the other hand, there has been a continuous and successful use of the system for about a decade by others more skillful.

As to the "trolley" system, let its friends select such a city as Meriden, Conn., about the size of Plainfield, and there get an expression from the public who don't use it all of the time. Let them inquire why Los Angeles, Cal., went back to mule teams; and also inquire of those who know, about the dangers and defects of the overhead wires and the crippled "trolley."

C. E. B.

Plainfield, N. J., March 6, 1891.

Stepniak Sleeps Soundly Between His Pursuers.

Mr. George Kennan tells the following story about Stepniak, the famous Russian author and revolutionist, who is to lecture at The Casino, next Thursday evening:

"At one time the entire police force of St. Petersburg were searching for Stepniak; he had taken refuge in the house of a wealthy Russian lady who was in sympathy with the revolutionists. This Russian lady had occasion to visit one of the large prisons, for the purpose of calling on a suspect with whom she was acquainted. Stepniak accompanied her in the disguise of a servant. While the lady was making her call, Stepniak remained at the gate of the prison, where he passed the time chatting with the soldiers on guard, and telling them stories in the peasant dialect which he knew so well how to assume.

"Being very tired, having been out all the previous night attending a secret meeting of the revolutionists, Stepniak seated himself on a bench between two soldiers, who were just then off duty, and soon fell asleep. When the lady came out of the prison, she beheld her servant, who was in reality the most noted revolutionist in all Russia, and for whom the police were then scouring the city, fast asleep between two gendarmes, with his head resting peacefully on one of their shoulders.

The lady awakened her servant, and they returned to her mansion without exciting the slightest suspicion in regard to Stepniak's identity.

It Comes High But Some Must Have It.

There is nothing about which epicures of cultured taste are so hard to suit as butter. Connoisseurs consider prime butter as one of the luxuries, and grocers will tell you that their customers are easier to suit with the thousand other things they sell, than with butter. J. Aug. Smith, of 13 West Front street, recognizes all these facts, and as he studies to please the people he has secured the agency here for the celebrated Pikeland Creamery butter. Although the Philadelphians have to pay 50 cents a pound for it, Mr Smith is selling it in Plainfield for 45 cents. It comes high but it is a dainty, delicate luxury, as sweet as a nut.

North Plainfield Potentates Viewed from Abroad.

[From The New York World.]

Counselor Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, in whose behalf the cheerful but unavailing attempt was made to unseat Senator William J. Keys, of Somerset county, is a tall, slender, black-mustached young man, and a son-in-law of Amos Clark, Jr., Somerville's distinguished Democrat. His failure to grasp the State senatorial prize was a bitter disappointment, but he has got over it by this time, and is as full of ambition as ever.

Mayor Charles Place is rapidly losing what hair he has left on his head in taking care of North Plainfield. Nevertheless he is an enthusiast on the subject of borough government and recently helped Bound Brook to rise out of its primitive existence as a village. Now he is extending the same fatherly aid to Westfield.

Who would feed children with morphine? and yet, a great many cough medicines contain that very thing. Hires' Cough Cure is absolutely free from poison, and is an absolutely safe remedy for pulmonary troubles. Let no dealer talk you into taking anything else.

WOULD MAKE A GOOD MAYOR.

And His Friends Are Already Sure of His Election.

[From The Elizabeth Herald.]

Fred M. Slater, who has been nominated by the Democracy of North Plainfield as their candidate for mayor, was born in this city and was a resident here up to the time of his marriage with Miss Pangborn of Plainfield. He is a civil engineer by profession, commencing his career as such while a boy under the supervision of Chief Moore of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey. After serving with the corps of that road in the construction of the Newark and Elizabeth, the Long Branch, and the High Bridge branches, he cast his fortunes with the National Storage Company at Communipaw, where by his energy and ability he attained the position as chief engineer of that corporation, which he has held for some years to the satisfaction of the company and credit to himself, as the progress and magnitude of their works bear evidence.

Mr. Slater has always been a staunch Democrat in politics, like his father before him, and has been frequently honored by representing the Democracy of his borough in the State and other conventions. He was the first Democratic Councilman elected in North Plainfield, overcoming the Republican majority of that place.

Although the borough is strongly Republican, Mr. Slater's numerous friends predict for him a gratifying victory in the mayoralty contest, as he is looked upon by his neighbors as thoroughly fitted in every way, and if elected will have the interests of the borough solely in view.

Dead In His Bed.

John Fisher, a Jersey Central Railroad workman, retired to his room at Joseph Meyer's, Dunellen, last night, in seemingly excellent health. This morning he was found dead in his bed. Heart trouble is suspected.

The infant tenderness grows apace and calls for one more application of that good friend, Salvation Oil, which never disappoints but always kills pain.

It is neither pleasant nor profitable to hear people constantly coughing when they could be easily cured by a 25 cent bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Senator Gordon of Georgia has joined the Farmers' Alliance.

Secretary Proctor has decided to enlist 2,000 Indian soldiers.

Shakespeare Reeves was hanged at Newcastle, Del., yesterday.

Ex-Senator Farwell of Illinois, is asking for the Republican nomination for mayor of Chicago.

The Adelaide Silk Mill at Allentown, Pa., has reduced the wages of heavy grade ribbon weavers 10 per cent.

John J. Kelty, who was with the National League of Pittsburg last season, has signed to play left field for the New Haven Baseball Club.

Ulivie Wapoins, a pretty young woman, committed suicide in a railroad station at Pittsburg, Pa., by hanging herself with a towel.

Lavena Lanier, a young lady living near Glenville, W. Va., while in delirium caused by sickness left her bed and going to the river threw herself in and was drowned.

Smith Nance and Carl Smith of Ellenville, N. Y., are in jail for violating the fish and game laws in having caught trout with a net. Suits were brought against them by the State game protector. They failed to appear for trial and judgments were taken for $240. As they have no property to levy upon executions were issued against their bodies. Unless they settle they will have to serve a day for each dollar fine.

I HAVE not used all of one bottle yet. I suffered from catarrh for twelve years, experiencing the nau eating dropping in the throat peculiar to that disease, and hope bleed almost daily. I tried various remedies without benefit until last April, when I saw Ely's Cream Balm advertised in the Boston Budget, I procured a bottle, and since the first days' use have had no more bleeding—the soreness is entirely gone.—D G Davidson, with the Boston Budget, formerly with Boston Journal.

DISCOURAGED!

Blue, Disheartened, Depressed!

That is your condition, simply because your nerves are weak, your brain tired, and your head aches; because you pass restless nights, wake tired, and have lost your vim, energy and snap; you are gloomy, depressed, and have a sense of anxiety, or foreboding, or are suffering from spinal debility.

You are discouraged, not because you are sick, for in your heart you know that there ought to be some means of cure.

"Oh!" you wail, "I have tried so many things and failed." You coward, you baby!

Your nerves have simply gone back on you.

Do you think that because you have failed to find the right cure once, twice, a dozen times, that there is nothing good in the world? Is it the part of a noble human soul, when health, happiness, life itself is at stake, to give up hope, to become weak and discouraged simply because a bottle of pills or a bottle of that, or a doctor here or a doctor there failed to cure?

Confess it—you are not sick beyond cure, but have only lost your pluck.

Courage is one of the highest attributes and nothing so quickly shows the weakling as discouragement. The courageous or non-courageous soul is what makes us men or mice.

Suppose the matchless artists of the world had lost courage in the long and bitter hours of their disappointments! Suppose our great inventors, meeting obstacles on every hand, allowed their wondrous genius to droop with discouragement—were their the steam engine, the telegraph, telephone were discovered! Suppose the learned astronomers, searching the skies night after night through weary years, had become hopeless, disheartened, discouraged before gravitation became a known fact!

An indomitable will to try and get well is all you want—try, even in the face of a hundred failures, and success will surely crown your efforts.

Get Dr Greene's Nervura from your druggist—you know what it is—the greatest and grandest medical discovery of the age, the pure, vegetable tonic for the brain, the strengthener of nerve, the invigorator of blood and body, and build for yourself a new nerve, a new power, a new vigor.

Courage is Perseverance.

For two years I was one of the most miserable of mankind. I had indigestion and nervous dyspepsia, everything I ate disagreed with my stomach, which caused me to have a fluttering of the heart. I was very nervous at all times—cold feet and hands, sleepless nights, and, in fact, was cranky and ugly.

In all it was a miserable existence for me until I used Dr. Greene's Nervura. After trying all other remedies that I ever knew or heard tell of, and after giving up all hope of getting cured, I concluded I would try Dr. Greene's Nervura. After taking two bottles, I began to feel the effects of it and continued until I considered myself cured. I had now no more indigestion or dyspepsia, my nerves were strong; no more trouble with my stomach or fluttering of the heart; no cold feet or hands; I sleep well and get up refreshed; in fact I feel I am myself again, all due to Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Any one troubled with the same disease, who gives it a fair trial, I am positive will be benefited by it.

JUST THE MAN FOR THE PLACE.

The wealthy man is often the most burdened. Sometimes I wish I could find a man to take the responsibility and duties of my fortune off my hands.—Russell Sage, in a recent interview.

If you sought a warrior, a son of Mars,
Who should come through the glare of the cannon's flame
With a glorious name that should shine like the stars
On the azure field of a deathless fame;
If you wished me to find him, well, I'd confess
That I felt myself unprepared for the charge.
My acquaintance with men of this measure, I guess,
For obvious reasons, is not very large.

If you sought a man who could found a state,
And grow an empire out of his brain,
Who would steer the rudder of stubborn fate
Through the whirlpool swash of an untried main;
If you wished me to find and to introduce
This chap to the public to make his bow,
I would like to oblige, but would have to refuse
For he's not very numerous just now.

If you wanted a man who could write a song
That would echo on through the years sublime;
That would cheer men's souls like the resonant gong
That tells to the toiler it's dinner time;
If you wished me to find him, why, I should decline
To hunt so elusive a fellow as he,
For in this age of the world, I opine,
He's the stubbornest kind of an absentee.

But you seek a man who'll assume the weight
Of your countless wealth, my good millionaire,
I know him, I know him, and hasten to state
He is ready to take all your burden and care.
Do you want him at once? You will find him at home—
He'll accept and won't take a day to decide!
Just write to the fellow who wrote this pome—
He will tell you a man who is qualified.

—S. W. Foss, in Yankee Blade.

JACK'S MOTHER-IN-LAW.

The Pathetic Tale of a Victim of an Old Joke.

Jack's mother-in-law was coming to make them a visit. Jack had married Alice down in the country, where he had gone one summer for the fishing. He had been so much in love with Alice that he had not paid much attention to her mother during their courtship; and, to tell the truth, he had almost forgotten about her since. She seemed to Jack a good old soul, but rather tiresome and poky. Now, there was nothing poky about Jack's set. Even the old women whom he knew were "up-and-a-coming," as he used to say, so Alice's mother with her quiet ways and almost slavish devotion to her pretty daughter had impressed him more as an adjunct to Alice than any thing else. And now she was coming to visit them. He had not thought of her since five months before, when he had made some excuse to get out of accompanying Alice down to see her.

Alice was one of those selfish little women who often make the most devoted of wives. Just as her mother had worshiped and waited upon her she adored and petted Jack, but there was no room in her heart for any one else except her baby. They had been married a year now, and a little Jack had recently come to them—a red-faced, bald-headed baby—but Alice was very proud of him, and she wrote for his grandmother to come and see him.

Jack was the best-hearted fellow in the world, but he had been brought up very differently from these simple country people. Sometimes he was a little bored even by Alice, although he loved her dearly; but her mother! he was sure he could not stand that, and so he planned to be at home as little as possible during her stay.

The gentle old lady felt strange and out of place in Alice's home. The busy city doctor, the pompous nurse, the servants were all so different from the people she had known, and Jack—she was terribly in awe of Jack. Alice was full of plans and projects for the baby, and her mother was left a great deal to herself. The poor old lady strayed about lonely and homesick in the great rooms, feeling that they all, even Alice, seemed like strangers to her—all but little Jack. Babies are babies, rich or poor, city or country—and she had nursed a good many of them in her day and she did not feel shy with little Jack. And he was part hers—her little grandson. She wished that they would send the nurse away and let her care for him. She held him in her arms and rocked him and crooned an old song in a cracked little voice, quite forgetting that the dignified nurse was in the room. And the nurse's heart softened toward the dear old lady as she heard the song—for her own mother had sung just such songs over her years before.

It happened to be at this time a sort of between seasons for the funny men on the newspapers—that is, too late for the annual ice jokes, and a little early for the ones about the coal-dealer—so they ran in all the old mother-in-law stories of the last decade. Alice's mother read the daily papers from end to end. There was much in them that she neither liked nor understood, but reading helped to pass the time, and she had so much time. She had always subscribed for the little sheet that had come out at "Green's Corners" every Saturday for forty years, but that was purely local. Another man had once bid for trade there, but old Johnson, the "Ed.," had told him that he had furnished the brains for that town and had set his own type for forty years and that neither his brains nor his fingers showed any signs of giving out for some time yet. So the Bulletin went on in the old way, giving the deaths and marriages and town topics, and the mother-in-law joke had never penetrated to its columns; and thus it came that to one reader these paragraphs were a novelty.

She pondered much over them, poor woman. She knew that there were such women—Andy Clumm's wife down at the "Corners" was a terror; and the report was that Joe James' mother-in-law made it so hot for Joe that he had to leave. But then Andy was shiftless and Joe was a drunkard. It seemed cruel to her that the men who wrote the papers rated all mothers-in-law with such as they, and she grew so sensitive about her own relation to him that she hardly dared address Jack lest he think her a meddler.

Jack read these funny stories too and the fellows joked him, and he began to pose to them as a man with a mother-in-law, for men usually like to pose as something and he was tired of being simply a "good fellow." So he began to take a great many of his dinners down-town and stay out late at night, telling Alice and her mother that his business worried him terribly and needed his constant attention. He didn't lose any flesh over these business troubles, but he talked about them a great deal and got a lot of sympathy at home.

One day Alice's mother went down to her home on a business errand. It was rather a mysterious affair, but Alice was too much taken up with baby to notice her mother's nervousness, and nobody else paid any attention to her. At night she returned, pale and tired, with a little oilskin bag pinned securely in her pocket.

Jack did not come home that night; he telephoned Alice that business was pressing, and then he went to the theater with some of his friends.

The next day the old lady prepared for another expedition. She hated to bother Alice, so she set off alone without telling her plans. She was not used to the city and after many mistakes and much walking she reached Jack's office. She was shown into his private room. It did not look as though he were suffering for want of money. There were soft rugs and luxurious chairs, and the box of cigars on the table was of the very best. Two of his friends were with him and the air was dense with smoke. A bottle of wine stood open and it must have been that the fumes of that had made him a little dull, for he could scarcely comprehend that his mother-in-law stood before him.

When at last he did understand it and she had whispered her errand a flush of shame went from his forehead to his very toes. She was sorry for him. She, whose name he had made a jest with these friends of his; she was afraid that she had been a burden an extra expense to him. She knew his business worried him, and she had mortgaged her little home and had brought him the money to help him out of his embarrassment; and she was planning to live carefully enough to lift the mortgage so that in time little Jack should have a home whatever happened.

One by one her words worked themselves into his muddled brain; and a dim vision of the little one-story-and-a-half cottage, where he had courted Alice, came before him. He put his arms around her and led her to a chair, telling her that he could not talk of it just then, but that she had saved him. He didn't say from what, and if she thought it was from financial ruin it was just as well.

Then he put on his hat and coat, and, calling a carriage, said he would go home with her. He helped her gently into the carriage, and then excused himself for a moment and went back to tell the "boys" that the baby was sick and that Alice was worried and had sent for him to come home.—Chicago Tribune.

NEW DEMANDS OF SCIENCE.

Larger Opportunities for Scientific Research Needed.

Every large university which follows the development of modern science and mathematics is compelled to add new courses of study continually to the curriculum in order that the special investigator shall have the means of pursuing research. In spite of the activity in large universities, thought of modern scientists is even more progressive, and it is possible for the complaint to come that universities do not yet offer wide enough opportunities for study. Such a charge is made by Cleveland Abbe in the Atlantic Monthly. His plea is for a greater recognition of the claims of terrestrial physics, which embrace the problems "in which we consider the land, the ocean and the atmosphere, respectively, as units, or as parts of the greater unit which astronomers call 'the earth.'" The branches of the subject comprise many interesting fields of modern scientific research. Already the conditions of the interior of the earth and the reaction of that upon the surface are the subjects of experimental work. The crust of the earth forms an important branch of study. Geology may observe phenomena, but it has not yet been explained whether the general locations of the features of the continents and ocean beds have always been as now, and what the mechanism is of the rise and fall of mountain chains. The subject of earthquakes or seismology has not yet been satisfactorily studied. Nutation and rotation of the earth and the mysterious forces of terrestial magnetism are still secrets held fast by nature. The relation between the ocean and the land, and the problems of the ocean, which forms the branch of oceanography, offer a series of particularly interesting problems. The atmosphere is a part of the earth, and great progress will be made in the future in the prediction of daily weather, of extensive climatic changes and droughts and floods. Our signal service and State weather service would undoubtedly be improved by collegiate support. In this rapid review of the suggestions made in an important article it may be seen that quick and lively scientific demands are pressing the universities to recognition of great fields of study. The day of exclusive devotion to ancient literature and the classics has passed, and it is already a question whether the universities will maintain an equilibrium between science and the arts. Modern curiosity is unbounded, and the world holds great secrets for the earnest student.—Boston Journal.

Libbie Did Well.

A woman whose daughter had recently married was asked how she liked her new son-in-law.

"Oh, he's splendid!" was the hearty reply. "Libbie couldn't of done better. Why, that man gets up of a morning, gets his own breakfast, does up the dishes, sweeps and dusts, and makes Libbie a nice cup of coffee and takes it up to her room before he goes to his work ev'ry morning. I tell you, Libbie did well to get a man like Frank. There ain't many like him nowadays."—Detroit Free Press.

A very clever servant, as you well may think.

Another little servant
On my finger sits,
She the one-eyed little servant
Very neatly fits;
But she eats me no meat,
And she drinks me no drink,
A very clever servant, he you well may think.

Now one more little servant,
Through the single eye,
Does both the others' bidding
Very faithfully;
But she eats me no meat,
And she drinks me no drink,
A very clever servant, as you well may think.

A needle and a thimble,
And a spool of thread,
Without the fingers nimble,
And the knowing head,
They would never make out,
If they tried the whole day,
To sew a square of patchwork as you well may say.

—Mary J. Jacques, in St. Nicholas.

WOLF AND LAMB.

One of Æsop's Fables with a Cut Over a Century Old.

One hot, sultry day, a Wolf and a Lamb happened to come, just at the same time, to quench their thirst in the stream of a clear silver brook, that ran tumbling down the side of a rocky mountain. The Wolf stood upon the higher ground, and the Lamb at some distance from him down the current. However, the Wolf, having a mind to pick a quarrel with him, asked him what he meant by disturbing the water, and making it so muddy that he could not drink; and at the same time demanded satisfaction. The Lamb, frightened at this threatening charge, told him, in a tone as mild as possible, that, with humble submission, he could not conceive how that could be; since the water which he drank, ran down from the Wolf to him, and therefore it could not be disturbed so far up the stream. "Be that as it will," replies the Wolf, "you are a rascal, and I have been told that you treated me with ill language behind my back, about half a year ago." "Upon my word," says the Lamb, "the time you mention was before I was born." The Wolf, finding it to no purpose to argue any longer against truth, fell into a great passion, snarling and foaming at the mouth, as if he had been mad; and drawing nearer to the Lamb, "Sirrah," says he, "if it was not you, it was your father, and that is all one." So he seized the poor, innocent, helpless thing, tore it to pieces, and made a meal of it.

THE WOLF AND THE LAMB.

APPLICATION—The thing which is pointed at in this fable is so obvious that it will be impertinent to multiply words about it. When a cruel, ill-natured man has a mind to abuse one inferior to himself either in power or courage, though he has not given the least occasion for it, how does he resemble the Wolf, whose envious, rapacious temper could not bear to see innocence live quietly in its neighborhood? In short, wherever ill people are in power, innocence and integrity are sure to be persecuted; the more vicious the community is, the better countenance they have for their own villainous measures. To practice honesty in bad times is being liable to suspicion enough, but if any one should dare to prescribe it it is ten to one but he would be impeached of high crimes and misdemeanors; for to stand up for justice in a degenerate and corrupt state is tacitly to upbraid the government and seldom fails of pulling down vengeance upon the head of him that offers to stir in its defense. Where cruelty and malice are in combination with power nothing is so easy as for them to find a pretext to tyrannize over innocence and exercise all manner of injustice.

First and Last.

The increasing prevalence of the scientific spirit, with its passion for exact statement, makes it more and more necessary for men to say precisely what they mean, and nothing else.

"What is your last name, my little man?" asked the new teacher.

"Tommy," answered the boy.

"Indeed! What is your full name."

"Tommy Jones."

"Then Jones is your last name?"

"No, ma'am, excuse me. When I was born my name was Jones, and they didn't give me the other for more than a month."—Youth's Companion.

THE NIGHT HAWK.

Naturalists Consider Him a Bird of Vicious Habits.

The night hawk is the subject of respectful sympathy and the fallacies of ornithologists. He makes a noise when swooping down open-mouthed through a swarm of insects which is called a "jar." Many learned theories have been advanced to account for this noise. The "jar" is merely a gutteral note of alarm, like the rattle of a rattle-snake. I have walked within ten feet of these birds before being discovered. At the first indication of the presence of a human being, the bird often utters its "jar" before flying. It is natural for a rooster to flop its wings before crowing. I do not propose to say why, neither will I tell why the night hawk utters his peculiar noise when descending head foremost. He does it voluntarily and hereditarily and seems to enjoy himself.

NIGHT HAWK ON THE WING.

The night hawk flies all night about electric lights. It is the only known species of birds of which it can positively be stated that it is conversant with the nature of artificial light. I never knew one to fly into a light. I have walked into a flock of wild ducks with a lantern. Such a feat would be impossible with the night hawk or the silver haired bat which also understands artificial light.

The night hawk is a degenerated bird. Its structure does not offer evidence that it was originally intended for a night bird. It must have become such by reason of the multiplicity of insect life at dusk. Its sleep by day was a matter of choice at some period of the bird's history. Even now, when its hereditary tendencies are strongest, it feeds most by day in mid-summer when insects are most plentiful. It is a creature of the most irregular habits known on this mundane sphere.

The brain of the night hawk is very small, not twice greater in quantity than a humming bird's. The greater part of the cranium is occupied by eye sockets. The gizzard is of enormous size comparatively, and occupies more than one-half of the abdominal cavity. One that was examined contained the remains of one thousand insects by actual count.

CAMERA FOR CHILDREN.

An Enthusiastic Artist Tells Exactly How to Construct One.

The boys and girls who have wistfully gazed at the expensive photographic apparatus exposed for sale in the shop windows have probably never thought that a camera was within their grasp by a little labor and a very small expenditure of money.

Procure a wooden box of about the dimensions shown in the cut with a cover fitting tightly over one end.

The box must be large enough inside to admit a plate of glass 5¼ by 4¼ inches and a narrow piece of wood must be fastened just inside the cover to prevent the plate falling into the interior of the box.

In the center of the end opposite the cover make a very small round hole, not larger than would be made by a steel knitting needle. A match smoothed down to exactly fit into this hole will be your "lens cover."

Now, if your box does not admit a single ray of light when the cover is on and the match inserted your camera is finished.

Glass plates 5¼x4¼ inches, coated with a preparation ready to receive your picture, can be obtained of any dealer in photographic materials for forty-five cents per dozen. It is best to use what is termed a slow plate, such as Carbutts No. 16. These plates can not be exposed to either daylight or gaslight, and must be opened in a dark room.

A sheet of orange or ruby paper can be purchased for a trifle and pasted over the front of a box, within which a candle may be lighted, and you have a light in which the plates can be exposed.

You will notice that the plates are smooth on one side but have a white coating on the other. Place the coated side facing the hole in the front of your box and put on the cover, which must be securely fastened.

You are now ready to take a picture. Do not try one indoors, but outside on a clear day. Stand about fifty to one hundred feet from the object you wish to photograph, and, resting the camera on some object, hold it steady while you remove the match—for about thirty seconds if a clear day and for one or two minutes if cloudy—carefully replacing same. A little experience will enable you to judge the time necessary for a proper exposure.

There are many places in every city where your box may be taken and the plate developed, the picture printed and mounted on a card for ten cents.—N. Y. World.

BURNED IN A WRECK

An Express Train Ditched by a Broken Rail.

THREE CARS PILED IN A HEAP.

Set on Fire by the Patent Heater and All Destroyed.

One Man Burned to a Cinder and Several Others Seriously Injured—A Woman's Body Cremated in the Blazing Cars—An Express Messenger Extricated from the Wreck With the Loss of His Foot.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., March 9.—A terrible railroad wreck occurred on the Jacksonville Southeastern, which resulted in the total destruction of all the cars by fire, the smashing of the engine, the loss of one life outright and the serious injury of several persons.

The southbound express, due here at 4 a. m., was nearing Havana, when a broken rail ditched the entire train, which consisted of a baggage and express car, smoker, chair car and two sleepers. As soon as the engine struck the defective rail it careened into the ditch and the baggage car was piled on top of the tender.

Consumed by Fire.

Fire from the engine or stove in the car at once set fire to the latter and it was speedily consumed. The baggageman by some means managed to get out without being seriously injured and he at once went to work rescuing the others. He found the express messenger pinned fast under a heavy box and with a superhuman effort extricated him, but the poor fellow had lost his left foot. Others who were not hurt at once went to work looking after the passengers on the train. The chair car was set on fire by the patent heater and the flames communicated with the sleepers and all were destroyed.

A Woman's Body Cremated.

The body of Miss Ellen Woods, whose remains were being brought here from Chicago for burial, was consumed in the blazing cars.

Fireman James N. Saddle was caught in the wreck of the baggage car and tender and burned to a cinder. Frank Birkenhead, the engineer, fortunately was found and saved, though his left arm and leg were broken. Several others were seriously injured.

A train with surgeons was at once dispatched from this place, and every effort was made for the comfort of the sufferers.

A STORY OF BURIED JEWELS.

Royal Treasures Said to be Buried in Luzerne County, Pennsylvania.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 9.—The First National Bank of Pittston has received a letter from Spain, signed by a priest, stating that a vast sum of money is buried somewhere in this vicinity.

The letter says one of the most favored of the courtiers of the late Alphonso received a large sum of money, said to be a million francs, while the King was on his deathbed, in return for the performance of a dying wish.

The Queen was jealous of the courtier, and at the King's death she instructed her ambassador to arrest him for stealing a casket containing a number of jewels from the palace. He fled to America and buried his treasure, but returned to Spain and was arrested and put in prison where he died.

The plans of the place where the treasure was buried were in a satchel which was taken by the tribunal, who, not knowing of the contents offered to dismiss the case on payment of the costs. The priest asks for money to pay the costs, so as to obtain the satchel and plans.

Opposition to a Royal Marriage.

LONDON, March 9.—The reported engagement of the Duke of Clarence, heir presumptive to the British crown, and Princess Marguerite of Prussia, has called out much hostile criticism among the people, who think that the old royal families need a little new blood, instead of perpetually intermarrying with each other. The Rev. Hugh Price, the well-known Nonconformist minister, is credited with the utterance of some strong opinions on the subject. The Duke and Princess are both grandchildren of Queen Victoria, and therefore first cousins.

The Hearst Stable to be Sold.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—California will not be so well represented on the Eastern turf during the coming season as it has been in the past. It is probable that the late Senator Hearst's establishment will soon go under the hammer and be sold without reserve. Senator Hearst's partner in Hearst & Co. is his son Wm. R. Hearst of the San Francisco Examiner, who does not care for race horses. The sale may not take place until the close of the season of 1891. All of the stallions and brood mares will be sold and the stud entirely dissolved.

Severe Storms in England.

LONDON, March 9.—Terrible weather prevails in the North of England. The snow is from six to 15 inches deep in many places, and the seas are running so high along the coast that many wrecks are feared. Heavy winds prevail, and the storm has seldom been surpassed in severity at this time of year.

BIG LOCK-OUT.

Twenty Thousand Clothing Workers Suddenly Forced Into Idleness.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 9.—All the clothing manufacturers of the city notified the cutters and trimmers in their factories that their services will be discontinued, at least temporarily. This will throw over 20,000 people out of work.

Henry Michaels, president of the Manufacturers' Association, said to the men in the employ of his firm, Michaels, Stern & Co., that he was extremely sorry that there was no work for them. Other manufacturers used similar brief, but significant, expressions. In one of the factories the following explanation in typewriting was handed to each man:

"We have been so hampered and interfered with in our business by intermediate parties that we feel compelled to stop work from now on until we can adopt means to conduct our affairs in a manner satisfactory to ourselves."

All the manufacturers refuse to make any statement to reporters. One cutter said: "No demand has been made on us for anything. Our employers have found no fault with us. All we know is that we are told that there is no more work for us."

The general opinion is that the women operatives will complete the work now in the shops.

HE SHOT TWO WOMEN.

The People at Nyack, N. Y., Excited Over the Arrest of a Brutal Robber.

NYACK, N. Y., March 9.—At 1 a. m. Joseph Storrs, a young married man of this place, entered the residence of Mrs. Bridget Armstrong for the purpose of robbery.

He was discovered by the mistress of the house who tried to seize him, at the same time making an outcry. Storrs shot the woman twice in the neck, and as she lay on the floor the cowardly ruffian brutally kicked her in the side.

Mrs. Armstrong's daughter appeared on the scene and Storrs fired at her, the bullet taking effect in the chin. He then fled from the house.

The daughter, badly wounded as she was, ran a long distance in her night clothes for physicians and the police. The police arrested Storrs about an hour and a half afterwards.

His examination will occur this afternoon. The people are much excited over the affair and a bitter feeling against Storrs prevails. It is thought the injuries of the ladies will not prove fatal.

UNCERTAINTY IN CANADA.

The Actual Party Strength Will Not be Known for Several Days.

OTTAWA, March 9.—There will be recounts of the ballots in a number of the close constituences, and it is not likely that the actual strength of the Conservative and Liberal parties, as indicated by the late election, will be known for several days.

In Canada proper, Ontario and Quebec, the Liberals have an undoubted majority, and if Sir John Macdonald remains in power he must govern by means of the "floaters" from British Columbia and New Brunswick.

The Cabinet will meet to-morrow and preparations for work of the session will be commenced. It is understood that Parliament will meet on Wednesday, April 29, to enable the House of Commons to elect a Speaker, and the formal opening will take place the following day.

He Will Have a New Gallows.

BALTIMORE, March 9.—Ernest Forbes, who is under sentence of death for assault upon Miss Bertha B. Phipps, has made a full confession of his crime. The condemned man seems to realize that he is to be hanged, but talks about it in a very flippant manner. He says he has no hopes of having his sentence commuted. The gallows will be erected this week and it will be new.

Bold Work by Incendiaries.

LISTOWELL, Ont., March 9.—Incendiaries bound and gagged the night watchman at Hess Brothers' furniture factory and then set fire to the premises, which were totally destroyed. The pumps at the waterworks had been tampered with and the firemen were unable to do effective work. The loss is estimated at $50,000. No clue.

Severe Earthquake Shocks.

TACOMA, Wash., March 9.—Quite a severe earthquake shock was felt in this city last night, the vibrations lasting only a second. At Ellensburg and several other points on the Northern Pacific three distinct shocks occurred lasting about ten seconds. No damage is reported.

The New Brooklyn Tabernacle.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Of the $250,000 worth of bonds issued in order to take up the indebtedness and furnish the new Brooklyn Tabernacle, $25,000 of the issue has been subscribed for by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage. Russell Sage it is said, will exchange his $125,000 mortgage for the same amount in bonds.

Forger Lips Arrested.

CHICAGO, March 9.—George Lips of Denver, who in May, 1888, obtained $19,000 from Stanley & Co. of Chicago by forging the names of his father and mother to bogus deeds of property, was arrested in Guthrie, O. T., yesterday. He will be brought to Chicago at once.

A SENSATIONAL CASE

Grave Charges Against a United States Marshal.

A BOND EXACTED BY BULLYING.

Sutherland's Story About His Sending Indecent Matter Through the Mails.

He Implicates the Rev. Mr. Sears—Compelled to Sign Over $10,000 to Minister Donohue by Threats—Marshal Barring Was to Receive $4,000—The Facts Told in Court by Sutherland.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 9.—Another startling chapter has been added to the Sutherland-Donohue case, the publication of which has created a sensation here.

As already reported, M. E. Sutherland and George Mane, both residents of Hazelton, were arrested, charged with making improper use of the mails. United States Marshal Barring made the arrest. Sutherland is worth $100,000. Mane is proprietor of the Daily Sentinel. The offending circulars were sent to the Rev. Peter Donohue, presiding elder of the Danville District M. E. Church, and his parishioners.

The circular declares the necessity of a new presiding elder in the Danville District, and denounces the incumbent, in terms too gross to repeat, as a hypocrite, fraud and libertine. It is signed "Nemesis."

Forced to Sign a Note.

When Sutherland was arrested he confessed to being the author of the circular, saying that he had hated Donohue for years. He now states that he was taken to the private office of Marshal Barring and there forced to sign a note for $10,000 payable to the Rev. Peter Donohue. The next day the note was put on record in the Court House, and across its face was written: "I hereby assign to Marshal Barring $4,000. Peter Donohue."

Sutherland went into court and protested against being forced to pay the note, making the statement above given. Marshal Barring says he wanted the $4,000.

Rev. Mr. Sears Implicated.

Sutherland's story brought out the fact that he had been instigated in his attack upon Donohue by the Rev. William Sears, another M. E. minister, who was a candidate for Donohue's position as presiding elder. He is charged with having written many letters to Sutherland, furnishing him with charges to be used in the circulars against Donohue. In one letter he is reported as saying: "Another circular will kill him as sure as fate."

When Sears found that Sutherland was caught he is said to have urged him to sign the note giving $10,000.

It is not likely the note will be paid now. The Court has allowed Sutherland to enter the above defence.

TWO MISERS FOUND DEAD.

They Lived Like Hermits in a Filthy Den in the Quaker City.

PHILADELPHIA, March 9.—Hannah McWilliams, aged 70, and her son David, 35 years old, who led a miserly existence at 516 Mulberry street, were found dead in their home during the day.

The house was filthy, although the McWilliams were well-to-do, owning five houses in Mulberry street and five others in another locality. In addition to this property they had a substantial bank account.

The mother and son lived like hermits, never communicating with neighbors or allowing any of them to cross their threshold. The police say that both died from natural causes.

Secretary Foster Goes to Ohio.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Secretary Foster has left the city for a few weeks' visit to his home in Fostoria, Ohio, for the purpose of arranging his private affairs for a permanent residence in Washington. It is said on high authority that appointment of an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury will not be made until after his return, and that there is no prospect of an immediate change in the office of United State Treasurer.

A Curious Fraud in Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 9.—The Legislative Committee on Expenditures have unearthed a peculiar fraud. It was found that it had cost the State $25,000 the last year for wolf bounties, $5 being allowed for each scalp. Inquiry developed the fact that regular wolf farms existed in northern counties of the State, where wolves were raised in large numbers simply for the purpose of selling their scalps to the State.

Five Victims of Trichinae.

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., March 9.—The terrible trichinae are doing deadly work in Ida County. Two more Germans died yesterday, making five altogether in the past week. It is thought several more will die. About a dozen of the afflicted are improving and will probably recover. A leading physician has examined the patients thoroughly, and says that about 75,000 of these deadly parasites exist in every cubic inch of the muscles of the patients' bodies.

Shoe Workers on Strike.

HAVERHILL, Mass., March 9.—The shoe workers in J. H. Winchell's factory struck because a non-union man was employed at rates below which those of the union demanded. The non-union man quit work to avoid trouble but the firm refused to pay the union man the rates demanded and the strike was the result. The firm employs many persons.

Heavy Snow Storm in the West.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 9.—Snow is falling since 1 o'clock a. m. and is now drifting. Dispatches from Minnesota, Iowa and Wisconsin points show that the storm is general over these states. Ten inches of snow has fallen at Waverly, Iowa, 12 inches at Ottumwa, Iowa, the same amount at West Superior, Wis., and Minnesota points.

THE TROUBLE AT ALBANY.

Republicans and Democrats Determined to Carry on the Fight in the Senate.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 9.—The Legislature will reassemble at 8:30 to-night. In the Assembly the routine business will go on and there will be nothing of very general interest occurring.

In the Senate, however, there will be no business transacted, the first order after the prayer being the fight over rule 3, it having been made the pending question for to-night immediately after the reading of the journal.

The Senate has done no business since last Wednesday morning and is not likely to do anything this week. There are over 75 Assembly bills lying on the desk awaiting disposal, and a large number of Senate bills on third reading.

The Republicans say they will sit until July to obtain the passage of Senator Sloane's resolution which practically forbids the Lieutenant-Governor to place a Democrat in the chair during his temporary absence.

The Democrats smile and say they will sit also, but will not allow that amendment to pass.

DISCOVERED IN TIME.

A Dozen Steel Saws Found in the Cells of Two Notorious Murderers.

SOMERSET, Pa., March 9.—About a dozen steel saws, nine inches in length, were found yesterday in the cells of Joe and Dave Nagely, the notorious murderers who are to be hanged April 2.

The sheriff is greatly disturbed over the discovery and is at a loss to account for the saws and files in the murderers' cells. No one but the jail officials have been allowed to see or speak to the condemned men except their attorneys and relatives, and the latter in the presence and hearing of an official.

It is more than probable that the tools discovered were smuggled into the prison by relatives of the condemned men.

FOUND IN THE RIVER.

A Well-Known Society Lady of New Haven Commits Suicide.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 9.—Society in this city received a severe shock when it was learned that Mrs. W. H. Minor, a well-known society lady had disappeared from her home and could not be found.

Of late her husband has noticed that she has acted rather queerly, but nothing was thought of it, as he supposed she was suffering from over excitement, brought on by the many society events before the beginning of Lent.

A searching party was sent out and the body of Mrs. Minor was found last evening in the West River. She had committed suicide while temporarily deranged.

Carpenters Demand Arbitration.

CHICAGO, March 9.—Arbitration will again be resorted to by the carpenters of Chicago before the final step is taken toward a strike. This was the feeling of the great mass meeting held in Battery D yesterday afternoon. About 3,000 carpenters were in attendance. With the unanimous approval of all the carpenters present a resolution was adopted demanding that the questions now in dispute be settled by a board of arbitration. To prevent blame being attached to the carpenters if a strike was ordered for April 1, they gave the carpenters and builders until March 28 to accede to their demand for arbitration.

The New York Governorship.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 9.—The Governorship is now the mooted question. Gossip is to the effect that Congressman James Wadsworth of Geneseo for Governor and Howard Carroll of New York for Lieutenant-Governor are the favorites for next fall's nominations on the Republican ticket. Judge Alton G. Parker of the Court of Appeals is spoken of as Gov. Hill's successor. Judge Parker, as is well known, is very close to the Governor. Roswell P. Flower for Governor and William T. Sheehan for Lieutenant-Governor is another ticket named.

Beaten by a Striking Spinner.

NEWARK, N. J., March 9.—James Grimshaw, a striker at the Clark Mills, has been arrested for assaulting James Ryan, a scab spinner. Ryan was formerly a striker, but deserted. He was met in the street by some of the strikers and a small riot ensued, which the police promptly suppressed, but not before Ryan had been badly beaten. Warrants are out for C. Hughes and David Buchanan, leaders of the Clark strikers.

Suffocated by Coal Gas.

NORWICH, Conn., March 9.—Several persons were prostrated by coal gas during services yesterday in the Lutheran Church. Rev. Mr. Schaeffer was the first affected and then one after another of those present followed, until eight fainted. The victims were taken to their homes and soon recovered. The ignorance of the sexton as to the working of the furnace caused all the trouble.

Brennan Won on a Foul.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 9.—The fight to a finish between Frank Brennan, of Buffalo, and John Douglass, of Salamanca, N. Y., which took place in a barn at Fentonville, a little place near the border of the State, was won by Brennan in the second round on a foul made by Douglass. About 1,000 persons paid $2 each to see the fight.

Driven from Their Homes.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 9.—The Columbia River is doing considerable damage here and in this vicinity. Five hundred people have been driven into the streets. The waters are still rising, and two feet more will render at least 1,000 more homes uninhabitable.

Wife Murder Moss Must Hang.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 9.—Wife murderer Moss, formerly of Auburn, N. Y., who is to be hanged this month, has been notified that the Board of Pardons has refused to interfere in his case. The prisoner replied that he was prepared to meet his fate.

FOUGHT WITH CLUBS

Parnell's Envoys to America in a Row at Queenstown.

BLOOD FLOWED QUITE FREELY.

They Escaped the Greens of the McCarthyites and a General Fight Occurred.

Many Persons Narrowly Escape Falling Into the Water—Parnell Speaks to a Big Crowd at Newry—He Denounces the Interference of the Clergy—A Noisy McCarthyite Roughly Handled.

LONDON, March 9.—A highly exciting and exceedingly disgraceful scene occurred at Queenstown on the occasion of the departure of the Parnellite envoys for America.

When the Etruria arrived in the harbor with John F. Connor and James J. O'Kelly on board, Messrs. William Redmond and Henry Harrison were at the wharf ready to join the commission.

Hundreds of the anti-Parnellites and sympathizers had assembled to bid them farewell, and the McCarthyites were out in strong force to counteract the effect of any demonstrations the Parnellites might indulge in.

As Messrs. Harrison and Redmond started toward the tender to get on board the ship, the McCarthyites set up a chorus of groans. The Parnellites resented this, and a fight began in the quay which soon involved the full strength of each faction.

Everybody seemed to be provided with a stick, which he used with great vigor, and the missiles realized their instruments as weapons.

Blood flowed freely as the Parnellite crowd fought its way toward the tender, and many persons narrowly escaped falling into the water in the heat of the battle, as the two envoys embarked on the little vessel. A number of other passengers who were on the quay ready to embark narrowly escaped injury in the melee, and all unsparingly expressed their disgust at the disgraceful proceedings.

About 200 Parnellites went on board the tender with Redmond and Harrison, and on the way out to the steamer presented the envoys with an address, to which Mr. Redmond replied.

PARNELL'S NEWRY MEETING.

A Noisy McCarthyite Forced to Kneel Down and Eat Paper.

DUBLIN, March 9.—Parnell's meeting at Newry was a great affair in point of numbers and enthusiasm. Notwithstanding the virtual prohibition of the bishop from attendance at the demonstrations, and the bitter denunciation of Parnell by the clergy, not less than 5,000 persons were present.

The McCarthyites, with the aid of the priests, tried to hold a counter demonstration, but it amounted to very little.

Mr. Parnell bitterly denounced the interference of the clergy and spoke hopefully of Ireland's prospects of genuine home rule. He asserted that Irishmen must depend upon themselves, and not on England, for bringing about the accomplishment of national government for Ireland. His utterances were loudly cheered.

A McCarthyite, in the rear of the crowd, who shouted out something derogatory to Parnell and waved a copy of the bishop's pastoral, was immediately attacked. He sought safety in flight, but was pursued and captured by a party of Parnellites, who compelled him to kneel down and eat the paper on which the pastoral was printed.

The National Press, the new daily newspaper of the McCarthyite section of the Irish National party, has been issued. In its salutatory the National Press declares that it will urge that the policy maintained for years past shall be persisted in inasmuch as that policy has resulted in the upbuilding of a united Irish party. Parnell's appeal to the Irish in the United States is not the paper says intended to secure relief for evicted tenants, but rather to bring grist to the Parnellite mill.

Ex-Empress Eugenie a Wreck.

LONDON, March 9.—The ex-Empress Eugenie is reported to be in a very sad condition physically, and little more than a wreck mentally. There is no allegation of insanity, but her unfriendly reception in Paris, where she was at first mistaken for the Empress Frederick, and afterward insulted as soon as her identity became known, was a great shock to her. She has lost all trace of her former attractions, and has even ceased to cover the ravages of time with cosmetics. To the better class of Frenchmen she is an object of pity, if not of sympathy, but the mob seldom loses an opportunity to show their hatred.

Prince Henry an Acrobat.

BERLIN, March 9.—Prince Henry, brother of the Kaiser, is proving himself an expert acrobat in amateur theatricals, and would probably be able to make his living in this way in the event of being thrown on the world. At a recent affair got up among members of the imperial house, Prince Henry [illegible] by his astonishing feats of [illegible] of the performance [illegible] the stage.

Bismarck to Be Received.

LONDON, March 9.—Berlin advices state that Bismarck's presence in the Reichstag is confidently expected. The Prince, it is said, now seriously considers the acceptance of the latest offer made to him for Goestenhunde, in Hanover, and it is expected that he will accept it. The Bismarckian policy is evidently regaining part of its former strength in Germany, and the Prince could not enter the Reichstag at a time more favorable to himself.

The Newman Pastor Received.

BRADDOCK, Pa., March 9.—At Mottsville, this county, Rev. Joseph Sprecht, said-Bowman, was refused admission to the pulpit of the Evangelical Church here, and the Rev. P. V. Albright, Bowman, received no praise.

IS HE THE MURDERER?

Sentenced to Death, Escaped and Thought to be Found.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., March 9.—A strange but well authenticated report comes from the far-off State of Washington of the capture there of a condemned murderer, who broke jail at Stroudsburg, Pa., 22 years ago, and has since been in hiding.

On Sept. 25, 1868, Theodore Brodhead, one of the principal residents of the Delaware Water Gap, the noted summer resort, was murdered and robbed under circumstances of peculiar atrocity. Two dissolute young men of the neighborhood, named William Brooks and Charles Orme, were brought to trial for the crime at the next term of the Monroe County Court, and were convicted and sentenced to be hanged. About two weeks before the date fixed for their execution the culprits, by the aid of tools supplied by friends outside, broke jail and escaped. They relieved themselves of the shackles and when the jailer entered their cell in the morning they overpowered him and took his keys, and, after locking him in the cell, they opened the jail doors and fled.

The fugitives started off across the mountains, seeking a hiding place in the rough coal mining region. Orme got separated from his companion and was recaptured and taken back to Stroudsburg and hanged.

The county offered a reward of $500 for the recapture of Brooks, and a vigorous but ineffectual search was made for him in all probable quarters. As years elapsed without any trace of him being found, it became a generally accepted theory in the public mind that retributive justice had overtaken him at the outset of his flight; that he had perished miserably of cold and hunger in the recesses of the barren mountain region which he had essayed to cross.

The criminal authorities of Monroe County have now received a brief dispatch from the sheriff of one of the interior counties of Washington notifying them of the arrest there of the escaped murderer, Brooks. It appears that a former Monroe County man, who had known Brooks before he got into trouble, happened to meet him in that far off locality, and at once denounced him to the authorities. Specific details of the arrest are expected by mail, after receiving which the Monroe County sheriff will arm himself with a requisition and go after the murderer.

BUILDING THE AIR SHIP.

A Few Passengers Will Make the First Trip from Chicago to New York.

CHICAGO, March 9.—Arrangements have been completed for the construction of the large air ship by the Mount Carmel Company. The Exposition building has been leased for three months. The south half of the building is being enclosed, and within this space the big ship will be completed. A large quantity of aluminum has been ordered from Pittsburg for the purpose.

Inventor Pennington declares that within sixty days the ship will be ready for its trial flight and a few passengers will be carried on its first trip to New York. A thorough test will be made on the lake front after it has been finished, and the directors of the company are satisfied that this test will demonstrate beyond all question the value and practicability of the Pennington invention.

Great Ice Shipments.

There have been 4,200 cars of ice shipped from Lake Hopatcong this Winter up to the close of last week and each car averages about 12 tons, making in all 50,400 tons. There was also 20,000 tons stored in the houses about the Lake. This ice was got by the United Ice Line of New Jersey.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Police Captain Geo. W. Grant is confined to the house by illness.

Miss Mabel Woodruff of East Second street is visiting friends at Rahway.

Edward Nelson, ticket agent at the North avenue railway station, who was so seriously ill, improving.

The Rev. Mr. Richards's sermon of yesterday on "Covetousness", will be printed in full in THE PRESS of to-morrow.

The Hon. Jas. Clark, of West Seventh street, arrived home from St. Louis, Friday evening. He reports a delightful Winter there.

The Ministers' Association will meet this afternoon at the residence of the Rev. C. Schenck. The Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman will read a paper.

The Sir Knights of Trinity Commandery will regret to learn that Sir George W. Taylor, of West Second street, expects shortly to take up his residence in Philadelphia.

Messrs. James Kimball and John Whiting will have charge of the programme at the meeting of the young men's auxiliary at the Young Men's Christian Association rooms to-morrow evening.

William Graydon, of Central avenue and Sixth street, has purchased of George A. Chapman the latter's handsome residence on Eighth street. Mr. Graydon and family will make their home there in the future.

The Rev. A. F. Todd occupied the pulpit of the Trinity Reformed church yesterday morning, and preached a well-written sermon, from the text, "Whose image and superscription hath it"—Luke xx: 24. Mr. Todd is a retired Reformed minister, and with his family resides at Dunellen.

Charles Bullman, of Third place, leaves to-morrow for San Francisco en route to the Sandwich Islands. There he will charter a vessel and make a voyage of exploration to one of the Australasia group in the South Pacific, in the interests of an English syndicate that he represents.

Chief Doane, Second Assistant Murray, and ex-Assistant Martin, of the Plainfield Fire Department, were the guests of District Chief Breslin in New York city, Friday. They were shown everything from the fire boat and Chief Breslin's patent inside distribution nozzle, to the long tailed horse and the Old Homestead.

Among the prominent guests at the Rochester University Alumni banquet in New York, Saturday evening, were Chauncey B. Ripley of Westfield, and William J. Leonard and Oliver B Leonard of this city. O. B Leonard, who was graduated with the Class of '61, was elected a member of the Executive Committee to prepare the next re-union.

Senator Marsh's bill providing for the election of Chosen Freeholders by election districts—three for each district and one at large—has created consternation in the Republican Board of Freeholders of Union county, they knowing full well that if the bill passed the Democratic county of Union will be controlled by a Democratic Board of Freeholders. Senator Marsh is looking after the interests of his constituents, and will receive the commendation he deserves for his actions in that direction.

Past Master C. M. Goddard, of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, who recently left Plainfield to take up his residence and business at Boston, is very successful in his new field. He was recently elected Secretary of the New England Insurance Exchange, which appointment has given that Company considerable satisfaction. As such he has proved himself a man of exceptionable ability, and has shown qualifications which seem to fit him for the important duties devolving on him as secretary.—The Royal Craftsman.

Miss Alice Isabel Murrey, daughter of E. P. Murrey, and William Cushing Bamburg of Plainfield, were married in the Metropolitan Baptist church, at Washington, D. C, last Wednesday evening, by the pastor, the Rev. Green Clay Smith. The bride wore a gown of white satin. She was attended by two bridesmaids, her sister, Miss Blanche Murrey, and Miss Katherine Crisp, who wore gowns of white silk. Thomas Miller, of Washington, was best man. A reception at the home of the bride followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Bamburg left the city on a wedding journey, after which they will make their home at Plainfield.

After four months spent in securing papers from the pens of Archdeacon Farrar, Profs. Marvin Vincent, Stearns and Bird, Bishops John Vincent, Hurst, Perry, Hendrix and many other eminent divines of the Methodist persuasion, Henry K. Carroll, LL. D., presents in the current number of The Independent, a Methodistic symposium. So exhaustive a review of the organizations that have resulted from the Jonn Wesley movement, and the influence of that movement on other christian bodies, has never before been compiled and probably never will again with such an array of talent. If published in book form it will occupy a prominent place in every library.

Next Time It Blows, Look Out for Fire.

The new fire-alarm system was given a final test this morning, was found to be in perfect condition, and was accepted.

The final test was made by the Common Council's Committee on Fire and Buildings and the Board of Fire Engineers, who accepted the system from the Gamewell Company. Chief Doane of the Fire Department will distribute the keys to the signal boxes as soon as possible.

—Something new in black goods are the skirting lawns at Peck's.

MANGLED BY THE CARS.

A Young Husband Loses the Good Right Hand on Which His Livelihood Depended.

The bleeding and senseless body of John Wilson Young was found lying beside the railway track near Grant avenue last evening. His right fore-arm was crushed, and his head had a cruel gash in it so wide that one could have thrust in a thumb. He was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where, under the kind offices of Matron Walrod and the staff of physicians, he was restored to consciousness and his wounds were tenderly dressed.

This morning he was suffering less pain than at first, but his head was not yet clear, and he could not collect his thoughts sufficiently to tell the story of the accident. It is gathered, however, that he jumped from a moving passenger train, in his hurry to reach home, rather than be carried to the station beyond. The wheels had passed over his arm, and his head had had a cruel blow.

His right fore-arm had to be amputated. This is an especially great hardship, as Young has been a stenographer in the employ of The Pond Machine Tool Company, and the loss of a good right hand means a great deal in that business. Young was married about six months ago. His wife lives next door to Muhlenberg.

Young was found by track-walker McNamara, who, with the assistance of Fred. S. Moore, carried him to the hospital.

This afternoon Young was again unconscious, but it is thought that he will recover.

Firemen Give Homage to the Dead.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Jeremiah VanWinkle were held in the Park Avenue Baptist church at two o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Rev. Asa Reed Dills preached the sermon. The pall-bearers were T. O. Doane, T. J. Gilles, Lewis Barkalew, Guillermo Thorn, Henry W. Force and Thomas MacDonald, all of whom had served in the fire department with the deceased. The funeral was the largest firemen's funeral ever witnessed in Plainfield. Engine Company No. 2 attended in a body. The Exempt Firemen's Association had about sixty members present, and fully sixty other firemen were present. The entire department was well represented, and all joined in loving homage to the departed. A large number of other mourners also were present.

Interment was made in Evergreen Cemetery.

An Old and Faithful Engineer.

"Hud" Lovell, who drives engine 379 on the Jersey Central Railroad, and who is well known to all Plainfield patrons of the railway, is one of the oldest engineers on the road. He has been an engineer since 1865, when he was promoted from fireman, and has been running continually since that time in the passenger service between New York and Easton. He has the record of having traveled more miles than any other man in the employ of the road. He has never had a serious accident or lost a life in the train behind him. To-day his hand is as steady and his nerve as true as they were a quarter of a century ago.

The Duty of the Suburbs to the Cities.

At the meeting of the Northern New Jersey Conference of Congregational churches in the Congregational to-morrow, the discussion at 10:45 A. M. will be on "The Duty of the Suburbs to the Cities." M. the subject will be, "The Personal Touch," discussed by the Rev. C. L. Merriam of Paterson, the Rev. W. O. Weedon of Montclair and the Rev. S. L. Loomis of Newark. Any who would be interested are invited.

Knights to Present a Comedy.

Wetumpka Lodge, No. 3401, Knights of Honor, will celebrate its third anniversary by giving a complimentary entertainment to its members and friends, Tuesday evening, April 14, in Music Hall.

Messrs. C. J. Feytel, E. S. Rogers, F. P. Haffner, L. I. VanAlstyne and C. H. Rugg, constituting the committee of arrangements, have secured the services of the Brooklyn Comedy Company, composed of the leading members of the Dramatic Corps of the Amaranth Society of Brooklyn, who will appear in "Confusion," a farcical comedy in three acts.

Death of George H. Graham.

George H. Graham, for twenty years a resident of Netherwood and Plainfield, died at the Muhlenberg Hospital at midnight Sunday. He had been a sufferer nearly a year, and had been in the hospital about five weeks. He was a supervising architect, and supervised the construction of the residences of Mayor Alexander Gilbert and Pliny Fisk, and other prominent Plainfield buildings. He leaves two sons—one in Connecticut, and one in Massachusetts. He will be buried at Brookfield, Conn., Wednesday.

VERY SWEET AMONG THE WOMEN.

Holds the Hymn Books for the Girls, and Takes Them Home from Church.—This is Why the Jealous Young Men Make Charges Against Their Pastor.

The Rev. A. Cushing Dill, who preaches at Stirling, one of the mountain villages just back of North Plainfield, is accused by some members of his congregation with giving too much attention to a number of young ladies of the neighborhood.

Mr. Dill is young and unmarried. He is short of stature, wears a full brown beard cut sharp at the chin, and uses spectacles. He is a dapper little man. Previous to becoming pastor of the little church at Stirling, Mr. Dill had a charge in Mount Freedom, a small neighboring village. He has been in Stirling over a year. The Presbyterian church, of which he is pastor, is on a winding road leading up-hill from the railway. It is a pretty structure, built in Gothic style, with a little spire. It is painted a deep red, and has a dark roof. The grounds rise from the road and are graded off. The spot is an unusually attractive one.

Mr. Dill's conduct caused so much talk and so annoyed the greater number of his congregation that it was at last determined to do something. Everyone knew that the members were arranging to prefer charges, but the pastor was not without friends. Many of his supporters came from the circle of admiring young ladies themselves.

It was decided that a committee, which included some of the trustees, should make charges of misconduct. The hearing was to be conducted before the Rev. Mr. White, a well-known minister at Summit. Members of the church were not debarred, and several were at Mr. White's house. The hearing was conducted last week Monday, in the presence of several well-known Presbyterian clergymen, who acted as a jury. Among those who testified was Miss Grace Marsh. No conclusion was reached at the first hearing, so another was held at the same place and under the same conditions last Wednesday. Many of the same persons were present, and others who had not attended the first hearing. Among them were several young ladies. At this hearing the Rev. Mr. Dill was summoned to appear. He was present.

When Mr. Dill first began to preach at Stirling he boarded with a family that has since moved away. His services were satisfactory at that time. He then sought a boarding place with Miss Caroline Boyle, a lady whose age is about seventy. According to the statements made, up to the time Mr. Dill made his headquarters at her house she had few callers. Soon after Mr. Dill became her boarder young ladies called at the house often, and it led to talk. The young ladies were twitted about calling on Miss Boyle as an excuse to see the handsome pastor. They promptly resented the insinuation, and insisted that they called only to see Miss Boyle. The church people kept a sharp look-out after that. Last Summer three young ladies were invited to call at the house, and it is said that they remained all night. On the following Sunday, instead of having a sermon, the pastor read what some in his congregation called a "love story". Several strangers were present, expecting to hear one of Mr. Dill's bright sermons. When the "love story" was read, the regular attendants hung their heads and blushed. When Mr. Dill was reminded that his congregation did not indorse that sort of preaching, he replied that he was "inspired by the Lord".

At prayer meetings, it is alleged, he usually sings from the same book with a lady, and is a very devout singer, too. He does not approve of any of the young ladies going home at night without escort, and often has been the escort himself. Until his rig met with a mishap Mr. Dill drove a two-wheel vehicle. In this vehicle he often took the ladies home after meetings.

The more mature members also claim that his sermons are too sensational, and allege that he tells pithy anecdotes that cause the young men and women to look at each other and laugh. Some of the devout old people connected with the church object to that sort of spiritual consolation, and some of the young men of the village who are said to be jealous of the clergyman's personal popularity among the fair feminines of the flock are very outspoken in denouncing it.

It was at last decided that some of the young men should speak to the pastor. Mr. Dill was displeased when asked to change his course, and said he was working for the Lord and was inspired by the Holy Ghost.

When the question of what was to be charged against Mr. Dill came up, one of the committee opposed to him said that no desire was manifested by those associated with him to charge Mr. Dill with immoral conduct. A man on the opposite side asked why the charge of immoral conduct was not pressed.

The committeeman replied that it was thought that Mr. Dill was of unsound mind, and if that was the case probably he was not responsible.

The decision of the clergymen who will pass judgment on Mr. Dill will be announced in the Presbyterian church at an early date.

Stirling is a manufacturing town, and many young girls are employed in the silk mill. Many of these girls and others in the place are among the worshipers at Mr. Dill's church. He is called a "young people's preacher". A resident of Stirling says there are ten girls in town who are "crazy" for the young preacher, and adds that two married women are smitten.

TRIED TO SHOOT THEIR CAPTORS

Sneak-Thieving Tramps Who Were Very Bold and Brazen to Women, but the Doughty Sergeant Lynch Soon Brought Them to Terms.

Two ugly tramps who give their names as John Burns and John Collins were arrested in this city this morning. They had been abusing and insulting women, and terrorizing other people in the boulevard neighborhood, and had stolen an overcoat from Isaac Sheppard, of A. D. Thompson's stables. Valiant Police Sergeant Patrick Lynch captured the men after a hot race and a desperate struggle, and imprisoned them to await trial. They tried to shoot the sergeant and the citizens who assisted him, before they were overpowered. One of them had cut the sleeves out of the stolen overcoat, and was wearing the frock part as a shirt and the sleeves as a pair of trousers.

Plainfield People as Others See Them.

[From The New York World.]

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, who is among the brainiest residents of Plainfield, leads no solitary and exclusive life. One day he was sitting on a cracker-box in a dingy shoe store chatting familiarly with the shoemaker. Next night he was leading a mass-meeting. His figure is imposing, his beard is long and tinged with gray, his appearance in the pulpit of the Seventh-Day church and at all public meetings is that of a man strong and self-contained. He has delved in history and philosophy, produced half a dozen books, taught as many college classes at Alfred University and edited an unknown number of magazines and weeklies. The population of Seventh-Day Baptists in the town is very large, but Dr. Lewis is not leader among them alone. The ministers of the city trust to his judgment. The fact that he is the foremost champion of the Seventh-Day faith, and has attacked repeatedly the position held by other churches, does not in the least interfere with his kindly relations with the other church people of the town. In addition, he leads in local temperance reform and is especially severe on the "Big Six" for granting licenses, and the Legislature for even thinking of changes in the present liquor laws. His position is unique. He is among the most radical of modern reformers in religion and temperance. Yet it is is not known that he ever had an enemy.

It is dangerous to become the employe of a railroad if one has political aspirations. Ticket Agent Edward G. Nelson, who for years has marshalled the tickets in the Central Railroad office at Plainfield, ran for Common Councilman on the Republican ticket from the Fourth Ward and was badly beaten. Then Freight Agent Joseph A. Haynes started in pursuit of the same honor. The Democracy of the First Ward backed him, but he, too, was left in the race.

"Dominie," a man on the steps of the Crescent Avenue church, in Plainfield, once said "This isn't a Presbyterian church. It's a church of all Christians." And he said it of a congregation which is divided in opinion and in creed and which yet works together in beautiful harmony. Its presiding genius is the Rev. W. B. Richards, who left the Congregational for the Presbyterian church with not the least feeling that he had shattered his religious principles. He is a tall, stoop-shouldered man, with light hair and a frank, boyish face, which takes on the philosopher's profound expression at times. His manners are gentle and kindly, he works eight days in the week, has a horror of rhetoric, but a power of making hard things clear that draws an attentive gathering every Sunday. The congregation was never so large as since he took charge. He is at direct variance with leading men and women of his congregation on religious, temperance and political subjects, but the settled rule in the church is toleration of opinions. The Crescent Avenue Church is among the most vigorous in Plainfield.

Offered Office as a Bribe.

The New York World says that Cranford commuters to New York want the express carrying the arrogant Plainfield crowd from that city at 8:31 stopped at Cranford every morning so that they can be on deck at the exchanges at the same hour as the Plainfielders. At present the Cranford commuters do not reach New York till twenty minutes after the Plainfielders, who often gobble up the best stocks of the day in that brief thirty minutes. J. H. Olhausen, Superintendent of the Jersey Central, lives in Cranford, and the commuters have offered, if he will stop that Plainfield express, to give him one of the township offices at the election to-morrow.

Handsome Testimonial from the Plainfield Boys.

A large delegation from Plainfield Engine Company, No. 2, visted Lincoln Hose Company of Perth Amboy, a few days ago, and presented them with a very handsome silver trumpet, glass case and oak stand. The boys were considerably surprised to receive such a valuable present. Speeches were made by the different members, after which supper was served, and the evening was passed in story telli and song.

Pleasant to take; perfectly safe, even to the most delicate; and always efficacious. These are the chief attributes of Hires' Cough Cure. Add cheapness—twenty-five cents buys a bottle anywhere—and you have the greatest remedy in the world.

A Reply From Borough Democrats.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In reply to an article in another paper of March 6, signed "Taxpayer," the "points" are grossly misleading, and not in any way founded of fact. In that article "Taxpayer" states that the law of 1839 gives the Mayor and Common Council power to appoint an assessor who "shall assess all taxes of every kind," when in fact no such powers are or could be delegated to that body.

"Taxpayer" says that the law provides, etc.," but why did he not quote it and let everyone read it? Chapter CLI, page 256, of laws of 1889, reads as follows:

"An act to provide for the appointment of an assessor in boroughs of the first class.

"1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, that hereafter the assessor of taxes in and for boroughs of the first class shall be appointed by the Mayor and Common Council of said boroughs." A careful reading of the above act will convince any voter that "Taxpayer" has drawn a false conclusion, as the assessor thus appointed can only assess for borough purposes. "Taxpayer" says that "the Democrats claim that this law is unconstitutional." For this assertion he has no authority, as the Democrats have never made any such claim.

A township assessor must be elected to assess for county, township, and other purposes, and lawsuits could not by any possibility arise unless a blindly partisan Council should appoint a borough assessor (and confer unlawful powers upon him) contrary to the wishes of the people as expressed at the polls.

To Popularize and Create a More Extended Interest in Cycling.

Frank L. C. Martin, Captain of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, and proprietor of Plainfield's bicycle store at 75 Park avenue, returned this morning from Philadelphia where he went several days ago to attend the A. C. C. Cycle show held under the auspices of the associated cycling clubs of Philadelphia, from March 2 to 7, at Horticultural Hall.

The object of this exhibit was to have a thoroughly representative exhibition of the cycling trade of the country; to show the great advances that have been made in the manufacture of wheels; to bring to the attention of wheelmen the improvements and novelties for the coming season; to popularize cycling and create a more extended interest by showing its great advantages.

Ex-Mayor Male's Administrators.

John W. Harrison of Jersey City and Elias B. Pope of Plainfield have been appointed by the Chancellor administrators pendente lite of the estate of Job Male, deceased. Counsel in the case offered the position to Craig A. Marsh, but the latter peremptorily declined on the ground that he might be required to appear as a witness in the case. Mr. Harrison was a life long friend and confidante of the ex-Mayor, and one of those present at the death-bed scene described in THE PRESS. Other papers still insist that "the estate runs up into the millions". It will not amount to $500,000.

RATS AS MELON THIEVES.

Strange Sights Witnessed by a Vercelous Grocerywoman.

Readers of the children's stories of the good old times have seen again and again in the juvenile magazines stories alleged to be true of rats carrying off eggs and other small objects, displaying all but human ingenuity in doing so—one rat classing the egg in his legs and being towed away by the others. A Sixth avenue (Troy, N. Y.) grocer tells a story that eclipses all these, and he is ready, he says, to make affidavit that he saw the occurrence with his own eyes. This is the story as he told it to one of the Troy Union's reporters:

"I have missed melons from my store from time to time—mostly muskmelons, but in one or two instances large watermelons. Of course I suspected boys of being the thieves—there is a tough little gang that hangs around here—and I set a watch. That day and the next we caught boys stealing apples and peaches, but that is an every-day occurrence with almost every grocer and I was pretty well satisfied that the boys were not the thieves I wanted. The next thing that came to be a certainty with me was that the stealing was done in the night. I could find no signs of any one breaking into the store, and the cash-drawer was always untouched. So night before last I watched from six o'clock until midnight with a revolver and a bull's-eye lantern. And I discovered the thieves. They were rats.

"It was about 8:30 when I heard a scampering over the floor near the stand where the melons lay. I turned the bull's-eye on the place and saw five large rats, three on the floor and two up beside a big watermelon on the bench, a foot or eighteen inches above. They didn't seem to mind the glare of the bull's-eye, which threw a strong light upon them but left me in the darkness. The two rats on the bench, standing on their hind legs, pushed the melon off, and it fell with a crushing sound to the floor, splitting into three pieces, though held together more or less by the tissue of the melon.

"With their sharp teeth and claws they quickly cut the thing apart, allowing some seeds and water to run out on the floor. Then, with much struggling and pushing and pulling, two of the rats on their backs on the floor, got pieces of the melon on top of them. One other assisted each of them to keep the melon steady, and the fifth caught each in turn by the tail and by hard pulling dragged them to the cellar stairs. Here the heavy freight was pushed off the rats which had served as carts and rolled down-stairs. This was repeated until every particle of the melon disappeared, seeds and all. I shot the last rat as he paused at the head of the stairs, and I have not missed any melons since."

THE MOON.

Two Things About Her Which Most Every One Should Know.

There are one or two things about the moon that every one should know. Let me mention them, writes Prof. E. S. Holden, of Lick Observatory, to the Youth's Companion. How bright is the full moon, do you think? Suppose you look up at the moon on the next clear night. The sky is a pure, pale blue and the moon is almost dazzlingly bright against it. If the whole canopy of the sky were made up of full moons, and if one were in the center of such a shining shell, one might think that the glare would be intolerable.

But let us see. This very same moon you have often seen in the day time as a pale white disc just barely visible against the background of the sky. In fact, unless you know exactly where to look, you may require a minute or two to find it.

That means that the daylight sky is not so very different in brilliancy from the nearly full moon; or it means that you could very well live under a sky whose every part was just as bright as the moon itself.

We may say, then, that the brightness of the moon is not very much greater than the brightness of the same area of sky. The total light of the full moon can be compared with the total light of the sun, though it is a very difficult problem, and the result will be that the sun is as bright as 680,000 full moons.

Once again, you ought to know and remember how large the moon is. Its diameter is about 2,000 miles—one-fourth of the earth—and its angular diameter is about a half a degree. As there are 180 degrees from the east point to the west point of the horizon measured through the zenith, there is room for 360 full moons in an arch spanning the heavens from east to west, each one touching the rims of those next it.

Another thing, too, you should notice and understand. The moon looks larger near the horizon than it does when it is overhead. The common explanation of this fact is essentially the true one; that is, the low moon is near enough to the horizon to be compared with hills, or trees or houses, and consequently it looks large; while the high moon is isolated, and one has no term of comparison.

In both cases the angular diameter is about half a degree, as you can prove for yourself with a little ingenuity.

Use and Abuse of Perfumes.

Let fair women beware of using perfumes of pronounced and aggressive odors, lest she offend and alienate the regard of her friends. One of the chief causes of the separation of the King of Holland from his first wife was the penchant of Queen Sophia for the scent of musk, which odor was intensely disagreeable to her royal consort. So generously did she indulge her passion for this perfume that not only were her own apartments permeated with it, her clothes, hair and belongings offensive with it, but any room through which she passed would smell for days after of her favorite perfume. The secret of the fascinating fragrance which seems to surround and emanate from dainty women lies ever in the constant use of most delicate and faint perfumes whose odor is intangible and suggestive, rather than in the liberal use of permeating and intense odors which are sure to offend some sensitive olfactory organism.

A CLOSE CALL.

A Reporter Secures an Interview, but Comes Near Losing His Life.

"You know I have been in the newspaper business a long time and I was never known to shirk, not even during a riot or blizzard," says an old-timer in the St. Louis Republic. "Well, I came very near tossing up the pencil a few nights ago. It was very cold, and I had to call on Bishop —— in reference to some church matters. Taking a car down-town I soon reached the street on which the bishop lived. It was just striking the hour of twelve. But I had to see the bishop. Well, sir, I hunted for the number in the dark for some time. Not finding it, I waited to see if I could meet some straggler who lived in the neighborhood. Pretty soon along came a nicely-dressed young fellow in a rather mellow condition. I asked him if he lived in the neighborhood, and he said yes. The truth is, the young man was none other than the bishop's son. He told me in a semi-articulate way that he would go up to his father's room and speak with him about the matter in question.

"Reaching the outer door he unlocked it and asked me to walk in. I stepped in; he opened the second door and I went into the house. Both doors were now locked. The gas had been turned off. We hunted for a match in vain. Well, the young fellow left me in the darkness, uttering a drowsy promise to return soon. I heard him stagger up the stairs all right. He went back several paces until I could detect his footsteps no more. He failed to return. I believe he fell asleep and forgot all about me. I stood there for about fifteen minutes not knowing what to do.

"I made a modest noise. No result. A more decided noise. The same result. I began to walk about, purposely bumping against the furniture. Then something happened. I heard a hoarse voice shout: 'Throw up your hands or you are a dead man.'

"Up went my hands like a shot.

"Whiz, bang, bang—three bullets rattled over my head. I thought my time was up.

"Do you know, it seems as if I lived my whole life over in the few minutes I was standing there. When the gas was lighted the first person I saw was a big, burly negro.

"The shots brought the bishop out in his gown, and his young son with him. Explanations followed. The house had been robbed a few nights before, and the negro had been placed in the basement to watch. He fell asleep. My walking about aroused him. He came upstairs, and, seeing my shining hat, which I had forgotten to take off, he banged away at it. I secured the interview, bought a new hat the next day, and vowed never to wait in a dark hall, no matter who owned the house."

Antiquity of the Indians.

Henshaw, of the Anthropological Society of Washington, declares that the languages of the Indians of this country, of which there were fifty-eight linguistic families and 300 languages and dialects, north of Mexico, at the time of the discovery of America, are none of them related in any way to Asiatic tongues; also as to the origin of the Indian, it must have been in ages so far removed from our own time that the interval is to be reckoned, not in years of chronology, but by the epochs of geologic time.

Good Reasons.

A pastor in Maine resigned because he boarded himself, swept the church, made the fires and rung the bell. The people swore at him, whittled and ate peanuts in meeting time, fired pistols and threw stones at his house, came to church any time before the benediction, laughed loud during the services, etc. He says rum is sold openly in the town, and no one tries to enforce the law.

MY SCHOOLDAYS.

I can not forget them, I can not forget,
Though for ages to come I am doomed to exist;
They're as bright and as fresh in my memory yet,
As the rose blushing red that the sun has just kissed.
It seems like a day past, it seems like a day,
Though really the days have passed on into years;
Since I was a school-boy—and shouts of the play,
The songs and the laughter still ring in my ears.
Oh, the days they were long then, the days they were long,
Like a beautiful song! Like a beautiful song!
The grass then was greener, the sky was more blue,
The birds they sang sweeter high up on the bough;
And I do not know why, yet indeed it is true,
I believe that the stars then were brighter than now,
And my dreams of the future, ah, how you would smile,
Did you know all the castles I built in the air;
No lamp of Aladdin could ever beguile
Into being such castles, so grand and so fair.
Oh, the future I planned then, the future I planned,
Indeed it was grand! Indeed it was grand!
And the forms of my schoolmates—the happy and lorn—
I see in their places around me once more;
Oh! could I but meet them again in the morn,
Oh! could I but greet them again as of yore.
They have taken their places as women and men,
In the battle of life they are not in the rear;
And one who was dearer than life to me then,
I shall never see here! I shall never see here!
My heart it was lighter, much lighter 'twas then
Than it's since ever been than its since ever been!
Oh, the battles we fought then, the battles we won
The problems we mastered, 'twas really sublime;
You could tell very easy how well we had done,
By the way we marched up to recite every time.
'Twas much that I knew then of Profit and Shares;
'Twas much that I knew then of Grammar and all;
But 'twas little I knew of life's labor and cares,
'Twas little I knew of life's trouble and toil,
And songs any sweeter never fell from the tongue,
Than the songs that we sung then, the songs that we sung.
And the master, whose voice was a sentence of death,
Or whose words were repeated and treasured for days,
To the culprit who trembled in front of his desk,
By the urchin whose efforts he greeted with praise,
I remember them all, and I think with a smile
Of the punishment cruel inflicted by one
Who seated me on the girl side of the aisle,
Where I tried to diminish when visitors came;
I have not forgot him, nor will I forget,
And I think if I met him I'd punish him yet.
Oh, that very same school-house now stands on the hill,
And the very same bell gives a warning so sweet,
With the same raft of urchins surrounding it still,
With little bare feet! With little bare feet!
But they're not the same faces, they're not the same forms,
They're not the same voices that ring in my ears;
And I throw down my pen with a feeling forlorn,
Nearly blinded with tears! Nearly blinded with tears!
But perhaps I will meet them, God willing, sometime,
In a far better clime, in a far better clime.
—A. E. Van Veisan, in Good Housekeeping.

HER CORRESPONDENT.

She Makes Running Comments as She Reads.

[Jack's room, with Jack in it. He is tramping up and down, hands in pockets, jacket half off his shoulders, furiously smoking a perfectly empty pipe.]

Jack (savagely soliloquizing between puffs)—Glad I wrote it. Glad I sent it. Glad I've broken with her. Only sorry didn't do it sooner. Flirt. Thorough flirt. Went to see her. Found her going out. With man. Young man. Good-looking. Also stylish. She says she's extremely sorry. But unexpected arrival, and— I flare up. Interrupt. Wish her very good evening. Which means very bad one. Fling off. Lie awake all night. Morning, write letter ending engagement. Post it. Meant to go to Europe instantly. This noon. But thought I'd wait for answer. Wonder if letter's reached her yet? Hope it has. No; I don't. Hope it hasn't. Ethel! (Dashes down pipe, looks at watch.) 3:45, and she'll get it by the five o'clock delivery. Even now I've time to go up there and see her before it comes—time enough. But what do I want to do that for? Haven't I any strength of mind? (Tears off jacket.) Or firmness? (Puts on coat.) Or resolution? (Bathes face and hands, brushes hair.) Or determination? (Hurries into ulster and arctics.) Or a decent amount of self-respecting pride? (Snatches hat.) No; by Jove, I haven't! (Exit, running.)

[Ethel's parlor. Jack, slightly heated and tremendously agitated; to whom enter Ethel.]

Ethel (fondly smiling and not at all conscious)—Why, dear!

Jack (awkwardly)—Ah!—hem!—good afternoon, Miss—Ethel!

Ethel (instantly comprehending)—O Jack! what a foolish, good, blind, quick-tempered stupid you are! You're the most ridiculous being that ever was; and sometimes you try me almost to death, and sometimes you're too funny for any thing. This time you're funny! Ha, ha, ha, ha!

Jack (attempting dignity)—May I ask—

Ethel (laughing)—Oh, yes; you may ask—but whether I can get breath enough to answer is another matter—ha, ha, ha, ha!

Jack (with a sort of shame-faced haughtiness)—If you can do nothing but jeer at me, I'd better—(moves to go.)

Ethel (pulling him down into the chair)—Don't be silly, Jack. You know you don't mean to go—you're only pretending—and you wouldn't be able to, if you meant it—goose!

Jack (helplessly)—Yes; I know. Ethel, it's because I love—

Ethel (delighted at this victory)—Of course it is. That's what you intended to tell me at the very first, wasn't it? (Jack confused.) Well, now, you've told me; I'll tell you something. It was my uncle!

Jack—Eh?

Ethel—Yes; Uncle Joe, just from California. He's papa's younger brother, whom you've never seen—as was quite evident from your behavior—ha, ha, ha, ha! If you'd waited one second, you'd have learned all about it and—

Jack—O Ethel! what a donkey I am! (Seizes her.)

Ethel (unresisting)—Not quite that, but possibly some other kind of big, strong, unreasoning animal—from your actions, I should say a bear. Good old jealous Jack! (Peace breaks out with great violence.)

Servant (entering later)—Th' letters, Miss. (Exit Servant.)

Jack (suddenly recollecting)—Great Heavens!

Ethel (examining letters)—Only one for me. Why, Jack, what ails you? You're absolutely white! Are you ill? You're not? But why do you look so? (Glances at address on envelope). Ah!

Jack (apart)—I'd forgotten all about it!

Ethel (with very piquant air of being mistress of the situation)—Now, whom can this be from? The hand is a man's—very much like yours, Jack. The resemblance is quite strong.

Jack (apart)—What a horrible scrape!

Ethel (leisurely opening letter)—And the envelope's like yours, too—and the paper. (Reads.) "Miss Fay;" Must be from some shop-keeper on business. (Reads.) "When you read these lines I shall be outside of Sandy Hook—" Well, well! What do you think of that, Jack?

Jack (perspiring with agony)—I don't—I can't—

Ethel (thoughtfully)—Do you suppose this person is really where he said he should be when I read these lines?

Jack (wincing)—Merciful powers!

Ethel (resuming)—"—outside of Sandy Hook, never to see you again." At any rate, this isn't from a shop-keeper. (Reads.) "You have tired me out—" I don't know but that it may be, though—(Reads.) "—and I leave you forever—" (Jack groans.) You don't appear interested, and it is stuff, I acknowledge. (Jack groans again.) Let's go on, though, just for fun. (Reads.) "—forever, not to remorse—" dear me, I should hope not. (Reads.) "—which you are incapable of feeling—"

Ethel (apart)—I wish I were dead!

Ethel (looking hard at him)—My correspondent seems rather severe, doesn't he, Jack? (Reads.) "—but I do leave you to one who is far my superior, no doubt—" No doubt, truly. Any sane person would be. (Renewed groans from Jack. Ethel continues.) "—in merit as he is in good fortune—" how very Johnsonian and prize-essayish my correspondent is, Jack! (Reads.) "—and who is, I trust, worthy of your love." Why, he means you, Jack! Now, are you really worthy of my love?

Jack (desperate)—O Ethel! Stop! I—

Ethel (putting her hand on his mouth)—Quiet, Jack! I've not finished reading my letter! (Reads.) "—He can not love you more than I—" can't you, Jack?—(reads) "loved you once"—ah, past tense—(reads) "nor less than I love you now—"

Jack (wildly)—Ethel! Please don't!

Ethel (quietly)—My correspondent is just a little wee grain brutal, isn't he, Jack? (Reads.) "—but you will not care.—" What is your opinion about that, Jack? (Reads.) "Farewell, cruel girl—" do hear my correspondent spout, Jack! "and never think more of—"

Jack (trying to snatch the letter)—I must have it!

Ethel (holding him off and reading)—"Yours—"

Jack—Don't read—oh, don't read the sig—

Ethel—"—most—"

Jack—Don't, oh, don't!

Ethel—"—sincerely"—(tears up letter and throws in grate)—I can't imagine whomy correspondent may be—can you—Jack?

Jack (in grateful adoration)—You darling girl! (Second and this time lasting reconciliation. Only, some minutes after—)

Ethel (dreamily)—I'm afraid I'm sorry I destroyed that letter!—Manley H. Pike, in Puck.

Ill-Assorted Guests.

Big dinner parties of ill-assorted guests are failures from a conversationalist point of view. A fireside, or a table, round if possible, and, say, four or half a dozen guests, are sufficient. More will break up into separate knots and fewer mean a tete-a-tete. "I had," says Thoreau, "at Walden three chairs in my house—one for solitude, two for friendship, three for society." The hermit Thoreau in his hut at Walden was wiser than the man who looks for society in a crush. An unhappy husband, living in Portland Place, whose wife inflicted huge parties upon him, was standing in a very forlorn condition leaning against the chimney piece. A gentleman came up to him and said: "Sir, as neither of us are acquainted with any of the people here I think we had best go home." Social crowds must not expect the great men among them to talk well. She must have been a most unreasonable person who was disappointed with Napoleon because when a lot of ladies were presented to him he only remarked to each of them how hot it was.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Power of Will.

The influence of a powerful will in arresting or retarding the progress of a disease apparently fatal is one of the most wonderful of all mental phenomena. A person of feeble frame, but of a determined and hopeful spirit, sometimes keeps death at bay for weeks, months, even years, and finally, in defiance of the physicians who have sat in judgment on his case and pronounced it utterly hopeless, recovers and returns to his customary vocations. On the other hand a man of strong physique not unfrequently wilts and dies under a comparatively controllable ailment simply from a lack of the mental energy which enables the strong-willed weakling to repel the destroyer.—N. Y. Ledger.

A Case of Understanding.

Molwell—Would it be presumptuous in me if I asked for a bud, Mrs. Weffler?

Girlish Mother of Ingenue Twins—This is rather abrupt, Mr. Molwell, but if you can assure me that your expectations are good, I don't mind if you take Edith. Myrtle is already engaged.—Judge.

Inside.

Mr. Bingo—Tommy, did you bring home to your mother the pear I gave you to-day?

Tommy—Yes, sir.

Mrs. Bingo—That's strange. I never saw it.

Tommy—I know you didn't; but it was there.—West Shore.

Had an Excuse Ready.

Irascible Old Party—Why you scoundrel, you told me you didn't have a cent. I just saw you take out a quarter.

Tramp—I know that, sir, but I don't want to spend that piece. I carry it for good luck.—Boston Herald.

A Matter of Form.

Arklight—I see that you have shut off all the gas in your house, and are using nothing but candles. What is that for?

Darklight—Merely out of curiosity. I want to see if it will make any difference in my gas-bills.—Puck.

What Decided Her.

Maud—Which have you elected to study—French or German?

Ethel—French.

"Do you like French better than you do German?"

"No, but I like the French professor better."—Yankee Blade.

Empty.

Mrs. Borrowell—Now don't feel in the wrong pocket, Henry, and then tell me you haven't any money.

Borrowell—My dear, I'm afraid that all my pockets are wrong pockets today.—West Shore.

The Hackneyed Term.

First Reporter—Why are you so nervous; got a hard job?

Second Reporter—Yes; I'm writing an article on oysters, and I was told not to use once the expression "succulent bivalve."—Boston Herald.

Operatic Note.

"Patti sang on the stage at the age of seven."

"As early as that?"

"Yes, but she did not begin her farewells until she was twelve."—Munsey's Weekly.

AN APPLIANCE OF SAFETY.

Officer (at 1 a. m.)—What's goin' on here?

Clubman—My wife's in the habit of throwing things out of the window at me if I come home late, so I had this telescopic key made, so's to know when the coast is clear.—Once a Week.

A Mere Caricature.

Sympathizing Friend—Well, old man, what sized dose of whisky did the doctor prescribe?

Disgusted Invalid—Humph! Only half a wine-glassful a day.

Sympathizing Friend—Too bad, too bad; rather a homœopathic dose, isn't it?

Disgusted Invalid—Humph! More like the faith cure.—Life.

He Must Be Paid.

"Those who dance must pay the fiddler," quoted Miss Bleecker.

"Yes," replied Miss South-Church, of Boston; "the individuals who indulge in terpsichorean exercises must defray the expenses incurred by the engagement of a violinist."—Judge.

Would Rather Dilute It Himself.

"Look here," said Jay Gould to his milkman; "there is water in this milk you are furnishing me."

"Yes, sir," replied the milkman; "I thought you preferred it that way. I read the newspapers, sir."—Judge.

Tremendous.

"Is there any money in your business?"

"We paid fifty per cent. last year."

"Phew! How did you manage it?"

"Our creditors saw that was all they could get, and they took it."—Puck.

A Conjecture.

She—I wonder why it is that the Smith family is so much larger than any other.

He—I guess it must have been founded by Joseph Smith, the Mormon.—Judge.

The Tenacity of Despair.

"Do you think she loves him?"

"Desperately."

"Why desperately?"

"Because he is her last chance."—Harper's Bazar.

A Tight Squeeze.

"You heard about the grizzly bear that tackled a Chicago girl?"

"No—what happened?"

"The girl hugged the bear to death."—Life.

Hasn't a Selfish Hair.

"Old Curmudgeon is the meanest, stingiest man in town, and yet you say there isn't a selfish hair on his head!"

"Curmudgeon, sir, is entirely bald."—Judge.

A Parallel.

"Is Branksmere a good writer?"

"Well, if you can imagine Thackeray with nervous prostration, you can get an idea of what Branksmere is."—Puck.

Would Sell His Life Dearly.

Old Soldier (to publisher)—This manuscript, sir, is my autobiography, containing an account of my army life and the battles in which I have fought.

Publisher—How much do you ask for it?

Old Soldier—Ten thousand dollars.

Publisher—The price is outrageous.

Old Soldier—But, you must know, I have always been determined to sell my life as dearly as possible.—N. Y. Spirit.

A Curious Request.

The following advertisement lately appeared in a Bavarian paper:

"Schwabach, 30th July. As to-morrow, the 31st inst., the post-office (the only one in the place) is going to be whitewashed, the public are respectfully requested to dispatch no more letters than is absolutely necessary."—Intelligenzblatt.

TEMPTING ODDS.

Clifton Paddock (after a hard day at Guttenburg)—I hadn't plunged on Exhaustion, those odds on Consultation 'ould catch me.—Puck.

His Quest.

Wife—You know that poor family in the next block? When I took some bread around to them to-day they were actually starving. The minister called this afternoon and I told him all about it.

Husband—That is terrible. What did the minister call for?

Wife—He wanted to raise a subscription for the Fiji islanders.—Judge.

How He Reasoned.

Wife (complainingly)—Mrs. Flushley always has plenty of spending money of her own. Her husband believes a wife ought to have it.

Husband—Well, so do I!

Wife—What, you do?

Husband—Certainly. If you had plenty, you wouldn't ask me for some so often.—Boston Herald.

Bad for Business.

Bronson—I tell you this discovery of a cure for consumption is a grand benefit to the human race.

Stranger—I don't think so.

Bronson—You don't, eh? And pray who are you?

Stranger—I'm proprietor of the High-price Hotel at Jacksonville, Fla.—Saturday Evening Herald.

A Question of Time.

Blushing Bride—I want to get a present for my husband, but I hardly know what to get.

Clerk—Why not get one of these nice silk mufflers, to wear evenings?

Bride—Oh, dear, no! My husband never goes out nights.

Clerk—Well, you might get it for next year.—N. Y. Sun.

Incompatible.

"Have you ever lost any thing by becoming a Christian?" asked the clergyman.

"Yes," replied the new convert. "I used to get three hundred and fifty dollars a year for singing in the choir, but I have had to give that up."—Judge.

A Little Confidence Game.

"Oh! Mabel, tell me the truth, now; if you were in my place would you accept him?"

"Certainly. Why, if I had been in your place I would have accepted him myself, the other night, when he proposed to me."—Life.

Just His Luck.

Wife (who supports him)—Did you see that Williams has advertised for help? Now, there's a good chance for you.

Eydle—Chance? No chance at all. Williams wants two men. Just my luck!—Judge.

Our Jury System.

"I don't see how you could sit on that jury as you did, and not find McCain guilty!"

"Oh, he was insane."

"Well, there's no doubt about his being tried by a jury of his peers!"—Puck.

He Is Dead Now.

Snodgrass—What has become of Tawler? I have not seen him for six months or more. He had one foot in the grave then.

Snively—He has six feet in now.—Jury.

Where He Was.

"It seems that I'm in it," remarked the grasshopper as he was swallowed by the bird.

"You're out of sight," chuckled the bird as he cleaned his beak on a twig.—Boston Herald.

An Appropriate Messenger.

Telegraph Operator—Here! We don't send pigeon English.

John—Allee light. Me send it by callial (carrier) pigeon.—Harper's Bazar.

An Innovation.

"We had a big layout at the boarding-house where I live."

"Did the tables groan?"

"No, the boarders groaned."—Jury.

As He Found His.

Philistine—Of what use is the editor of a paper?

Young Reporter—To make a long story short.—Puck.

Gently Reproached.

"I will be a sister to you," she said.

"Only that," said he, "after I have been a donner to you?"—Puck.

ALL ON BOARD LOST

A Puget Sound Steamer Goes Down in a Gale.

TWENTY PASSENGERS DROWNED.

The Vessel Was Unseaworthy and Probably Foundered During the Storm.

The Steamer Was Loaded With Vegetables Which Were Washed Ashore by the Tide —Anxiety in Shipping Circles for the Schooner William Neely—It is Feared She Has Gone Down Off Fenwick Island.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 10.—The steamer Buckeye, with twenty passengers and her crew, is reported lost in the gale of last night on Puget Sound between Edmunds and Appletree cove.

The Buckeye left Edmunds yesterday for Appletree cove, across the sound, eight miles distant, taking about twenty passengers, mostly women and children.

At Appletree cove the Buckeye loaded a cargo of vegetables and started back, but at last accounts had not reached Edmunds and had not been seen by passing vessels. A heavy gale blew last night, and being an unseaworthy craft, it is supposed the Buckeye went down with all on board.

A light was seen by some Edmunds longshoremen at 2 o'clock, during the storm, which is supposed to have been the Buckeye. It suddenly disappeared and was seen no more. Large quantities of vegetables have been washed ashore at Edmunds by the tide.

Probably Lost at Sea.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Considerable anxiety in shipping circles is felt regarding the safety of the four masted schooner William Neely which was in collision on the morning of the 6th instant, off Fenwick Island, with the three masted schooner John C. Gregory. The Gregory returned to this port yesterday for repairs all her fore gear having been carried away. The Neely is a much larger vessel and it is feared she has gone down. She was bound from Baltimore to this port.

HEARST'S SUCCESSOR.

Detectives from Chicago Looking for Evidence in California.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 10.—Balloting for a successor to Senator Hearst begins to-day. A queer development of the Senatorial fight is the story that five detectives from Chicago have arrived here to witness the balloting.

What business they have here can only be guessed at, but as they are known to have been making the acquaintance of lobbyists and members, it is believed that they are here on Senatorial business. One story is that they have been employed by the National Democratic Committee to procure evidence of corruption, and in case the Senator to be elected buys his seat he will be followed to Washington and prevented from taking his seat.

BISHOP PADDOCK DEAD.

He Expires at His Home in Boston After a Long Illness.

BOSTON, March 10.—Bishop Paddock died last evening.

Bishop Paddock was born in Norwich, Conn., in February, 1828. He graduated at Trinity College, Hartford, in 1848, was ordained in 1852, and admitted to the priesthood by Bishop Williams in 1853.

In 1860 he became rector of Christ Church, Detroit. In 1867 he went to Grace Church, Brooklyn, where he remained until his consecration as Bishop of Massachusetts in 1873. He was the author of many literary reviews.

Runaway Boys Caught by a Train.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 10.—Eugene Flynn and Thomas Ferguson, aged 17 and 18, ran away from their homes in this city last Thursday with the evident intention of going to New York city. During the morning Ferguson's dead body was brought back to the city, while Flynn lies in a Harrisburg hospital, mortally wounded. The boys were run down by a shifting train in the railroad yards at Harrisburg. Just how the accident occurred will probably never be learned.

A New Tax Bill.

TRENTON, N. J., March 10.—The tax bill which has caused such a ferment of excitement throughout the State is dead. A substitute will be introduced to-day, which will provide for a State board to consist of three members, who are empowered to review all the acts of local assessors, but while they may decrease assessments, they have no power to increase them.

The Nyack Tragedy.

NYACK, March 10.—The examination of Joseph Storrs, who committed a murderous assault upon Mrs. Armstrong and her daughter Eliza, has been postponed until to-morrow.

LIVELY GLOVE CONTEST.

Tommy Danforth Put to Sleep in Short Order by Jimmy Hagen.

HOBOKEN, N. J., March 10.—The lightweights, Jimmy Hagen of Philadelphia, and Tommy Danforth, of New York, had their glove contest here last night, and while the contest lasted but one minute and 45 seconds more than one round the play during the time that the fighting was going on was so fast and interesting that the 400 spectators, who paid $5 each for admission, declared that they were well satisfied with the show for their money.

As soon as the fighters came together they punched each other. Hagen's left hand was a terror, and it landed on Danforth as the sender of it pleased. The result was that Danforth got dizzy in the first round.

The New Yorker's seconds sent him out strong in the second round, but Hagen's did the same for their man, and there was more slaughter. Hagen uppercut with his left on Danforth's face and knocked the New Yorker down three times clean. Danforth was game and got upon his feet twice, but the third time he had to lay on the stage like a dummy.

The mill showed the winner to be a first-class man, and the Philadelphians cheered at the close like a lot of collegians who had won a football match.

AFRAID OF HIGHBINDERS.

A Chinaman Returns a Valuable Package of Stolen Diamonds.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 10.—A package containing $6,000 worth of diamonds was stolen from Mrs. M. Willis, a widow, last week. Yesterday a Chinese servant in her employ returned the package to Mrs. Willis, but he refused to give her any information in regard to the theft.

The police have learned that the Chinaman is a well known highbinder and have advised the widow not to discharge or attempt to prosecute him no matter how strongly she might suspect the Mongolian of having something to do with the theft, as they believe the highbinders would surely take revenge on Mrs. Willis if she were instrumental in getting one of their number into trouble.

FAVORS ANNEXATION.

A Grand Trunk Railway Official Creates a Sensation in Canada.

MONTREAL, March 10.—General Traffic Manager Reeves of the Grand Trunk Railway admits that his road persuaded between 500 and 600 Canadians to return from various points on the system in the United States to vote against the government and says:

"I am an annexationist and have been for 20 years. I would like to see the stars and stripes floating over every mile of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific systems."

This outspoken declaration in favor of annexation by a leading officer of a great English corporation has created a profound sensation throughout the country.

Assemblyman Demarest Arraigned.

NYACK, N. Y., March 10.—Assemblyman Frank P. Demarest, indicted by the Rockland County grand jury for forgery in the first degree, was arraigned in court during the morning and demurred to the indictment. The motion which was made two weeks ago to grant Demarest access to the minutes of the proceedings of the grand jury which indicted him was denied by the court. One indictment against Demarest was dismissed on technical grounds. The other three indictments were sustained, and will be tried in May in the Oyer and Terminer Court.

End of the Fayerweather Will Contest.

NEW YORK, March 10.—The great contest over the millions of the late leather magnate, Daniel B. Fayerweather, is over. It is understood that the terms of the settlement are on the basis provided for by the deed of residuary legatees, Bulkley, Ritch and Vaughan, previously published. They renounce all claim to the residuary estate except their fees as executors, about $50,000 each. The contestants receive increased legacies and the bulk of the estate goes to colleges and other institutions.

The American Oyster Company.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 10.—The American Oyster Company, with a capital of five hundred thousand dollars, has just been organized under the laws of Maine. The officers are: President, Frank L. Homan, New Haven; secretary, Chas. W. Goldthwaite, Shelburn Falls, Mass.; treasurer, Henry E. Marsh of New Haven. The company will have branches at Augusta, Me.

Waylaid and Robbed.

ALTOONA, Pa., March 10.—Some days ago Joshua Dempsey, a wealthy real estate man of this city, left for Pittsburg on business. Last night a telegram was received saying that he had been waylaid there and robbed, and that the thieves had inflicted injuries from which he cannot recover.

President Harrison Elected.

NEW YORK, March 10.—President Harrison was elected to honorary membership by the Ohio Society last night. Hon. Allen G. Thurman and Governor Campbell were also chosen honorary members.

The United States Supreme Court Decides Against His Clients.

The President Shooting Ducks To-Day—A Report that Colonel Lemcke Will Assume the Duties of United States Treasurer on Monday—The Revenue Cutter Bear Preparing for a Trip to Alaska.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—A statement is made on the authority of Mr. McKinney, clerk of the United States Supreme Court, and presumably based upon directions given by the Judges of that Court as to to their future movements, which indicates that the new Circuit Courts of Appeal, authorized by the law passed in the last hours of the expiring Congress, can be organized without any of the nine new judges provided for in the law.

This puts a decidedly new phase on the question of the constitutional right of the President to make the appointments during recess, and leaves several learned legal editors out in the cold.

According to the informal dictum of the Judges of the Supreme Court, as reported, the new Appellate Courts can be set in motion by the existing Supreme Court, Circuit and District Judges, the latter acting as Circuit Judges for the time being, as they are authorized to do, and the President need not make any nominations for the new judgeships until the Senate meets in regular session next December.

MR. CLEVELAND DEFEATED.

The Supreme Court Decides Against His Clients in the New Orleans Suit.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—In the Supreme Court of the United States Justice Brewer rendered a decision in the case of James Wallace Peake and others against the city of New Orleans.

This is the New Orleans drainage case, in which ex-President Cleveland appeared for the plaintiffs, and it came to the Supreme Court on an appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

The Supreme Court affirms the decision of the Court below, thus deciding adversely to Mr. Cleveland's clients. The Chief Justice and Justices Harlan and Lamar dissented from the decision of the Court.

THE PRESIDENT'S OUTING.

He is on a Duck-Shooting Trip to the Maryland Swamps.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The President only took two companions on his duck shooting trip—ex-Senator Sewell, of New Jersey, and Charley Loeffler, the White House doorkeeper.

The party are the guests to-day of the Maryland Club in the Benjies Swamp, though the President will be pretty much alone during the shoot.

General Sewell says he expects to beat up duck along the river early to-morrow morning if the fog kept off.

The President will not return here before Saturday.

The Wimodaughsis Trouble.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The trouble in Wimodaughsis has not yet been settled. The secretary, Miss Desha, who is a sister-in-law of Representative Breckenridge of Kentucky, resigned the secretaryship on account of the acceptance of the application of a colored woman to membership in one of the evening classes. The colored woman has been received as a student and applications are coming in from other colored people. The woman suffragists, who are pledged to equal rights, are in the majority in the management of Wimodaughsis and consequently the principles of that organization will be adhered to.

The Revenue Cutter Bear's Cruise.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The Treasury Department is fitting out the revenue cutter Bear at San Francisco for her summer cruise in Alaskan waters. Capt. Healy, her commander for a number of years past, will again command her this year. The Bear will go north about the middle of April and the Rush will follow later in the season. It is the intention of the government to exercise more rigid police control of Alaskan waters than ever before and to use the utmost exertions to protect the seals in those waters.

A Fund for Mrs. Windom.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The movement made by a few personal friends of Secretary Windom to raise a fund of fifty thousand dollars for Mrs. Windom has been successful. The entire amount has been subscribed, and will be handed to Mrs. Windom in a few days. It is made directly as a present and not invested as a trust. Stephen B. Elkins leads a list of ten who gave two thousand five hundred dollars each. Many well known New Yok business men are among the subscribers.

The United States Treasurership.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—It is stated here that Col. Lemcke of Indiana, who is understood to have received the offer of the United States Treasurership, will assume that office on Monday next.

Miss Grace Fuller's Wedding.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—A dispatch from Chicago says the marriage of Miss Grace Fuller, daughter of Chief Justice Fuller, to Archibald Brown, will take place the first week in April.

No Tidings of Barron.

HAVERHILL, Mass., March 10.—The excitement here in regard to the disappearance of James E. Barron is on the increase. No tidings of the missing man have come to light. Driscoll and Mulhern, who are under arrest for the assault upon Barron, will make a strong fight in court to-morrow, when their case is called. It is believed Barron committed suicide by drowning.

THOUSANDS FOR CHARITY.

The Late Ex-Congressman Scoville's Estate Estimated at $3,000,000.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 10.—The will of the late Jonathan Scoville was offered for probate at noon.

The will bears date December 17, 1889, and a codicil was executed on February 21, 1891. The estate is estimated at about $3,000,000.

The testator gives to his two sisters $30,000 each; to his nephew William H. Harper of Chicago, and his niece, Mary L. Pilling of Washington, $15,000. He gives in trust for his nephews Samuel Scoville, Paschal and John F. Fisher, $50,000 each. To the widow of his deceased brother, Samuel Scoville, an annuity for life of $500. To the St. John's Episcopal Society of Salisbury, Conn., the interest in perpetuity of $5,000, and to the Methodist Episcopal Union Chapel of Chapinville, $500 per annum in perpetuity.

He gives to the Buffalo Orphan Asylum, Historical Society, Fine Arts Academy, St. Vincent's Female Asylum and the Home of the Friendless, $5,000 each.

By article 7, he gives to the Buffalo Fine Arts Academy $25,000 and a like amount to the General Hospital to be used for a school for nurses.

The codicil, however, revokes the bequest to the Fine Arts Academy and directs that $5,000 be given to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and $20,000 to the University of Buffalo.

Article 10 gives $16,000 for a suitable building in Salisbury, Conn., for the use of a public library.

Other minor bequests are also made.

DIABOLICAL REVENGE.

Vitriol for the Innocent Child of an Employe of Non-Union Labor.

NEW YORK, March 10.—About 6 a. m. 30 Polish Jews went from New York to Jamaica, L. I., and raided the store of a fellow countryman named Greenbaum, assaulting his little girl by pouring vitriol over her. The Jamaica merchant is a cloak manufacturer, and the raiders allege he is employing scab help and cutting the prices.

So they took this dastardly method of revenge. They smashed in the doors of the store, assaulted the proprietor, destroyed the stock, and one of the men threw vitriol on the child. The man who is alleged to have thrown the vitriol on the child was apprehended at East New York, but the others escaped by way of Hunter's Point to this city. The accused man is Frank Rango, and he was handed over to the Jamaica police.

HILL ON BRIBERY.

New York's Governor Sends a Message to the Legislature.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 10.—Governor Hill sent a long message to the Legislature congratulating it that it had decided to adopt measures tending to place all cases of contested elections in the courts.

He says the defect and shame of our present law is that it admits bribers to receive certificates of election, when under the constitution they are justly deprived of their votes. He wants to see the poor and rich candidates have equal chances in the race.

Hamilton is Legally Dead.

NEW YORK, March 10.—The long legal contest which followed the death of Robert Ray Hamilton is over at last. He gave judgment in the contest over the will of Hamilton vs. Evangeline L. Mann, in which he declared legally that Hamilton is dead and then admitted the will to probate.

THE QUEEN YIELDS

She Will Go to France Without an Apology.

BISMARCK TO MEET VICTORIA.

The Incidents Have Aroused Great Bitterness in Court Circles.

An Englishman Abducts His Wife and is Chased by an Excited Crowd—No Hope for Prince Napoleon—Lady Dilke Talks About the Scandal—England Has a Genuine American Blizzard.

LONDON, March 10.—There is reason to believe that Lord Salisbury made a strong plea to the Queen against her attitude in regard to the relations between Germany and France.

The Queen strongly supported the Kaiser in his grievance against the French, and announced her intention of abandoning her visit to France unless the Empress Frederick received an apology from the French government for the rudeness shown her in Paris.

Lord Salisbury, however, succeeded in inducing Her Majesty to carry out her original programme, leaving the Empress out of the question. The Empress, therefore, returned to Germany instead of accompanying her mother, as had been arranged.

The incident has aroused great bitterness in court circles, which is intensified by the knowledge that the Prince of Wales has had a serious quarrel with his mother on the subject while supporting, it is believed, the argument of Lord Salisbury.

ABDUCTED HIS WIFE.

An Englishman Imprisons His Spouse After an Exciting Chase.

LONDON, March 10.—While Mrs. E. Jackson was driving the church at Clitheroe, near Manchester, three men jumped out of a carriage, seized the lady, put her by force in the carriage and drove away.

The people, greatly excited, followed and attempted to rescue Mrs. Jackson. At Blackburn the abductors alighted and entered a house where they defied their pursuers.

The leader of the abduction was the lady's husband, who married her privately some years ago.

He went to Australia in 1889. Mrs. Jackson in the meantime had succeeded to a fortune and refused to live with her husband. He applied to the courts and got an order restoring his conjugal rights. On the authority of that order he abducted her.

The police were compelled to obey the order of the court and are defending the house where Mrs. Jackson is a prisoner against the wishes of the people who are anxious to release her.

Jackson is making provisions to storm the windows and is prepared to stand a siege.

PRINCE NAPOLEON DYING.

His Physicians Say He Can Live But a Few Hours.

PARIS, March 10.—The physicians in attendance upon Prince Jerome Napoleon have announced that both of the Prince's lungs are in a congested state, and they have informed the family that a fatal issue of his illness is only a question of a few hours.

The Prince received repeatedly professed consolations of the sacrament from priests who had been admitted to his room.

The sister of Prince Napoleon, the Princess Mathilde of San Donato, learning of the presence of Mme. Canisy, the Prince's bedside, refused to go to his room, though informed that her brother was dying. The refusal of the Princess explains the relations of Mme. Canisy with Prince Jerome Napoleon.

Prince Jerome Napoleon is sinking fast. King Humbert and the members of the royal family are at the dying Prince's bedside. A solid crowd fills the street outside the house.

Prince Victor had a touching interview with Princess Clothilde, and requested permission to see his father.

The doctors, however, forbade an interview with Prince Napoleon, fearing that it would excite him too much.

The Government Saved a Repulse.

BERLIN, March 10.—The Budget Committee of the Reichstag, to which was referred, on the motion of Chancellor Caprivi, the question of additional appropriations for naval ironclads, etc., is not likely to recommend the credits desired, and the Chancellor knew that when he moved the reference, it being simply a course to save the government from a direct repulse.

Germany Not the World's Fair.

The German exhibits will doubtless be extensive. The leading merchants and artisans of Berlin are invited to join in the deliberations.

THE LINGO TRIAL.

The State Tracing the Prisoner's Movements on the Day of the Murder.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 10.—The trial of Francis Lingo for the murder of Mrs. Annie Miller from present appearances is likely to occupy at least ten more days.

The State continued and produced more testimony to show that Lingo was absent from his work on the day of the murder for about four hours. It was Thomas Young who said this. He employed Lingo to cut corn for him that day. Lingo quit work at noon for dinner and returned at half past 3 or 4 o'clock, and worked until sundown.

The cross-examination was not without its suggestive value to Lingo. Young said when he hired Lingo the previous day he was given to understand by the latter that he would not work full time, because it was important that he should see an agent concerning some property he desired to purchase. The witness did not notice the sleeves of Lingo's shirt after his return. All he knew was that he wore rubber boots when he came back. He said further that Lingo had complained of cutting himself with his corn knife.

Two young women who walked to Merchantville about the time the murder is supposed to have been committed swore they saw a colored man in the bush lot; could not identify him, but described him as dressed in a long black coat, clothes of a dark blue color and wearing a black hat. When asked if she thought she saw the man in the court room, Miss Annie Lafferty said she saw a man just like him. Several weeks ago this witness picked out Lingo from amongst six colored men as the man she thought she saw that day.

Nearly all the witnesses for the State have now been heard, and the prosecution, it is understood, will close with the testimody of Dr. Formad. The defence has 25 witnesses, and they will be subjected to rigid cross-examinations.

Unconscious, With a Letter from Wm. D. Murray of This City, in His Pocket.

A man was found lying unconscious on the sidewalk in front of 357 West Twenty-second street, New York city, on Saturday night. He had evidently fallen and struck his head against the stone stoop. He is in the New York Hospital. He was about sixty-five years old, had gray hair, and a stubby mustache.

A letter was found on him. It was addressed "Mr. McDermott," and asked him to serve a summons and complaint on H. C. de Rivera, Treasurer, at 349 West 123d street. It was signed by William D. Murray, of this city. Mr. Murray says the man was a clerk in another law office near his, and he used to send the man to do small services for him. The letter found, Mr. Murray says, was written months ago.

The Pastor Must Go When the Roses Come.

The verdict of the Presbytery in the trial of the Rev. A. Cushing Dill, of Stirling, has just been rendered. The Presbytery allows him to remain at Stirling until June 1.

As related at some length in THE PRESS of yesterday the charges against Mr. Dill were rather of indiscretion than of absolute wrong-doing. He is a young man, and has manifested a decided preference for the society of young ladies, his penchant in this direction being apparently cordially reciprocated. He is accused of sensational preaching and of having delivered on one occasion what was described as a "love talk." When approached on the subject he has declared himself inspired by the Holy Ghost, a saying which has caused some to think his mind affected.

Very Near Death's Door.

John Wilson Young, the stenographer who was mangled on the railway track near Grant avenue, Sunday evening, still lies in a critical condition at the Muhlenberg Hospital. His wife, a bride of six months, remains steadfastly by his bedside. His father and brother are also with him.

PLAINFIELD TO BE GLORIFIED.

ANOTHER PROGRESSIVE CITIZEN SHOUTS "DOWN WITH THE OBSTRUCTIONISTS!"

Electric Cars No More Dangerous Than the "Teams of the Rich Men"—The Populace Will Ride on Them for Pleasure and Health, and Enjoy a More Comfortable Trip Than the Nabob in His Carriage—Property Values Will Increase, Hundreds of Wealthy Home-Seekers Will be Attracted to Plainfield, and There Will be No More Drunkards and Paupers When the Trolley Cars Come.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Street railways have developed the finest residential thoroughfares in America. Plainfield has suffered incalculably in depressed property values and personal deprivations and discomfort, from taking the advice of certain rich and selfish men among us, of the class who are now using their influence to prevent the introduction of the proposed electric railway. They always pretend to favor some indefinite thing, but were equally noisy or sly in opposing all the horse railway propositions before the electric railway motor was developed into a commercial success of wonderful popularity and growth. Possessing abundant wealth they have not enough enterprise or public spirit to unite and use their money for the promotion of the growth of the city, or the comfort of their fellow citizens. They own carriages and locating on our main thoroughfares meanly oppose the right of the great body of citizens to have these public carriages placed where the people travel and want to go, and have a right to demand the cars shall be run. Realizing that our wide level city has numerous parallel streets all adapted to carriage driving exclusively, they clamor that the main arteries of travel must be reserved for their own private carriages, while the people at large are forced to ride along narrow streets, and out of the way, and they present the absurd contradiction that speculators are trying to get a franchise to build a road that wont pay.

They talk of the "deadly" trolley, when nobody was ever yet killed or injured by a trolley. They prate about overhead wires and poles, when they know the electric railway poles now used (and 125 feet apart on the curb) are light and ornamental small iron or steel poles, and the harmless wires small and unnoticed. The poles are light because merely to hold up the small cross wires to which the electric wire over the track is suspended. This small copper wire conductor is so light as not to be seen almost, merely heavy enough to carry its own weight and conduct the harmless current necessary to operate the electric cars. Neither the wire nor the cars, are so dangerous as the teams of these rich and selfish men, or of men merely selfish not rich. Electric cars are stopped within the car length, and are less dangerous than the horse cars driven by careless men always are. The electric car driver has positive and quick control of his car by simply moving a little lever without looking at it and has nothing else to do except guard against collisions. Electric cars are ornamental, comfortable, clean, odorless, rapid and safe to everybody; they run quicker and oftener than horse cars thus giving the people greatly increased accommodation, and for five cents you have a lovely ride, besides saving ten or twenty cents worth of time. The people of Plainfield will become acquainted with each other. Thousands of men, women and children will continually enjoy themselves during afternoons and evenings riding over the routes simply for the health giving enjoyment of it, and in doing so will have a ride equal to that of our nabobs in their carriages or preferable.

The notion that only suburban residents will be benefited is silly—on the contrary such railways are everywhere chiefly used by occupants of the thickly settled sections for business or pleasure. It is of coarse true that property values will increase most on the streets the cars run on, and that families now cooped up will be glad to move out into purer air, where our growing children will be healthier and happier. Many cannot do so now from inability or indisposition to own or be bothered by horses, carriages and coachmen.

The electric railway will attract hundreds of wealthy home-seekers to Plainfield. Substantial and prosperous men who have avoided it because without the ordinary conveniences they require—viz—public water, sewerage, and railway facilities for daily comfort.

Thus hundreds of thousands of dollars taxable wealth will come, and the real value of all our city property everywhere be enhanced; while the boon of a lower tax rate will become possible without selling any licenses to men or brutes to convert respectable people into drunkards and paupers. "Down with the obstructionists" should now be the cry of our whole people. PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Rumored Changes in Music Hall.

Last night the back dropped out of an orchestra chair at Music Hall and fell to the floor with a dull, consumptive thud. The gallery applauded, and the occupant of the seat was unhappy for a while. There are a lot of chairs with game backs in Music Hall that ought to be attended by a veterinary surgeon. It is rumored, however, that the entire house is to be renovated before next season, and placed in the hands of new managers.

BAR ROOMS GAIN AN HOUR A DAY.

The Midnight-Closing Ordinance Passed in Spite of the Mayor's Objections.

The ordinance to change the hour of closing bar rooms from eleven to twelve o'clock at night was passed by the Common Council last evening, and became a law, notwithstanding the objections of the Mayor, who presented the following document:

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

GENTLEMEN—I herewith return without my approval the ordinance entitled an "Ordinance to License Inns and Taverns," etc.

I can perceive no urgent reason for the adoption of this ordinance. Eleven o'clock at night would seem to be a sufficiently late hour for the pursuit of any ordinary business, and I think that a compliance with the existing law will entail no hardship on the liquor sellers.

I am informed by the police that at 11 o'clock P. M. a large number of people come forth from the saloons and are upon the streets until midnight, and that the city does not become quiet until twelve o'clock. Should the proposed amendment prevail, the street noises, which are much complained of as a disturbing element, will be kept up until the early hours of the morning. The people have a right to ask of us that we will, so far as we are able, maintain order and quietness throughout the city during the hours of the night. I regard the early closing of the saloons as a very efficient aid in that direction.

Very respectfully submitted,
ALEXANDER GILBERT, Mayor.

Councilmen Ackerman, Rushmore and Ginna also spoke against the ordinance. Mr. Ackerman held that the evil of keeping open so late would be especially apparent Saturday nights, when workingmen would spend their earnings, and carousals would extend on into Sunday morning. Mr. Rushmore thought the ordinance catered to the worst class of society, bar room loafers. Respectable people—he said—went home early. Mr. Ginna argued that public opinion was against the change of the hour of closing, and said that the most respectable voters had protested against it.

On motion of Mr. Hetfield, the ordinance was adopted, notwithstanding the Mayor's objections. The vote was as follows:

Ayes—Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts, Smith, Spangenberg—6.

Noes—Councilmen Ackerman, Ginna, Johnston, Rushmore, See—5.

The Corporation Counsel asked for an increase of salary, from $750 to $1,000. The matter was referred to the Committee on Police, Salaries and Elections.

The Public Library announced that it would need $2,800 for the year 1891.

The liquor license application of James J. Day was referred back to him for correction, and will probably never be heard from again.

Vincent W. Nash was continued in office as Collector of Delinquent Taxes.

The Committee on Fire and Buildings, together with the Mayor, were authorized to furnish the new office for the Mayor.

The Water Committee were granted further time to prepare their report concerning the proposed construction of a system of water-works and sewerage.

A great deal of time was spent in an attempt by Councilmen Ackerman, Ginna, Rushmore and See to have the Water Committee disclose the nature of documents they had received concerning plans and specifications. The Committee explained that it was impossible to give the desired information at that moment, but said that in their final report, which would soon be made, everything would be satisfactorily disclosed. The Committee also invited the inquisitive Councilmen to join with them in examining plans and specifications in private, which invitation was accepted.

Resolutions of Respect and Remembrance.

WHEREAS, Our Heavenly Father has seen fit to call by death our esteemed and worthy brother, Jeremiah VanWinkle, to his final rest, we bow in humble submission to the will of Him "who doeth all things well," but feel we have lost an esteemed, honorable citizen and brother, who in his daily life had endeared himself to us; one who never was so absorbed in the spirit of gain, that he forgot the duties of citizenship or grew insensible to the claims of society; and we deem it fitting to bear testimony of our esteem and regard for him, and to his afflicted and bereaved family. And we do hereby Resolve, That the members of Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association tender to the bereaved family their sincere sympathy.

Resolved, That we attend his funeral in a body; that our rooms be draped in mourning for thirty days, and that these preambles and resolutions be engrossed on our minutes, and a copy sent to the family and published in the daily papers.

THE SIN OF COVETOUSNESS.

Even Worse Than That of Drunkenness, Says Mr. Richards, and From It Spring All Others.

From an intensely interesting and highly practical sermon preached by the Rev. W. R. Richards in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Sunday, the following liberal extracts are taken:

For from the least of them even unto the greatest of them, every one is given to covetousness; and from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely.—Jeremiah VI: 13.

For some time past, the attention of this community has been concentrated on a formidable alliance of evils now threatening our State and town, of which the one most formidable, perhaps, might be considered drunkenness.

Yet take the most appalling figures that can be proposed of the ravages of strong drink, the procession of drunkards in our own country reeling towards a dishonored and hopeless grave. Count them by the hundreds of thousands if you will. At the same time you remind me of the words of Scripture that "No drunkard can inherit the Kingdom of God". Is there anything else that shuts so many out of the Kingdom? you ask. My heart grows sad at that long procession of wretchedness, and I could indorse anything you might say in pity of it. But if you are asking me seriously whether anything else shuts so many people out of the Kingdom I have to rouse myself from that one awful spectacle, and think how many people there really are in this country of ours. Some 60 000 000:—are there not?—and we have been greatly rejoiced to learn by later statistics that a larger proportion of them than ever before are now nominal members of evangelical churches—I think it is about one-fifth, or 12,000,000. The other 48,000,000: where are they all going? Far be it from us to pronounce upon them and say that they are all going to perdition, but certainly they themselves have given us no right to say that they are all marching into the Kingdom of God. And many of them—very many of them openly—are contemptuously indifferent to Him whom this Book has taught us to call the only Saviour of men. So long as we bent our eyes on that sad procession of drunkards, numbered by the hundreds of thousands, we had no thought for anything else; but, looking at this vaster company of people, where you hardly stop to count the numbers below the millions,—alas, we conclude that there are other sins besides intemperance to preach about.

The Bible is, after all, our most trustworthy witness on these subjects. It is from the Bible that we have learned to quote that sentence that no drunkard can inherit the Kingdom of God; but that is not the whole of the sentence, as it occurs in the Bible, for the word drunkard comes there midway in a long list of sin that shut men out. I will not confuse you by reading the whole sad list now, but begin with the word that stands immediately before the word drunkards. "Nor," says—"nor drunkards, nor revilers, shall inherit the Kingdom of God."

"Nor covetous!" There are a few other places in the New Testament where drunkenness is mentioned among the sins for whose sake the wrath of God cometh upon the children of disobedience; in almost every case you will find closely linked with it this other sin of covetousness; and in still other passages, and many of them, where drunkenness is not mentioned among the specially dangerous sins, we are warned to take heed and beware of covetousness. If we are to judge of the comparative strength of our various spiritual enemies by the proportion of Scripture we might conclude that while drunkenness has slain his thousands, covetousness has slain his tens of thousands. * * * And I tell you, my friends, if you wish to make your preaching proportionate to the actual prevalence and point of the different sorts of human wickedness in the world, for every one sermon that you preach on the sin of intemperance you ought to preach ten on the sins of covetousness.

Covetousness is the commander-in-chief, and the rest are subalterns. Even that same sin of intemperance—can you tell me why it is that that sin now becomes formidable to our own national welfare in a way that it never has been before since history began? The change is not in the nature of alcohol, nor in human appetite. Men have had a weakness for stimulants ever since the days of Noah, though no doubt the liquors of the present time are more violently destructive; but wine was a mocker, strong drink was raging, there was an adder in the cup at last, as long ago as the days of Solomon. There have been times, too, when habits of excessive drinking were far more universal than now; indeed, there never was a time I suppose when the sentiment against drinking was so strong and general as it is now in this country; and yet we all feel that in some respects this has grown to be a more formidable and natural enemy in our own day than at any earlier time. Why is it? I think it is chiefly because there happens to be more money in it now. By the old processes wine enough to intoxicate a man cost something to make; the profits to the producer out of any price that the average consumer could afford to pay must have been limited. So this track offered no special temptation to the covetous. But now, with the improved methods of distilling, etc., when from a few bushels of corn a man can draw more alcohol than would have been possible out of an Eastern vintage—a very few dollars compassing more drunkenness than could formerly have been bought by a king's ransom—there opens up at once the opportunity for all the worst covetousness in the world—that strong love of drink, bad enough, to be sure, in itself, but accomplishing these immeasurable evils when it becomes a wretched tool in the hands of this stronger, shrewder master, the love of gold. Do we not find it so? Who makes the trouble for us in our elections and before our Councils and Legislature: the miserable lover of drink, or the unprincipled lovers of gold? Is it the disreputable future customers at these same saloons who clamor to have them planted next door to our churches, and schools, and factories; or is it the respectable owners of them? Do we find arrayed against us the men who expect to get drunk in them, or the men who expect to make money out of them? Do our newspapers hold lists of petitioners asking the Council in its wisdom to establish at such a place a bar where they may buy liquor; or is it some one petitioning the Council that at such a place he may establish a bar to sell liquor? Does any lobby now at work at Trenton in favor of proposals now before the Legislature speak in the name of the drinkers, or in the name of the covetous? Why, not infrequently we have the probable victims of a saloon on our side in our efforts to abolish it. Is there anything more pathetic than the confessions of such men that if a place of temptation is put in the way of their feet, they fear they shall fall into it?

I tell you it is a sort of commercial accident that just at present our country is so imperilled by intemperance; it is because for various reasons that trade happens just now to be so fearfully lucrative, at the same time offering highest premiums to those who carry least ballast of principle or compassion. It has not always been so. At different historical points different instruments have offered themselves most conveniently to the hand of the covetous. The unchanging feature seems to be that so far back as we can trace it this covetousness has always appeared among those leading on Satan's side of the fight. * * *

He suits his methods to the times, and to changing circumstances of men, this shrewd and long lived enemy of ours; he has no special affection for one trade above another, except as it serves him better wherever for the time being the profits are largest; and wherever hardness of heart an contempt for the laws of God and man can be made best to take the place of honest work, there for the time being will be the favorite headquarters of this cursed appetite.

If you could abolish alcohol altogether or eradicate from all mankind the taste for it, covetousness would no doubt be disconcerted at losing so particularly serviceable an instrument, but it would never think of owning itself defeated.

I am told that out in Kansas, where the liquor trade has been made uncomfortable, covetousness, being left without a job, seems disposed to try his hand now at the repudiation of debts. Here in New Jersey, with saloons and horse races both running at the same time, he is afflicted with a sort of embarrassment of riches. It is hard to tell which serves him best, but they are so nearly of the same size, and gait, and color, that one driver can manage them both very well as a double team.

If you had nothing else to say against the liquor dealers in this State, I think their present clamor to let them go on making money on the one day of the week when other tradesmen are glad to have their places of business closed, and their recent clamor to let them go on making money an hour later at night, when they have already kept their doors open for gain so much longer than most other tradesmen of the place, show that they are what the Bible calls greedy men. And as to those men in their greed, and as to any others who may have abused positions of trust to help those men indulge their greed, I have been thinking of certain words of the Psalmist, and they seem to take new meaning in the light of this modern history: "The wicked boasteth of his heart's desire, and blesseth the covetous, whom the Lord abhorreth." "The wicked in his pride doth persecute the poor; let them be taken in the desires that they have imagined." So if you wish to know the difference between the natural and innocent desire to earn money, and covetousness, it may be a good thing to think of the man who wants to open his doors when the week's wages of hundreds of men, as they leave their shops, instead of going home to feed women and children shall drop into his tills. Ah, how cruel it is! You can judge for yourself whether it has much regard for principle in carrying out its ends. That is covetousness with its mask off, it seems to me; and with the appetite and general habit of the swine, together with the teeth of a wolf.

For some reasons, friends, I am glad that mask has come off, that we might all see the ugliness of the form behind it, so that we may all learn to hate and shun that face always. We are apt to point to a drunkard in the gutter to warn young men of the dangers lurking in the wine glass. I should like to point at the man who put him there, and at all these most repulsive exhibitions of human cruelty and greed, in order to warn all men young and old of the peril and sin of covetousness, that stronger, shrewder, more dangerous enemy of the Kingdon of God, and of the souls of men. I do not know that any of you are personally interested in the unrighteous profit of the bar room, or the race-course—God forbid!—though I have sometimes thought that for once in a while I should like to preach to a congregation of those who are. But we need not think that covetousness is shut up to those two or three ways of plundering men.

The love of drink is a root of some very bad sorts of evil. The love of money, the Bible tells us, is the root of all sorts of evil. I wish we might take warning against even a moderate, comparatively respectable indulgence in it. If your business is of a sort that it must make others poor, or keep others poor to make you rich, it is tainted with covetousness, however respectable it may be.

Do we think too much of our own wants, like a greedy boy at the table? Do we want more than is good for us and more than belongs to us? Are we a little uncertain in matters of principle and justice and kindness when it comes to the question of making or loving money? Unless a man would consent to be ruined to-morrow rather than avail himself of any sharp practice for which he would condemn his competitors if they did it, I fear that man is not free from covetousness, for he is willing to live by plunder. We have been looking at some awful examples of this sin full grown. But ah, friends, we want to be saved from its treacherous beginning; we do not want even to tipple at this cup of greed. And how shall we be saved from it, and how shall our nation be saved from this its besetting, many-handed sin? For covetousness is our besetting sin, and in comparison with its ravages, the awful evils even of drunkenness might seem almost insignificant. "For from the least of them even unto the greatest of them,"—Jeremiah said of the Jews of his day, the poor and the rich alike—"every one is given to covetousness." I do not believe that could be said truthfully of the Americans of our day. Not everyone; not so bad as that. God forbid! It has not been altogether in vain that we have heard the story of Him "who though he was rich, yet for our sakes became poor." And that love of Christ has never been quite smothered among us by this love of gold. Nevertheless, anyone will tell you that this is our besetting sin. All the world accuses us of it. We accuse each other of it. You go to Trenton, or Washington, or Chicago, or Wall street, and you admit the truth of the accusation. Take us on the average and we deserve to be called a nation of money-lovers, and it is that love that has proved itself, and is proving itself a root of all sorts of evil among us. How shall the noxious thing be eradicated? That is the question. It is not enough to have the branches lopped off here and there, where there has been a particularly rank growth of sin and shame. We want the root itself torn out, and what man or company of men will undertake that task? Can we not understand the prayer of the Psalmist, "Create in me a clean heart, oh God, and renew a right spirit within me"? Can we not understand the declaration of the Apostle that "there is none other name under Heaven given among men than that of Jesus Christ of Nazareth whereby we must be saved"? Ah, we want that new heart. That is the only cure for our besetting sin, that heart of Jesus Christ, that spirit of loving service not of cruel greed. "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others." "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."

Plainfield People as Others See Them.

[From The New York World.]

Elias R. Pope is a good type of the leaders of local industry in Plainfield. He wears eyeglasses, and always pretends he isn't doing anything, when, in fact, he is doing a great deal. The little cottage he used to live in has been replaced by a fine mansion on Park avenue. Yet Elias is the old Elias still. He wears the same glasses and the same beard resting on his breast, and is just as approachable as in his humbler days. He dislikes to jump up and down and swear that he is a good Republican; yet, strangely, both Garfield and Harrison thought him the man for the postmastership. It is not known what wires he pulls, but he has a sort of art of saying nothing, fighting nothing, doing nothing all the time, yet getting there on each and every occasion. He is courteous to a degree. It is an open secret that his favorite method of capturing the rising vote for the Grand Old Party is to nod familiarly to passing school boys as if they were high Government officials and every one his bosom friend.

* * *

John W. Murray, the only man in Plainfield with a large family and no beard, is one of the New York business men who think of that suburban town as something more than a nightly bunking-place. He has learned politics in the same school as Elias R. Pope. Democrats fear him most when he takes a day off from running the German-American Fire Insurance Company and stalks around Plainfield with hands in his pockets and a look of suspicious innocence. He has a mustache and a violent prejudice against the swell clothing and the gaudy mansion that his wealth would entitle him to. One of his dearest pleasures is to run up the American flag on his lawn on the Fourth. Another is to land truly good men like Stephen B. Ginna and Ernest R. Ackerman in a Councilmanic seat. He has one of the brightest and most charming families. An attempt was made to count all its members once. It was a failure.

Reception to Secretary Foster.

FINDLAY, O., March 10.—The old neighbors of Secretary of the Treasury Charles Foster gave him an informal reception on his return from Washington. It is the intention of the Secretary to devote the next two weeks to settling up his business matters. He and his family will then go to Washington for permanent residence.

The Baseball War.

CLEVELAND, March 10.—The baseball war, so far as Al Johnson of Cleveland is concerned, is over. Last night a deal was completed between J. Palmer O'Neill, whereby the latter purchased all the interests of Johnson in the Cleveland Brotherhood Club and the Cincinnati Club. The price paid was $30,000.

Threw Himself in Front of a Train.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 10.—W. Costello, of this city, committed suicide last night by throwing himself in front of a passenger train at Steel Works station, near Scranton. He was struck by the pilot of the engine and his body was horribly mangled. No cause is assigned for the act.

Snow Elected Mayor of Bangor.

BANGOR, Me., March 10.—Joseph E. Snow, Democrat, was elected Mayor by nearly 400 plurality over Beal, Republican, and Fox, Prohibitionist. The Republicans carried four of the seven wards as usual. Many Republicans voted and worked for Snow.

Returns Over $3,000,000.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 10.—The Senate concurrent resolution 12 in regard to the amendment to the Direct Tax bill, which returns from the national to the State treasury over two million dollars, was adopted by the Assembly.

Large Amount of Mail Matter Burned.

NEW YORK, March 10.—At the postoffice it is learned that the baggage car burned on the New York Central near Crainesville, contained 58 sacks of letters and 35 sacks of newspapers, sent out in advance of the regular postal car in order to make closer connections. The sacks contained mail for Buffalo, Erie, Lockport, Cleveland and Toledo.

An Important Appointment.

BOSTON, March 10.—The mayor has nominated Henry B. Carter as superintendent of streets. Under a new ordinance the sewer and bridge department and a part of the health department are consolidated with the street department and greatly increases the responsibilities of the position.

A Deluge of Rain.

NYACK, N. Y., March 10.—The first thunderstorm of the season visited this region last night. It was quite severe. The lightning was in sharp forks, the thunder heavy, and the rain came in the form of a deluge.

A STRONG NERVE!

Do you know the value of a strong nerve?

Do you remember the story of the aeronaut, who, when the safety valve at the top of the balloon would not work, boldly mounted the delicate netting step by step, swinging out over the vast swell of the madly thrashing balloon, hanging tooth and nail over the yawning abyss and raging sea below, until he closed the valve, stopped the escape of gas and made the airship rise again to safety?

It was nerve which saved him and his companion.

Would you have had the nerve to do it?

A THOUSAND TIMES NO!

You are strong enough in muscle, but your nerves are weak and shattered You would have turned pale, your nerves would have trembled, relaxed and let you prostrate and powerless, not only in this, but in almost any other emergency.

You have courage enough but your nerve power is weak, exhausted, unsteady and unreliable.

You have used up your nerve strength by overwork, confinement, worry or dissipation, all out of proportion to your physical strength. That is why you look so well and feel so unutterably played out. You are weak without effort, tired without exertion; feel languid, spiritless, nerveless, have no ambition, energy or content. That is why you have restless, sleepless nights and wake mornings enervated, lifeless, tired. That is why you are at times gloomy and depressed, why your heart palpitates so easily, why you tremble at the least excitement and are ashamed at your lack of nerve even in trivial things. In the Spring these symptoms are always aggravated by spring debility.

You need a new nerve, for nerve strength is the real power of the body. IT IS THE MAINSPRING OF LIFE AND HEALTH.

How get it? Easily enough. Use Dr. Greene's Nervura, the greatest known restorer of nerve strength, the best brain invigorant, the most wonderful giver of strength, power and vigor to the weakened, run down and exhausted system. It is a purely vegetable and perfectly harmless remedy, and can be procured at all druggists at $1 per bottle. Get it, you who have weak nerves.

Ringing Words of Hope.

For eight years I have been constantly under the care of doctors, five years under eminent allopathic and three with homeopathic physicians, but found no relief, nor, from what the doctors told me, did I expect to get any better. I was convinced they did not understand my case, so I thought I would try Dr. Greene's Nervura, and the result has been truly wonderful. I now feel in better health than for the last twenty years. During all this time I have been suffering with Malaria, Heart Disease, Kidney and Liver complaints, nervous prostration and sleeplessness. "For the three months before taking Dr. Greene's Nervura I had been confined to my room, and most of the time to the bed." I feel, with the blessing of God Dr. Greene's Nervura has given me a new lease of life and health, and that I am cured of all my troubles. I have a great desire that others may be benefited as I have been, and take every opportunity to recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura to the sick.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

THE TERRIBLE COST.

Crouching on the dingy, old stone pier,
Watching the water dark and deep,
Sits poor, old, blear-eyed Carl Le Mere,
Mu'ring as one in troubled sleep:
"O artful fiend, with cursed bowl,
You've robbed me of all that man counts dear:
Drowned all my hopes, my life, my soul—
Now mock in delight at my pain and fear.

"Friends, home, happiness, Heaven and rest, Relentless you've taken. What have I now?"
The voice rose higher; the hands were pressed
In anguish against the fevered brow;
"For all of this, O fiend accurst,
What have you given? You answer well—
It sweeps o'er my soul in burning thirst,
An earnest, in truth, of the drunkard's hell."

Backward he sank to the pier again
Mut'ring, and gazed in the water deep;
"Oh for an end of the gnawing pain,
Oh for the old-time restful sleep!
Water, you ever have been a friend,
Cover and hide my wretched face;
Let me come to the bitter end,
Cradled at last in thy cool embrace."

The veil of twilight sank over day,
Along the headlands the beacons shone;
But never a cheering, hopeful ray,
Came to that soul as it watched alone.
The night wind echoed the sailor's song,
The waves moaned sadly against the pier,
They had not meant to do a wrong
In answering poor, old Carl Le Mere.

Sadly they sobbed along the shore,
And laid their burden upon the sands;
Then rolled away, with muffled roar,
To beat the "death march" in other lands;
And passers look on the wreck, shore driven,
And looking, linger to count the cost—
Home, happiness, life, and hope of Heaven,
All staked with a demon, and lost, all lost.
—Jenny L. Eno, in National Temperance Advocate.

TEMPERANCE STATISTICS.

The Erroneous Statements Made Concerning the Cost of Liquors.

Few are guiltless of unconscious exaggeration. A good cause is damaged more by exaggeration in its support than by opposition. The simple truth alone is permanently helpful. Even Temperance statistics are by no means always accurate. Figures are often made to tell most damaging lies. Even contrasts are frequently incorrect on both sides. Ever since I first began to read Temperance figures it has been stated that the country starves its clergy on $12,000,000 annually, while hundreds of millions are lavished on the saloon-keepers. Yet the Methodist Episcopal church alone pays her ministers over $9,000,000 each year. She supports about one-ninth of the country's clergy, and if others are as well paid the whole sum is over $80,000,000. In similar contrasts, $85,000,000 is often put down as the cost of education. Yet the Commissioner of Education in the report of 1888 places the expenditure for public education at $122,500,000. If we add to this the cost of universities—$8,000,000—the cost of private and parochial schools, probably $5,000,000, as 500,000 pupils are reported, and the expenses of commercial colleges, schools of law, medicine, theology and of secondary instruction, we shall not fall below $150,000,000 as America's annual tuition bill.

Again, some of the best statistical writers fix bread at $505,000,000 and liquors at $900,000,000. This bread item is the wholesale value of "grist-mill products" given in the census of 1880. The same table reports the brewery and distillery products at less than $142,000,000. That the liquor output increases in cost vastly more between the producer and the consumer than the grist-mill product is acknowledged, but the grist-mill product is by no means the Nation's bread bill. If the fair valuation of labor, fuel and rent were added the bread of the people would be found to cost scarcely less than $1,000,000,000. Large additions must also be made to the wholesale figures of the cost of meat, cotton goods and shoes if quoted in the contrasts.

Further is the common estimate of $900,000,000 as the Nation's liquor bill reliable? Quite likely nearly that sum is paid each year to the liquor dealers of the country. It is absolute loss, more than loss—a damage to the consumers. But is it such to the Nation? One hundred million go into the Government Treasury as internal revenue tax, and perhaps more than half that sum is paid into municipal treasuries as license fees. This money certainly is not lost to the Nation. Nor does the currency paid for drinks drop out of circulation or suffer depreciation. It is there—all there—and is just as useful as ever when returned to legitimate channels of business. To this is often added a very large if unequal sum for indirect cost of the traffic. But what is lost? All the barley, hops, corn, strychnine, indicus coculus and other ingredients used in the manufacture are lost. The world receives no return for them. No health, strength or warmth is secured by the outlay. No compensation to the community by increase of assets is rendered by the time of brewers, distillers and rectifiers. The labor of the army of employes, saloon-keepers, clerks and carriers is lost. The immense annual value of the plants, the store buildings, teams, railroad cars and varied properties used in business, is wasted. The time of men spent in places of drink, wasted during and after drunken debaucheries, in sickness and early death from drink, the cost of the prosecution of drink-made criminals, of the support of insane and paupers made by liquor, the cost of medical advice in sickness, the lessened value through life of the labor of children of drinking parents, because of lack of education, the general depreciation of prices of real estate and of profits of honest business, all indicate a total and incessant loss to the Nation, entailed by the liquor traffic. That the figures of these irretrievable losses, could they be ascertained, would equal the usual estimates of the direct cost of the traffic can scarcely be doubted, but that they can legitimately be added to the direct cost and then charged against the murderous business, I doubt. There are many intricacies in this business, and my political economy may be all wrong. Others, better versed, may set me right. —Rev. Henry Colman, in N. W. Christian Advocate.

A MEMBER of Vienna's town council when a rise in beer was reported wanted the city to erect a brewery "in order to protect the people."

He Appreciated Courtesy.

Mr. Kulpepper, an epicurean smoker, was traveling on a railway with a passenger from Berlin who was smoking a horrid cigar. As all hints and signs proved unavailing, Mr. Kulpepper had recourse to an often tried experiment. Rising from his seat, he politely said:

"Will you allow me to open the window?"

At the same time he "quite accidentally" brushed against the hand of his fellow-passenger, causing him to drop his cigar. Mr. Kulpepper had the additional misfortune to step on it and said, in alarm:

"Oh! I beg a thousand pardons. Allow me to offer you one of mine. They are not half bad."

"With your kind permission," answered the Berliner, quite pleased. He took three cigars out of the case presented to him and put them into his pocket, saying:

"These are a first-rate brand. I'll smoke 'em on Sundays."

And with that he proceeded to light another one of his own.—Neueste Nachrichten.

As Natural as Life.

"How many cards did you say?" said Postmaster Shattuck as a gentleman asked him for some postal pasteboards, yesterday.

"Give me three," said the inquirer, as he hastily looked at his hand.

Another gentleman just behind, who was waiting, here "chipped in" with the remark that he "would take five." The number was promptly shuffled out to him.

Then as the gentlemen stood there looking at each other, a funny thought seemed to strike them simultaneously, and they smiled, bunched their hands, and quietly separated.—Titusville Herald.

TELEGRAPHIC ERRORS.

They Have Caused Fun, Sorrow and Loss of Money.

Thousands of errors have been made in telegraphic messages, says the New York Times. In fact, a day rarely passes without a good many of them occurring. Some of them have caused much amusement, some have caused tears and some have caused serious financial loss. They are not always due to inexpert operators. It is a remarkable fact that during the prevalence of bad weather, or what are known as "electrical storms," which are thorns in the side of every chief operator—for while they continue wires become as unreliable as a fickle woman—dots and dashes have been so shifted as to cause a receiver to put down a word totally different from the one transmitted by the sender. That, however, does not occur often.

The faulty penmanship of hurried business men and others who use the telegraph is also responsible for many of the errors. Operators are compelled to rigidly "follow copy," and if a word is indistinct they send whatever it seems to them to look like, no matter how blind their reading may make the context. Besides, some messages pass through a number of hands.

The telegraph companies persistently print at the top of their message blanks a warning that they are not responsible for mistakes in transmission, and they also proffer, in very small type, the advice that "to guard against mistakes or delays the sender of a message should order it repeated; that is, telegraphed back to the originating office for comparison," at an additional charge of one-half the regular rate. The notice has steadily adorned the blanks in spite of court decisions that the companies are responsible for errors, whether the messages are repeated or not, and in spite of the additional fact that it is rarely read, or, if it is, the interest excited is only casual. Nobody ever seems to accept the advice regarding repetition. An operator, speaking of the old notice recently, said that in an experience of fifteen years he had never seen but one message, bearing the order to repeat, and it was regarded as a great curiosity. This message fell a victim to excessive caution. It was bound from New York to San Francisco. It contained but one word, the little word "Yes." It was religiously repeated back from every relay station between the Atlantic and Pacific, but by some misfortune, due to a second of abstraction on the part of an operator or to a timely but unfortunate "flip" of the instrument, the word was changed to "No." A big row ensued and an operator in New York nearly lost his position.

The financial losses that have been caused by telegraph blunders have been due mostly to the changing around of amounts. There have been instances where an order to buy has been changed in transmission into an order to sell. But generally, if there is a mistake, it is in the figures. To make the likelihood of error as slight as possible, amounts expressed in figures by the original writer of a message are usually spelled out and expressed in words by the operators. Even this precaution does not always avail, however. It is comparatively easy for poor handwriting and careless transmission to change fifteen to fifty, or twenty to thirty, or fifty to sixty. There was a mistake of this character perpetrated in Washington some time ago. It caused no loss, but that was because of good luck. A grocery firm in the capital city sent an order to a wholesale house in Baltimore for fifteen barrels of "A" sugar. The next morning the grocery firm received a shipping bill which contained the information that fifty barrels of "A" sugar had been shipped to them, "as per order."

As the sugar was by that time in Washington, the firm, having investigated and discovered that the mistake was not theirs, notified the manager of the telegraph office that the company must take the extra thirty-five barrels off their hands. The manager told the operator who sent the message about the notice. While the responsibility for the blunder, as between the sender in Washington and the receiver in Baltimore—it was undoubtedly the fault of the latter—had not been settled, the Washington operator, who was of a speculative disposition, requested the manager to delay his answer. Then he ran around to find a friend who was in the sugar business, and inquired as to the future of sugar prices. He learned that there was a strong probability of an immediate and material advance. He informed the manager that he recalled that the mistake was his, and that he was prepared to pay the penalty for it by taking the sugar. The firm turned over the thirty-five barrels to the operator. Two hours later they, too, heard that sugar was going up. They sent the operator word that they would relieve him of his load if he wished. He replied that he was very much obliged to them, but they needn't trouble themselves. The next morning he sold his sugar at a good profit, took the money to the races and lost it.

The wifely reproaches which a gay young New York lawyer encountered on reaching his home late one night were undoubtedly due in the main to his own poor handwriting, but a careless operator was also responsible for them. He related the experience the next day.

"It was two o'clock when I reached home," he said. "My wife met me at the door. I saw at once that she was very angry. She handed me a telegram and asked freezingly: 'What is the meaning of this?' I said: 'Why, my dear, what's wrong? That's probably the message I sent you in the afternoon.' 'It is,' she answered. 'Please read it and explain.' I read it. To my astonishment it read: 'Shall dine with Kitty Smith, an old gal of mine, who has just returned from Europe. Will be late. Don't wail for me.'

"'I wouldn't wail for the best man that ever lived,' said my wife, and she began to cry.

"I realized at once what had happened, and I began to laugh. I couldn't help it. 'Why,' I said, 'this message has been botched. I wrote no such stuff as that.' 'What did you write, then?' she demanded. Then I told her that what I had really written was: 'Shall dine with Billy Smith, an old pal of mine, who has just returned from Europe. Will be late. Don't wait for me.' Those infernal operators had butchered it. I've got the original message. In view of the circumstances the manager of the telegraph office consented to lend it to me. My wife was pretty well satisfied, but I wanted to convince her absolutely. After this I shall endeavor to write plainer and I shall certainly avoid the use of slang words."

The explanation in this case is that the B in "Billy" and the p in "pal" were probably badly written. But the substitution of "itty" for "illy" and of an l for a t in "wait" was undoubtedly the fault of the operators. There is a similarity between the Morse characters which stand for the letters l and t, and they are frequently confused by young operators. L is represented by a long dash and i by a short one, and double t or double l, when sent too close together, make the letter m, so that it was quite possible for the lawyer's wife to have been informed, or rather misinformed, that her husband intended to dine with an individual of the peculiar name of "Bimy" Smith or "Kimy" Smith, or even "Bitty" Smith or "Killy" Smith, instead of "Kitty" Smith. Such palpable errors are, of course, only made by very green operators. An experienced man, unless his wits were off wool-gathering, would make some inquiries of the sender, which would probably result in a correction.

Two callow young operators made an explanation necessary from a New York newspaper man recently. He was to be married in the West. Before leaving town he devoted several days to searching over Brooklyn for a flat, being assisted in the search by a young married woman, the friend of his betrothed. Upon leaving his office one morning about two o'clock he sent the Brooklyn lady a telegram, which he expected would be delivered to her about 8:30 or nine o'clock in the morning. The dispatch was worded apologetically: "Will be over to worry you this afternoon."

The message was "mulled" on its way across the East river and a meaning of so much importance was given to it that the Brooklyn operator rushed it out, the message boy arriving at the house at about four a. m. The husband of the lady got out of bed to answer the bell. By a further mistake of the delivery department the envelope was addressed to the husband. He opened it and was astonished to read: "Mrs. ———: Will be over to marry you this afternoon."

When a man is awakened from a sound sleep and informed that his wife is to be married to a young man who, he has had every reason to believe, was to be married to a young lady in the West, he is apt to conclude that he isn't awake after all. No one who has not experienced it can realize how very startling it is. It was the first his wife had heard of it. They racked their brains for a solution of the puzzle. It wasn't solved, however, until the young newspaper man arrived.

A lynching was nearly precipitated by the error of a Kansas operator some time ago. It was only averted by the discovery that there was no one to lynch. A young farmer was called away from home for a few days. His wife went to visit her brother in a town near by during his absence. The third day her husband telegraphed her: "Big ball, meet me at Wichita to-night." There was to be a dance and he wanted his wife to attend. This was a splendid opportunity for the imp of mischief who causes telegraphic "bulls." He tampered with the message so that when the farmer's wife read it, it said: "Big Bill got me at Wichita to-night."

Her instant and very natural conclusion was that her husband had either been captured or shot, or both, by a desperado named "Big Bill." Her brothers agreed with her, and the whole family and a number of neighbors, all heavily armed, took the first train for Wichita to rescue the husband and hang "Big Bill." The husband was waiting calmly at the station for his wife. The vigilance committee demanded "Big Bill," and were not at all satisfied with the husband for standing there free and uninjured. The brothers criticised him severely because he wasn't kidnaped, and announced that in their opinion he was guilty of rank deception. A fight was prevented by his wife's intervention and an explanation.

A gentleman in San Francisco learned that an estimable lady in Los Angeles had suddenly lost all her property and was in a condition of actual want. He telegraphed to a friend, a lawyer of Los Angeles: "Assist Mrs. —— immediately." The word "assist" was changed to "arrest," and the poor woman's misery was increased by a night in a prison cell.

"Send me tenderloins," said a message received by a New York sporting man from a friend in Philadelphia. It should have read: "Send me ten dollars." The New York man replied: "What do you mean?" and the Philadelphia man was so indignant at such a response to his request that the friendship was severed for nearly a year.

A gentleman with the dignified name of Cyrus T. Nixon was shocked to have a message handed to him addressed "Circus T. Nixon." A wholesale produce merchant received a message from a retail customer, saying: "Your 8999 are No. 900 D." It should have been: "Your eggs are no good." The delivery department of the New Orleans Western Union office was mystified by a message addressed to Byannon street. It turned out to be 80 Cannon street.

Absolute accuracy will probably never come. It certainly will not as long as telegraphers have debts, love affairs, good intentions, base-ball, horse races and countless other subjects to occupy their minds while they are receiving or sending dispatches in the contents of which they can have no possible interest.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

A Perfect Success. 7

The Rev. A. Antoine of Refugio, Tex., writes: As far as I am able to judge, I think Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic is a perfect success, for any one who suffered from any of painful nervousness as I did. I feel now like myself again after taking the Tonic.

A Strong Proof.

ORILLIA, ONT., CANADA, June, '88.

I was first attacked by epilepsy in November 1879; residing in New York I consulted the best physicians, but they could only arrest the disease, the honest ones told me then there was no cure for it—I was compelled to give up my occupation and return to Canada in 1879; since then I tried innumerable remedies and consulted some of the best physicians, but nothing benefited me until I began to use Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic in September '88, since then I had not a single attack.

THEIR END IS NEAR

Two Murderers at Sing Sing Prison to Die Next Week.

THE DEATH CHAIR IN PLACE.

Electrical Experts Ready to Inspect the Fatal Machinery.

The Warden Preparing to Send Out His Invitations to Physicians and Citizens to Witness the Electrocution—The Condemned Men Accept the Religious Consolation Offered Them Gratefully.

SING SING, N. Y., March 11.—As the days draw near for the electrocution of the condemned murderers, Slocum and Smiler, the big prison shows signs of the suppressed excitement which has always been manifested just before the date fixed for the first experiment here with electricity as a mode of capital punishment.

The electrical experts are arriving to inspect the instruments of death and supervise the preliminary tests of the fatal machinery, and everything is ready for their approval.

Warden Brush is plainly anxious over the possible movements of the condemned men's lawyers. While aware of the fact that they propose to make efforts to secure another stay of execution, he cannot proceed on the assumption that they will succeed, and consequently must make every preparation just as though he had not learned that such steps were contemplated.

While every other preparation for the electrocution—or rather for the tests, as the experts may advise some change after the tests have been made—has been completed, there is one thing that Warden Brush will leave until Saturday.

That is, the sending out of invitations to the citizens and the physicians that the law requires shall witness the electrocution. Otherwise everything is ready.

Preparing for Death.

The condemned men appear now to realize that this is the last week that they are sure of living, and show more of a disposition to prepare for the end.

Both Slocum and Smiler accept the religious consolation offered them gratefully.

They seemed to have recovered from the depression which showed itself Monday, but they are still very thoughtful, and devote more time to prayer.

Neither speaks of the death chair nor evinces any curiosity to learn what is being done for them by their lawyers. They appear to be afraid that what little hope they yet possess may be dashed away, and so they are waiting without asking any questions which at times appear to be on their lips.

THE MILLER MURDER TRIAL.

Expert Testimony as to the Blood Spots on Lingo's Clothes.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 11.—This is the seventh day of the trial of Francis Lingo for the murder of Mrs. Annie Miller. The expert testimony of Dr. Formad, of the University of Pennsylvania, regarding the blood-stained clothes and the fact that the poor woman had been criminally assaulted, was a severe blow to the prisoner.

It was shown by the evidence of Jailer Loglue that Lingo wore a moustache when arrested, and that he shaved it off about a week ago, or just before the commencement of the trial. It will be remembered that the young women who testified to seeing Lingo in the bush lot on the day of the murder said he had a moustache, and as Lingo has none now the State felt the necessity of showing when he shaved it off.

The long black coat found in Lingo's house, with a revolver in one pocket, was identified by Constable Carlin, and John Miller, husband of the murdered woman, gave certain evidence regarding her physical condition at the time she left home that morning.

Lingo listened impassively to this evidence. There was nothing in it to warrant a smile, and he evidently repressed any other feeling. Not a word, however, escaped him and, although he did not show it outwardly, he was evidently deeply interested.

Whether the defence will have a chance to introduce evidence to-day now seems doubtful, as it is expected the cross-examination or Dr. Formad will occupy nearly all day. In that event, the counsel for the defence will open their case to-morrow.

Fire Caused by an Electric Light Wire.

BOSTON, March 11.—The Magee Furnace Company's establishment on Williams street, Chelsea, was damaged $60,000 by fire last night; insured. The fire was caused by an electric light wire, and at one time threatened to extend to the surrounding buildings.

Gold Found in Indiana.

COLUMBUS, Ind., March 11.—A mineral deposit has been found on the farm of John Milman, two miles from Coatesville. An analysis of a specimen shows a large percentage of gold.

CLASH IN CONNECTICUT.

The Democratic Controller Refuses to Pay the Executive Secretary's Salary.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 11.—The first official clash between Controller Staub's department and Gov. Bulkeley's executive department has occurred, and among the Democratic and Republican leaders in the General Assembly it is regarded as the stepping-stone to the courts to eventually settle the question of Controller Staub's right to pay the salaries of the present State officials and their subordinates.

Austin Brainard, the executive secretary, went to the Controller's office to get his month's pay, $100, as Gov. Bulkeley's private secretary. It had been customary to pay such bills on the spot. The chief clerk told Mr. Brainard to see Controller Staub about his pay. This interview resulted in the refusal of the Controller to pay the salary. Controller Staub said that he would not order the bill paid until he had consulted counsel.

Mr. Staub, the Controller, is very much worked up over the charge that he has gone back on his party by recognizing Morgan G. Bulkeley as Connecticut's chief executive. He says there is no truth in any of the assertions to this effect, and says most emphatically that he does not recognize Bulkeley as Governor, and would resign his office rather than do so.

NEW OIL FIELD.

Operators and Land-Scalpers Anxious to Get Territory.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 11.—There is great excitement at Elizabeth, twenty miles up the Monongahela River, over the discovery of petroleum. The Pioneer well is being worked as a "mystery." The derrick has been boarded up and no one is allowed to enter.

The community is overrun with operators and land-scalpers, who are anxious to get territory, and farmers are demanding exorbitant prices for the right to drill.

If it is really a new oil field, James G. Blaine will profit greatly, for he is the owner of a large farm, now unproductive, although underlaid with coal. The first well is said to be good for two hundred barrels a day.

HANGED HERSELF AND BABE.

Terrible Deed of a Young Married Woman in Minnesota.

FERGUS FALLS, Minn., March 11.—Mrs. O. C. Hanson, of Pelican Rapids hanged herself and her year-old babe about 11 a. m. She fastened a stout string on the edge of the door just above the hinge on which she hanged the baby. She then drove a nail in the top of the door casing and attached a stout string to it with which she hanged herself. When found both bodies were hanging and life extinct, the woman's feet touching the floor.

Mrs. Hanson had been married two years and was a second wife. No cause can be found for committing the deed. Mr. Hanson is nearly crazed with grief.

Failure of a Big Tea Firm.

BOSTON, March 11.—The failure of Dudley, Hall & Co., the well-known tea merchants, was a surprise to business circles. The firm's liabilities are about $450,000. The cause of the failure is attributed to the endorsement of accommodation papers for personal friends which has made heavy demands upon the assets of the company. The assignees are Francis Flint of Cambridge, and W. B. French of Winchester.

Prohibitionists Nominate a Ticket.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 11.—The State Prohibitionists nominated the following ticket: Rev. John H. Lacey, of Providence, for Governor; Joshua C. Brown, of Newport, for Lieutenant-Governor; Thomas H. Peabody, of Westerly, for Attorney-General; David O. Cargill, of Cumberland, for Secretary of State; Louis E. Remington, of Providence, for General Treasurer.

Merchant Vessels Racing.

NEW YORK, March 11.—An interesting race of merchant vessels began this morning. The British ships Habitant for Melbourne, Alex. Yeats for Sydney and Indore for Calcutta, and the German ship Senta for Melbourne, started on their voyages together, and race as far as the Equator. They hope to overhaul the American ship T. F. Oakes, which cleared Sandy Hook yesterday for Port Townsend.

1,000 Men Thrown Out of Employment.

MOUNT CARMEL, Pa., March 11.—The Mount Carmel shaft colliery suspended indefinitely last evening owing to the depressed condition of the coal trade. It is one of the largest mines in the region, and one thousand men are thrown out of employment. The Alaska shaft, Back Ridge and Bear Valley collieries have closed down for the same reason.

Connecticut Legislation.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 11.—The House adopted the resolutions appointing Dwight Loomis judge of the Supreme Court for eight years, and Edward I. Sandford judge of the Superior Court for eight years. The House joint resolutions incorporating the James Blackstone Memorial Library Association and accepting the legacy given to the State in the will of the late Philip Marett were adopted.

PEFFER ON FINANCE

He Denounces the Policy of Believing the Money Market.

HIS PLAN TO PAY OFF MORTGAGES

He Wants the Government to Loan the Farmers $500,000,000.

Death of United States Minister Swift in Japan—Great Britain Ready to Arbitrate the Behring Sea Question—The Stanford University—Arrested for Robbing the Mails—The Russian Mission Rumor.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Senator Peffer of Kansas denounces the whole policy of the Treasury Department in occasionally intervening to relieve the stringency of the market as wrong in principle and an injustice to Kansas and the West. He wanted the stringency relieved, not by anticipating the interest on bonds or by purchasing the people's indebtedness at a premium, but by the the issue of more money.

He favored the immediate issue of $500,000,000 in one-dollar treasury notes. This sum, or so much thereof as was necessary, he would loan out. Ten per cent. of each loan to be paid each year, 9 per cent. to be applied to the extinction of the principal indebtedness, and 1 per cent. covering the interest. In that way he believed it possible to redeem every mortgaged home in the land within a period of ten years.

Ex-Congressman Warner, who was present, attempted to get at the Kansas Senator's meaning a little more clearly by putting a few questions to him. To these Peffer replied that General Warner and himself were reasoning on widely separated premises, the General's questions being based upon the present monetary system, which made money the standard of value as well as the medium of exchange.

His own system eliminated from money not only the element of intrinsic value, but the power to limit or control the value of things of use.

JOHN F. SWIFT DEAD.

The United States Minister to Japan Expires at Tokio.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Secretary Blaine has received a cablegram from Tokio announcing the death of John F. Swift, of California, United States Minister to Japan.

John F. Swift was born in Missouri about fifty years ago. In 1853 he went to California and became one of the leading lawyers of the Pacific coast.

In 1886 he was the Republican candidate for Governor of California, but was defeated. He has written several books of travel and novels, and was thoroughly familiar with the Chinese question.

READY TO ARBITRATE.

Lord Salisbury Sends His Long-Deferred Reply to Mr. Blaine's Note.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The Behring Sea negotiations have taken a favorable turn and the governments of the United States and Great Britain appear to have at length reached a basis upon which to settle their difficulties.

Lord Salisbury has just replied to Mr. Blaine's last note. He admits Great Britain's willingness to arbitrate most of the questions presented

The Stanford University.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Senator Stanford expects to start on his Eastern trip the latter part of this week. He goes to Philadelphia, then to New York, Boston and Albany to meet the leading men in the educational world and consult with them in reference to the formation of a faculty for his new university in California. He has made appointments for an important meeting in New York next week. Senator Stanford had hoped to be able to open the university in the spring of this year, but finds it impossible and the ceremonies may not take place before October.

Washington Bound to See Bernhardt.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The first day's sale of seats for Bernhardt's engagement next week was phenomenal. All through the night scores of people waited for the opening of the box office and at 10 a. m. hundreds of people stood in a line extending several blocks away, waiting to procure seats. The President, all of the foreign legations and many prominent public officials were represented in the advance orders for boxes and seats.

Kincaid's Trial.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The trial of Charles E. Kincaid, the newspaper correspondent who shot ex-Congressman Taulbee in the Capitol, is set for next Monday, and the government has summoned the witnesses for that time and will be ready to go on with the case then. The sickness of Senator Voorhees, one of the counsel for the defence, may cause a postponement, however.

An Alleged Mail Robber Arrested.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Chief Inspector Ratabone of the Postoffice Department has been advised of the arrest at Eastport, Me., of Daniel P. Goulding, the clerk in the postoffice at that city, for depredations on the mail. The postoffice authorities have been two years endeavoring to locate the pilferer, and have conclusive evidence against Goulding.

The Rumor About Minister Smith.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—At the Executive Mansion nothing is known of the rumored recall or resignation of Charles Emory Smith, United States Minister to Russia.

Big Fire in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 11.—Burt's building, corner of Pearl and Court street, was totally destroyed by fire last evening The loss will probably reach $500,000.

SENATORS LOCKED UP.

They Imprison Themselves at Albany Over the Fight About the Presiding Officer.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 11.—After an all-night session, during which the Senators cracked jokes, played cards and had a good time generally, the fight was resumed this morning over the Fassett resolution that the temporary president and not a Senator designated by the Lieutenant-Governor, shall preside when the Lieutenant-Governor is absent for more than a day.

Motions, counter motions and amendments were made and offered; in fact, every endeavor was made on both sides to corner one another, and the yeas and nays were called before any vote was taken. There was a great deal of fiery talk at times, but every Senator was amazingly polite, even when in an angry mood.

It was apparent that each side was convinced that the one that would get the worst of it would be the one that would lose its temper. Consequently, during the debate pro and con, although the Senators' faces were flushed when they spoke and their voices rang out loudly, not a word was uttered that infringed in the least upon courtesy or amiability. Meanwhile no State business is done. It is expected that the deadlock will end to-day.

MILLS IS A CANDIDATE.

He is After the Speakership and Talks About Mr. Reed.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 11.—To a reporter who asked the Hon. R. Q. Mills if he was a candidate for the Speakership, he did not hesitate to state frankly that he was, but did not desire to be interviewed on the subject.

When asked if any Democrats in the House were in favor of passing a vote of thanks to Speaker Reed, he said: "Not one of them. Reed is a man of ability; he would make a good general for any army. He has very decided views, and in enforcing his view of things he does not seem to think that the wishes of the minority should be taken into account. But I ought not to say much about him, for my relations with him are cordial."

Gift to Williams College.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., March 11.—News has been received here of a most important gift to Williams College. F. F. Thompson offers to build a series of three laboratories, chemical, physical and biological. The architect is to be F. R. Allen, of Boston. They will probably cost over one hundred thousand dollars, and they will be put up about one a year, so as to have all completed for the college centennial in 1893. They are to be called the "Thompson Laboratories."

Disagreement Over the MacQueary Case.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 11.—There is serious disagreement among the members of the Ecclesiastical Court, which has the MacQueary Heresy case under advisement. Bishop Leonard, when asked in regard to a rumor that Dean Morgan would send in his individual opinion, replied that individual opinions would have no weight with him, for the church canon requires the court to find a verdict. The Bishop said his own opinion of MacQueary's heresy was formed when the rector was first admonished.

The Hennessy Trial Nearly Ended.

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—The defence in the Hennessy trial closed its case after the introduction of some character testimony, except as to Politz. The mistress of Politz swore that he was sleeping with her the night Hennessy was murdered. The defence will occupy seven hours in argument and the State five. The case will, therefore, go to the jury Thursday afternoon. The jury visited the scene of the murder last night.

Lively Spring Election.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 11.—The spring election held in this city was a very lively one, and there was bloodshed at the polls in the Fifth ward. A number of negroes got into a fight at that polling place, when Henry Jones whipped out a razor and cut William Robinson seriously. A free fight ensued and the police had to use their clubs. The election resulted in a victory for the Baird faction.

Hat Manufacturers Combine.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The fact has just leaked out that the wool hat manufacturers of the country formed a combination in this city last week and gave it the title of the National Hat Company. The corporation is organized under the laws of New Jersey and has a paid up capital of $1,500,000.

Moss Listens to His Death Warrant.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 11.—The sheriff of Luzerne County read the death warrant to George W. Moss, the wife murderer, who is to be hanged on the 26th of this month. The condemned listened to the reading of the document calmly and said that he was ready to meet his fate.

Striking Spinners Return to Work.

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 11.—The striking spinners at the Robeson and Slade mills held meetings last evening and voted to return to work to-day. In both cases the treasurers of the mills promised to remedy the grievances of the men.

The Missouri Pacific Directory.

NEW YORK, March 11.—It is rumored on Wall street that there will be changes in the Missouri Pacific directory to-day. No names are mentioned, but it is understood that there will be a Southern representation.

Four Years for Assault.

PENN YAN, N. Y., March 11.—Edward Thomas, colored, was convicted here of assault in the second degree, for cutting one Peter Burns with a razor, and was given four years in prison.

The Election in Batavia, N. Y.

BATAVIA, N. Y., March 11.—At the election here the Republicans gained control of the Board of Aldermen and elected Mayor John M. Secord.

HE SEES WAR AHEAD

A British Naval Officer Says England Will Fight.

WHY WOLSELEY VISITS CANADA

He is on a Tour of Inspection of the Defences of Great Britain.

The Storm in England is Worse Than Reported—London Hemmed in and Trains Snowbound—Trouble Expected Between the Irish Factions on St. Patrick's Day. Belgium Favors Household Suffrage.

MONTREAL, March 11.—An officer of the British navy, who is in the city on business, says there is more significance to be attached to the approaching visit of Lord Wolseley to Canada than is generally believed. Lord Wolseley, he said, will sail shortly for Canada, and will proceed at once to the Pacific coast, where, in company with General Herbert, he will inspect the defences of British Columbia, and more particularly the naval yard at Esquimault. He will remain at Victoria until the United States have given their ultimatum with regard to the Behring Sea question.

When asked what he thought of the outlook and the possibility of an early settlement of matters of dispute between Canada and the United States, he said:

"I would be surprised to find Great Britain and the United States at war before the year is out. The British Government has been quietly gaining quiet in view of the possibility of the Liberal party in Canada getting into power, through whom, Lord Salisbury believed, a more satisfactory settlement of matters in dispute could be reached than through the administration of Sir John Macdonald, whose policy has been more of the direct effect of intensifying hostilities than effecting reconciliation.

"Just mark my words," he added, "if Great Britain and the United States do not measure swords before the year closes they will come very close to it that only the greatest amount of strategy will avert it."

LONDON SNOWBOUND.

The Big City Shut in by the Furious March Blizzard.

LONDON, March 11.—The storm now raging in the United Kingdom is generally admitted to be the worst of the century. London looks like a city that has had a fall thrown over it, street traffic having been brought to a standstill, and only a few stray pedestrians being here and there visible.

What the end may conceal is not yet known, but it is certain that many lives have been lost and much property destroyed. A fearful amount of distress is reported in all parts of the country.

The state of affairs on the coast and in the English channel is simply appalling. Many vessels have been torn from their moorings at quays, and along the whole coast the greatest excitement prevails over the loss in fishing boats being immense.

The Duke of Edinburgh, who was on his way to resume his naval command at Devonport, is also snowed in at Taunton.

The blizzard is unabated in some sections, and at Moreton the snowdrifts are twenty feet high. Continental mailboats are hours late, and a Norwegian bark has been burned in the Channel trying to light signals of distress.

Trouble Expected on St. Patrick's Day.

LONDON, March 11.—The Irish factions are having considerable trouble here and in Ireland over St. Patrick's Day, and it is feared that the celebration will be attended by many outbreaks between them. Extra police have been ordered that day, large bodies of constabulary to be kept at Dublin Castle, and to be concentrated wherever there is most danger of rioting. Mr. Parnell will, it is understood, spend the day in Cork.

The New Irish Federation.

DUBLIN, March 11.—The executive committee of the new Irish Federation, intended by the anti-Parnellites to take the place of the National League, are as appointed: Messrs. Justin McCarthy, Thos. J. Condon, Michael McCartan, Arthur O'Connor, Thomas Sexton, David Sheehy, Timothy Sullivan and Alfred Webb, and Dillon and O'Brien if they are willing.

Tried to Force Parnell to Retire.

DUBLIN, March 11.—Mr. Sexton states that during the Boulogne negotiations the representatives of the majority offered to leave the question of the chairmanship open for a year if Parnell would in the meantime retire. The negotiations proceeded on the basis that Parnell's leadership was no longer within the range of practical politics.

Household Suffrage for Belgium.

TO TIE UP THE BIG FOUR.

General Dissatisfaction Over Various Matters, Especially Wages.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 11.—A dispatch from Springfield, Ohio, says there is a prospect of an immediate tie-up on the entire Big Four system. General dissatisfaction exists about a variety of matters. The Sandusky and White Water divisions petitioned four months ago for an increase in wages to the Big Four standard.

In an answer given by Manager Peck they were refused. The Cincinnati division men are kicking because bills sent in for overtime have been refused, and the Peoria and other division employes are recalcitrant because of lengthened freight schedules preventing bills for overtime.

Grievance committees from all divisions are in Indianapolis now in conference with the officers, including President Ingalls. The Sandusky and White Water men have the support of the railway employes' orders, and they will not or have not yet accepted the answer given.

NINE ARRESTS MADE.

Striking Cloakmakers and Their Leader, Barondess, in the Hands of the Police.

NEW YORK, March 11.—Nine of the 27 men who raided the shop of Cloakmaker Greenbaum at Jamaica, and who set fire to the place and threw vitriol in the face of Greenbaum's child, disfiguring her for life, have been arrested.

They were found at 385 Bowery, where a meeting of the striking cloakmakers was being held, by Greenbaum and a detachment of detectives from the Central office.

Greenbaum identified nine of the many persons present without hesitation.

Joseph Barondess, the young Anarchist leader of the strikers, was also arrested in this connection. He is charged with having concocted the scheme of sending the strikers to Jamaica to raid the shop and home of Mr. Greenbaum.

PORTER'S REVENGE.

Miss Moore Would Not Marry Him, So He Poisoned Her Sheep.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., March 10.—Cyrus A. Porter, ex-County Auditor and a prominent citizen, is charged with fatally poisoning 30 sheep and some cows, belonging to the Misses Moore of New Salem, who allege that Porter was actuated by revenge, as he wanted to marry Adelaide Moore. On being refused he made threats that she would be sorry for it.

The poisoning followed, and George Moore, brother of the girls, testified that on the morning when the first mixture of poison was found scattered where the sheep pastured he saw Potter driving rapidly away from the spot.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Dr. C. M. Field is about to sail for Bermuda, for the benefit of his health.

John Wilson Young, the stenographer who was mangled by the cars Sunday evening, is no better to-day.

A. Stewart Patterson, of Sixth street, has leased the Knowland residence on East Seventh between Sycamore street and Broadway.

That celebrated organ in Anchor Lodge room, undoubtedly the finest and sweetest instrument of its size and kind in the city, has been purchased for the Park Avenue Baptist church.

D. L. Thompson, of Rockview Terrace, will read a paper on "The single tax," at the Unitarian rooms, Second place, this evening at eight o'clock. All who may be interested are cordially invited to attend.

On Wednesday of last week at the home of the bride's parents, Mount Horeb, the marriage took place of Miss Eliza Mantz and Peter Neuman. The Rev. W. H. Haggerty officiated. The groom is a member of the firm of Estelle, Taylor & Neuman, Broadway and Fifth street.

The hosts of those in this city who love the Rev. Mr. Mills, will undoubtedly flock to Westfield by next Monday evening in such numbers as to overflow the town with a multitude of goodly folk the like of which Mount Ararat has never seen before and never will again. Mr. Mills will only remain in Westfield four days, Saturday to Wednesday.

The Town Talk of Newark, has the following to say of a happy event already noted in these columns: "On Wednesday evening, a quiet home wedding took place at the residence of Mrs. Jane Scott, No. 96 Wright street, the contracting parties being her daughter, Miss Belle, and Mr. Forman G. Neighbor, of Plainfield. The Rev. J. Lester Wells, of the Jersey City Tabernacle, performed the ceremony. The attendants were Miss Addie Weaver, of Plainfield, and Mr. Walter Martin. After the ceremony the happy couple started for Plainfield, their future home."

Miss Grasscup Teaches Master Keefe a Lesson.

Quite a razzle-dazzle scuffle of a few minutes' duration took place at the railroad telegraph station, last evening, between Miss Mary Grasscup, the expert and willing operator, and Michael Keefe, one of the messenger boys.

Miss Grasscup made some remark that displeased Master Keefe and he retaliated by striking her with a wet cloth. Miss Grasscup sprang at the boy so quickly that he was thrown to the floor, where, although Keefe is an unusually large boy, his strength was of no avail. He was completely overpowered and outmatched. Miss Grasscup came out of the battle unscratched, but Keefe was somewhat damaged. He won't strike another woman as long as he remembers last evening's lesson.

City Court Cases.

Michael Cox, a young man, was sentenced by Judge Codington, yesterday afternoon, to pay a fine of $25 and to spend 60 days in jail, for using profane and indecent language to a lady on the street.

Two men were fined for intoxication this morning—one $6, the other $12.

The two tramps who were taken to the county jail yesterday, as told in THE PRESS, will be imprisoned 60 days, for vagrancy and disorderly conduct, and will be held after the expiration of their term to await the action of the Grand Jury on the charge of larceny.

Pleasant to take; perfectly safe, even to the most delicate; and always efficacious. These are the chief attributes of Hires' Cough Cure. Add cheapness—twenty-five cents buys a bottle anywhere—and you have the greatest remedy in the world.

ANOTHER EXPERT'S OPINION.

"THE SOONER IT'S ACCOMPLISHED, THE BETTER."

The Overhead System Perfectly Safe, and the Only One Practicable for a Street Railway.

THE PRESS is proud to-day to be able to publish the following letter from probably the most expert and experienced electrician that has ever been a citizen of Plainfield. He had to be coaxed into print, and still declines to have his name published.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Since the recent action by City Council in regard to granting a franchise for a street railway in this city, I have been repeatedly asked for my views of the subject. I have invariably expressed my satisfaction at the prospect of a permanent and agreeable means of transportation being introduced, as I believe it will not only benefit me personally, but all who are interested in the growth and welfare of Plainfield. When I came here I located within easy walking distance of the station, but I soon discovered that I had only exchanged brick walls for wooden ones, and that to all intents and purposes my family were still living in the city.

While like many others I came to the country for the benefits of the country—to wit: room and fresh air—at the first opportunity I moved out of a crowded locality where I could secure what I sought for. But I soon found this necessitated a horse, carriage and a coachman, the care and annoyance of which more than counterbalanced the satisfaction derived from a country home. I have two or three times been upon the point of returning to the city, as many others have done and shall soon do so if something is not accomplished in the introduction of an electric railway.

The fact that vast sums of money have been spent in litigating upon the storage battery does not make it commercially valuable, and in my opinion it must be born again before it will become so for car or heavy work. I do not care to waste my time or your patience in discussing the technical reasons, etc. Turning to the underground or conduit systems it is sufficient to say that all I ever knew of, have been abandoned. In looking to the horse car advocates we find they have vanished, and we have but one thing left, to wit: an overhead system.

Dangerous! Well yes, about as dangerous as going to New York once a year on a steam car. I certainly admire the courage of the man who exposes such inexcusable ignorance before the public. The current is not dangerous to human life. I have never known of personal injury to anyone from an electric current or car, which, under like circumstances, would not have occured had it been a horse car instead. I would however take none but written promises from those to whom the franchise may be given, as to the character of the apparatus to be introduced and maintained. The city should retain the power to regulate the voltage of the circuits and their construction as related to electric light, telephone and other wires. The repairs to the street through which the road passes, and the character of the power used. It should be understood that a noisy motor or trolley would not be countenanced. The kind of rail to be used is also a matter for consideration.

Now for the protection of interests of those who are opposing fate, I would suggest a provision which shall make it obligatory upon the railway company to run their line through such streets as the Council shall direct in future, in response to petitions which will certainly be made by the present opponents, whenever a reasonable return of the necessary investment can be assured—same as is now required of the Electric Light Company. With these and such other reasonable restrictions as are usually thrown about such enterprises, a more satisfactory and needed improvement cannot be provided by this or any other Council, and the sooner it is accomplished the better.

"AN INDIVIDUAL."

LOCAL PATRONS OF GENUINE SPORT.

Plainfield Commuters and Their Ladies to be Treated to Genuine Amateur Base-Ball This Summer.

The members of the Plainfield Bicycle Club are proving themselves more and more enthusiastic patrons of all true, manly sport. One of the latest evidences of the club's great interest in athletic matters is the announcement, now made for the first time, that an excellent base-ball nine is to be organized from among its members this Spring to play strictly amateur games, of especial local interest, during the summer, probably on Park avenue grounds.

A game of in-door base-ball, such as has been played so successfully this winter at the Seventh Regiment Armory in New York, has been arranged between the club and the Crescent League for Thursday evening, March 19, in the Crescent.

Other interesting sporting events are promised.

At the annual meeting of the club Monday evening, officers were elected as follows:

President—Thomas A. Burr.
Vice President—Daniel C. Adams.
Secretary—D. H. Lenox.
Treasurer—Roger F. Murray.
Trustees—Dr. J. H. Cooley, Robinson Pound, J. H. Hallock, A. L. C. Marsh, Townsend Bushmore.

A. Y. M. C. A. SYMPOSIUM.

Thirteen Plainfield Delegates Tell of the State Convention.

A large number of young men gathered in the Y. M. C. A. rooms last Sunday, to hear the reports of the delegates to the Young Men's Christian Association State Convention at Trenton. Thirteen of the sixteen delegates who were present at the convention took part in the services.

William Thompson was impressed with the personnel of the workers and the earnestness manifested by them.

Warren Randolph spoke of the good he had received and was thankful that he had been permitted to attend.

John Whiting spoke of the good boys can do among their associates over whom they have so much influence for good or evil.

C. T. Kissam spoke of a Young Men's Christian Association building as a good place to invest money. He spoke of the growth of the Association in the State during the past year in activity, spirituality and results.

Stephen Canoone told of the State work and explained to some extent the province of the State Committee.

Mr. LaBoyteaux spoke particularly of the success of the two Sunday services in which he had been particularly interested.

Mr. Murray said that he had been privileged to attend six of these State Conventions and that he always anticipated them with much pleasure. He spoke of the greater privilege of attending the Conference for Bible study at Northfield.

George Beebe spoke of the Conference for Bible study. He gave five reasons why we should study the Bible: First. To know Christ. Second, For Christian growth. Third, To obtain faith by contact with Christians. Fourth, As a Christian worker. Fifth, To help us towards Heaven. He said we should write down any truth we should discover that would help others, and so let all receive benefit from it. He considered it a great privilege to stand up in a meeting and testify for Christ, and let other people know of his joy and happiness.

James Murray described the special meeting of prayer for delegates and members of the Trenton Association, held Sunday morning before the church services, and also the mass-meeting held in the Opera House.

A Birthday Cake Strewn With Rose Buds.

A very pleasant event was the reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Minturn Smith, 117 Madison avenue, last evening. The occasion was the fifteenth birthday anniversary of their son Clarence. The classes of Mr. Smith and John M. MacNaughton, from the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school, were present, and a royal entertainment was accorded to all the guests. The evening was very pleasantly spent in games and merry-making, with CONVERSATIONAL INTERLUDES.

Prestidigitateur Waring furnished an abundance of fun. The birthday cake of Master Smith was adorned with fifteen rose buds, in very pretty token of the day, and of the fact that in earlier years "Rose Bud" was his nickname.

New Officers of the Young People's League.

The following officers of the Young People's League of the First Baptist church, were elected last evening:

President—L. H. Bigelow, Jr.
First Vice President and Chairman Devotional Committee—Chas. A. Lee.
Chairman Invitation and Reception Committee—Geo. H. Batchelder.
Chairman Lookout Committee—William Thickstun.
Chairman Visitation Committee—Miss Florence Marsh.
Chairman Social Committee—L. Warren Randolph.
Secretary and Treasurer—Miss Laura Runyon.
Director of the "Boys' Club,"—L. H. Bigelow, Jr.

The year just closed has been the most successful in the history of the League. Nearly 70 conversions were reported and the membership has more than doubled.

Carelessness That is a Crime.

C. E. Buell, Chief Clerk in the Bureau of Religious Statistics of the National Census, located in this city, slipped on a piece of orange peel the other evening, fell to the sidewalk and so strained the ligaments of his leg that he is laid up. Would there were some way of convicting every person who throws slippery peelings on the sidewalk, and some penalty therefore that would fit the crime.

Pleasant to the taste, surprisingly quick in effect, and economical in price—no wonder that Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is the leading preparation of its kind.

"Oh! woman, in thy hours of ease, uncertain, coy, and hard to please." With children hurt, long hours she's spent. Do try Salvation Oil, the liniment.

—Ladies can find just what they want at Peck's.

I WAS troubled with catarrh for seven years previous to commencing the use of Ely's Cream Balm. It has done for me what other so-called cures have failed to do. Since the use of the Balm seemed magical. Clarence D. Mull, Biddeford, Me.

AFTER trying many remedies for catarrh during past twelve years, I tried Ely's Cream Balm with complete success. It is over a year since I stopped using it and have had no return of catarrh. I recommend it to all my friends.—Milton T. Palm, Reading, Pa.

SUBURBAN SPRING ELECTIONS.

REPUBLICANS FIND THEIR USUAL MAJORITIES GREATLY REDUCED.

A Pretty Race for Officers Over the Brook.—Slater Gives Place, for Mayor, the Closest Kind of a Rub.—Collector Spencer Still Holding up Big Figures.

The neighborhood elections yesterday were very quiet affairs. The victories were Republican, as usual, but the Democrats did some very creditable cutting down of old-time majorities, and during the day the outlook was very encouraging for Democratic success. For a North Plainfield election, yesterday's race for office was a very tight one. The feature of the Borough contest was Fred. Slater's splendid run for the Mayoralty. Newton Spencer showed himself to be just as popular and successful a worker as ever, and rolled up a big majority where others of his party barely got elected. When the hour for closing the Borough polls arrived there were seven belated ones who had to be refused the privilege of casting their ballots. The count in the Borough was not completed till half-past four o'clock this morning. The official figures of the returns are as follows:

He Comes to Stir America to Voice Her Detestation.

A Boston paper says of Sergius Stepniak, who is to lecture at The Cásino, tomorrow evening, that the indictment of wicked and remorseless tyranny which he brings against the Russian government is tremendous in its force. The story which he has come hither to tell, is told without ornament, without striving after effect, without an effort to do anything but to impress the bald facts on the minds of his hearers. The man's manner, the tone of his voice, the straightforward simplicity of his style, and the cold, calm precision with which he heaps testimony upon testimony, always leaving the impression of an unlimited reserve to be drawn upon if occasion should call for it, are all so many evidences of his sincerity, and of the underlying truth of his statements.

He has come hither to mould public opinion and to enlist it against the awful horrors of Russian oppression; an oppression almost incredible in this civilized age; an oppression unsurpassed in its intensity and its callous heartlessness by any that the world has known. It is to be hoped that he may stir this country to voice its detestation of the rule of the Czar in such tones of thunder that they may be heard even in the most secret recesses in which the autocrat of all the Russias conceals himself from the resentment of the people he oppresses. Russian rule is a disgrace to the era in which we live; and if the civilized world were to league together in order to crumble it into irretrievable ruin, the darkest blot on the nineteenth century would disappear. Stepniak represents humanity as against the cruelest form of arbitrary power. May his mission be successful, and humanity breathe the freer for it.

Getting Nearer Plainfield Again.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, began a series of revival services at Bloomfield last Monday night. The meetings will continue one week, and will be held in the various churches. Great preparations were made to receive him. A choir of sixty voices, under the leadership of Theodore H. Ward, are one of the attractions at the meetings.

SEWERAGE FOR PLAINFIELD NOW ASSURED.

[Special to THE DAILY PRESS.]

TRENTON, March 11.—The act called the "Plainfield Sewer Bill," which THE PRESS and the "Big Six" of the Council have been fighting for in the interests of the people, has passed the Senate and gone to the Governor for his signature.

THE SAFETY BRAKES WORKED.

A Train Breaks Apart and the Rear Cars Stop Then and There.

The passengers aboard the 5 o'clock P. M. West-bound express train on the Central Railroad of New Jersey from New York to this city, Monday afternoon were treated to an experience. Drawing four comfortably crowded passenger coaches and a baggage car, locomotive No. 372 jowled along through Jersey City and Bayonne at the rate of forty-five miles an hour. As the train neared the East Twenty-second street (Centreville) station a series of sudden jolts was felt and the front drawhead of the forward coach was drawn from its fastenings.

The train had hardly parted before the automatic safety brakes caused the four rear cars to stop suddenly with a shock that gave the passengers a rousing shaking up and almost dislocated their bones. The locomotive and baggage car sped forward about 200 yards, and were brought to a stop in front of the station.

After the passengers in the forward coach were transferred to the other cars, and the coach was shunted upon a siding, the train proceeded. The accident delayed traffic over the road a half an hour.

The Monhegan Island Library.

The number of Plainfield citizens who have been active in starting the "Monhegan Library" and who are still interested in its success, will find the following report by Mrs. Cox very gratifying:

More than three years have passed since an effort was begun by a few friends interested in the beautiful Island of Monhegan, Me., to establish a library for the excellent people of the island.

The "ten cent" (10c) system, so successful in many places, it was hoped might be ample to secure a fair number of books and a room or small building to contain them and from which they could be distributed. After much effort however, this plan proved an entire failure, so small was the amount of money received. Books were generously sent every year and contributions received in money from personal friends and others. Last Summer the number of books had so increased that it seemed impossible to find on the Island a room or even large closet that could be spared, in which to keep them. Our faithful Librarian came to the rescue and offered us a corner in her neat little sitting-room for a book-case. This has been purchased and placed there, and is nearly full of books, and under the care and supervision of the Librarian, Mrs. Hattie M. Davis, the book-case has been paid for and a small surplus remains which will be spent in the interest of the Island. We hope in a building, be it ever so small. Mrs. Catharine Davis, one of the oldest residents there, and one of the "Salt of the Earth," has promised the Library a building site, as soon as funds are sufficient to complete it. Meantime, we rejoice in the possession of the book-case, with nearly five hundred volumes of good reading matter, and if our efforts have only this result, we are glad and grateful to have accomplished so much. We heartily thank every one who has sent either books or money to the Monhegan Library. During the first year we could ascertain the names of those who contributed and thanked them in the first report. We have no way of ascertaining to whom we are indebted for three boxes of books which were received a year since, but are most grateful. We are happy to record the fact that the number of books read on the Island increases every year, and that the usefulness and popularity and enjoyment of the Library is no longer a question. Last Summer more books were loaned than ever before.

We still hope to secure money sufficient, although the prospect is not encouraging, to erect a small building on the site which Mrs. Davis has given us, that the books may have a permanent place on the Island, be a comfort and satisfaction to the people there and to all interested.

ANN J. COX.

Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 13, 1891.

Model Motive Power.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company has recently placed in service on its fast trains that fly through this city, between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, three new engines which are doubtless the finest and fastest ever built in this country. These new flyers have driving wheels six feet, six inches high and cylinders 20 inches by 24. The large cylinders give them tremendous power and the high drivers protect the machinery from the rack and strain incident to driving smaller engines at great speed. There is practically no limit to the speed to which these new marvels may be driven, and they skim over the rails as smoothly as a swallow over a lake.

Another recent addition to the motive power of the company is a consignment of eight powerful, ten-wheel passenger engines, designed for service on the mountain divisions. These are the heaviest ten-wheel engines ever constructed, weighing sixty-seven and one-half tons. They have driving wheels six feet two inches high and cylinders 21 inches by 26. One of these machines performs the work heretofore requiring two of the ordinary class and they take the heavy through express trains up the mountain grades quickly and with perfect ease.

The Mt. Clare shops of the company have recently completed an order for ten switch engines of the highest type, and sufficiently powerful to make up a train equal to the full drawing power of a consolidation freight engine. Also three new heavy eight-wheel passenger engines, having driving wheels five feet eight inches, and cylinders 20 inches by 24. These engines are now doing excellent work; they are very powerful and susceptible of great speed.

In addition to the foregoing the company has now under construction at its Mt. Clare shops ten powerful ten-wheel engines designed for fast freight service and for heavy passenger trains on occasion, also twelve consolidation freight engines of great power.

These additions to its motive power are in line with the other great improvements constantly being made in the general betterment of the B. & O. property by its present management, which have been noted by the press from time to time, and the rapid augmentation of the passenger traffic of the company indicates that the public is quick to recognize the present and constantly increasing efficiency of its train service.

Apoplexy Caused His Death.

The old man who was found unconscious in front of 357 West Twenty-second street, New York city, Saturday night, with a letter signed by W. D. Murray, of this city, in his pocket, died at the New York Hospital Monday afternoon. He was identified as Edward T. McDermott, a clerk in the law office of Lockwood & Hill at 132 Nassau street. The hospital authorities say that he was subject to fainting fits and that apoplexy was the cause of his death.

Can Anyone Explain the Significance of This?

[From The Brooklyn Eagle.]

A Bostonian who heard one of the rehearsals for "The Redemption," in Brooklyn, the other night, says that if they had such a chorus in Boston they would be unable to get inside of the big Music hall. This is flattering, and it shows that Brooklyn has gone one step farther than Plainfield, N. J.

LIP-RING WEARERS.

A Grotesque and Repulsive Custom Among the Mangania Women.

It is a very curious study to note the variety of feminine ornamentation in the different nations, and how what may be considered as a beautifier by one race becomes a positive monstrosity and deformity in the eyes of another.

One of the most curious decorations in the world is adopted by the women of the Mangania tribe, inhabiting a country in Africa near one of the northern tributaries of the Zambesi. It is called the "pelele." This is a ring, but but it is fixed neither in the ear nor the nose, as with other races, but in the upper lip. It is a ring made of ivory, metal or bamboo, according to the wealth of the wearer; is nearly an inch in thickness, and varies in diameter at the will of the wearer, many being nearly three inches in diameter from outer edge to edge.

When the girls are very young they have the lip pierced with two holes close to the nose, and a small wooden peg inserted to keep the wound from closing. When the wound heals two small holes are left in the lip, into which larger pegs are successively introduced until in about two years the full-sized "pelele" can be worn. Its effect, when worn, is indescribable.

When at rest it hangs down over the mouth; when food is taken it projects horizontally, like a small shelf, and when the dusky maiden smiles upon her admirer it elevates itself, turning upside down until its lower edge rests against the bridge of the nose, the tip of the nose appearing through the center, and the eyes looking round each side, writes W. R. Pond, in the Ladies' Home Journal. As the teeth are generally filed to sharp points, until they resemble those of a crocodile, the effect may be better imagined than described. Chikanda Kadze, wife of the great chief, had a "pelele" that hung below her chin.

The origin of this horrible ornament (?) is unknown, and the reasons given for it are amusing, the natives saying: "What kind of a creature would a woman be without a 'pelele?' She would have a mouth like a man and no beard to cover it."

In different districts it varies slightly in shape, being cylindrical, instead of round; or like a flat dish, instead of a ring.

Popular Songs Die Quickly.

At every music hall from twenty to thirty songs, or even more, will be sung in the course of the evening, and of all these perhaps two or three in the year will catch the popular favor, be played on barrel organs, whistled by street boys, adapted for burlesques and pantomines, and overrun the entire country in a marvelously short time, until it palls upon the very villagers. Some fifteen years ago, for example, it was impossible to go anywhere in the United Kingdom without hearing a certain Tommy being vocally adjured to make room for his uncle, writes F. Nisley, the English novelist in Harper's. It would be curious to resuscitate Tommy and his uncle now and see how much success they would obtain with the public of to-day. The tune was irresistibly catching, but it would probably fall on deaf ears now. No superannuated thing is so utterly dead and forgotten as a once popular music-hall song, compared to which Jonah's gourd was a hardy annual.

A Maltese Dog.

A rival to the Maltese cat is the Maltese dog, an irresistible bit of canine beauty which comes straight from the Paris kennels. His mistress, a Washington belle, who has just returned from abroad, considers him the most valuable prize she has secured during her wanderings. He has been dubbed Marquis, and is thoroughly French from the top of his curly white head to the tip of his snowy tail. Spoken to in French he becomes a most obedient dog, but his knowledge of English is at present very limited.

BECKENHAM WYTHE.

The Melancholy Story of a Very Miserable Man.

BECKENHAM WYTHE was a miserable man. It was his freely expressed opinion that he was the most miserable man on the face of the earth since the days of old Job. Not that he was troubled with boils, or anything of that sort. Boils would have been blessings to what he was obliged to endure! He said so, and nothing made him more angry than for some rudely unsympathetic person to express a doubt concerning his wretched condition. His troubles were not of a physical nature; he could have endured anything of that sort and always worn a smiling face. He said his misery was of a mental character; still it made him excited to tell him it was all in his mind.

Had you met Beckenham Wythe on the street, you would have seen at a glance that he was a miserable man. He did not wear crape, but he did wear the most dejected countenance ever seen on human being. The pensive look in his eyes denoted sorrow, the drooping corners of his mouth denoted melancholy, the downward twist of his short, red mustache denoted woe, the sharp point of his chin denoted a piercing grief, the staggering cast of his thin nose denoted shattered hopes, and the wild disorder of his long hair gave him an aspect of utter despair. Even about his clothes there was an air of misery; and still he was a tailor! He was always followed by a most wretched-looking dog, that sneaked along with its head down and its tail between its legs, and seemed to be continually regretful it was alive.

People carefully turned out for Mr. Wythe upon the street and shivered as he passed, or looked after him with sad sympathy. People who were laughing stopped with remarkable suddenness when their eyes fell upon him; children avoided him; and—excepting his own wretched cur—even the dogs shied away from him and growled. Whenever he entered a pleasant room, he brought a cloud with him that shut out the sunshine, and it was little short of torture to listen to the melancholy droning of his voice. It was torture if one was forced to endure it a great while.

Mr. Wythe was shunned in the house where he boarded, and Mrs. Spriggs, the landlady, said she would not keep him if he were not such remarkably good pay, and did not stay in his room so much when he was at the house. He seldom spoke of anything but his own misery, and the most trivial things added to the mountain of woe beneath which he was buried.

Now, Beckenham Wythe was a man who had soured on women as on everything else. It was little wonder, for women are not usually attracted to such woebegone beings as Mr. Wythe, and they were not apt to return smiling glances for his sour ones. The women and girls who worked for him in his little shop usually had as little to say to him as possible, and he repaid them by only speaking to them in an unusually unpleasant manner—as if his customary manner were not bad enough!

Next to Mr. Wythe's boarding-house stood a little white cottage which had been purchased by a widow. The widow seemed to be an exception to the usual run of women, for she sat at the window and smiled at Beckenham as he passed with his dog skulking along at his heels. At first he paid no attention to it, but the widow persisted, and he was obliged to notice her after a time. But he thought she was making sport of him, and he returned her smiles with his most sour glances. Still the widow was not daunted, for she retained her position at the window and continued to smile upon him.

"Homely old thing!" exclaimed Mr. Wythe to himself. "Skinny neck and corkscrew curls! Still she has a remarkably fine set of teeth, and she shows them in a really bewitching manner."

Poor, unsophisticated Beckenham! He never thought to question the genuineness of the widow's particular charm.

The widow's courage was wonderful, for during four long weeks she never failed to be at the window day by day when Mr. Wythe passed, and she continued to swap her smiles for his sour looks. It was not long before he found himself unable to pass the little white cottage without looking for the widow, and, although he did not know it, he would have been terribly disappointed if she had failed to be at her post by the window.

The widow had a pet cat that was destined to add a still greater misery to Beckenham Wythe's life. One day his dog pursued the cat till it ran up a tree. Instantly the widow appeared in the greatest concern for the safety of her pet. She rushed out at the door, crying shrilly to the dog:

"Go way, sir, go way! Oh, he will kill poor Pansy! Shoo! Go way!"

She picked up a small stone and threw it at the dog, but, with the usual accuracy of a woman, she managed to hit Mr. Wythe on the leg. Beckenham was not a man given to profanity, so he did not swear, but he lifted up his foot and said over something, while he hopped about on the other foot. It was really a comical sight, and it was little wonder that the widow tittered as she apologized. But the injured man made no reply. Calling his dog, he moved away down the street, limping slightly, and looking more miserable and dejected than usual.

For several days after this, Beckenham did not glance toward the widow's cottage as he passed, but when he did venture to steal a look toward it, he found the widow at the window smiling upon him as before. However, he fancied there was a regretful sadness about her smile.

"She's not such a very bad-looking woman after all," he told himself. "Indeed, the more I see of her the better she looks. She has a plump figure, for all of that thin neck. She might make a good wife for some man, but a man with so many troubles as fall to my wretched lot has no right to get married."

And for several days after arriving at this decision, he was still more dejected than ever, if such a thing were possible.

One day as he was passing the cottage, the widow came running round the corner and caught him by the arm in the greatest excitement.

"Oh, sir, do come quick!" she cried. "She has fallen into the water and is drowning! You must save her! Quick, or it will be too late!"

"Some one drowning?" exclaimed Beckenham, the natural chivalry of his nature aroused. "Lead the way! I will save her, or perish in the attempt!"

He followed the widow around the cottage till they came to a hogshead, half sunken in the ground, and used for the purpose of catching rain-water to use for washing purposes. The hogshead was half full of water, and in the water the widow's pet kitten was swimming round and round, vainly seeking to escape.

Beckenham uttered an exclamation of amazement and disgust.

"Is that what you want me to rescue?" he demanded.

"Oh, yes, yes!" replied the widow, clasping her hands in agony, and looking at him appealingly. "Save her, and I will do any thing in my power to repay you—any thing!"

He could not resist such an appeal as that, so he hung himself over the side of the hogshead and reached down for the kitten. In some way he lost his balance and fell into the water head first. Then the widow showed her heroism, for she caught him by the heels and dragged him out. He had seized the unfortunate kitten, and clung to the nearly drowned creature as he stood up and gasped for breath, looking more miserable than ever before in all his life. Finally he managed to gurgle:

"H-H-HERE 'SHORE-C-C-CONFOUNDED CAT!"

"H-h-here 'shore c-c-c-confounded cat!"

She clasped the dripping kitten to her breast, and thanked him again and again so effusively, and expressed such regret for what had happened, that his anger disappeared, and he came nearer smiling than he had for ten years.

It was about two weeks after this that Mr. Wythe acted so strangely that his assistant cutter ventured to ask him what the matter was. Beckenham drew him aside and whispered in a very confidential manner, but loud enough for every one in the shop to hear him, that he was engaged to be married. This proved a thunderbolt for those who knew him, and they wondered who it could be he was going to marry, but he made no bones of telling she was a widow, and a very plump and handsome one at that. For all of the happy prospect, Beckenham did not lose his air of melancholy, although his appearance of dejection seemed to pass away in a measure.

At length the wedding occurred, but the very next morning after the event Beckenham appeared at the shop, looking ten-fold more miserable and wretched than ever before in all his life. When his cutter asked him the cause of the sudden and unexpected change, he confided to him that his "plump and handsome" wife had literally "taken herself all to pieces," from her false teeth and hair, to the padding that gave her the plump appearance. The shock had quite unnerved him, and he was tortured by the suspicion that she had thrown the kitten into the hogshead of water for the express purpose of tolling him into her clever matrimonial trap, which she had baited with smiles.

"He is happy again," said the cutter, aside, "for he has now acquired a genuine misery that will be continually with him."—Yankee Blade.

—That Was Why He Left—Trivvet—"Are you still boarding at Widow Small's?" Dicer—"No. I have left." Trivvet—"Is that so? I thought you said she promised to treat you as one of the family." Dicer—"That was the trouble. She did."—Inter Ocean.

"You should learn some trade, my son," said Mr. Manhattan Beach to his young hopeful. "Bricklayers are getting three dollars and a half a day, while lawyers can't afford to ride on the street cars."

"Pa, why didn't you learn a trade when you were a boy?"

"That's not only silly, but also an impertinent question. I didn't learn a trade when I was a boy out of regard for your feelings. I wanted to give you an opportunity to say that your father was a gentleman."

"It can't be helped now," replied the boy, moodily, "but I wish you had consulted me, for if we had arranged for you to be a bricklayer, I could have been the gentleman myself."—Texas Siftings.

Fellow Feeling.

It was evident that Hungry Higgins was taking a literary as well as alimentary interest in the scrap of newspaper that held his "hand-out" of cold buckwheats and yesterday's boiled beef. He remained silent and absorbed so long a time that his blase and cosmopolitan companion, Weary Watkins, was moved to inquire: "Watcher readin', Hungry?" "'Nother cashier skipped out. Same old story. THE GIRLS STRIKE

Two Hundred March Out of the Clark Thread Mills.

REASONS FOR THEIR ACTION.

They Refuse to Handle Goods Prepared by Non-Union Hands.

Important Convention of Miners Called. The Eight-Hour Day to be Considered. Weavers Quit Work on Account of the Discharge of a Delegate—The Cloakmakers Held Without Bail.

NEWARK, N. J., March 12.—In anticipation of the closing down of No. 3 mill of the Clark Thread Company in Kearney, 100 girls, who were employed at twisting, stopped work and went out on strike at 9 o'clock.

The girls, as usual, had repaired to their respective department at 8 o'clock, carrying their lunch baskets, and to all appearances ready to proceed with their day's labor. One hour later, however, word was sent along the entire line from the chairman of the Woman's Association ordering the girls to stop work at once and leave the mill.

The order was prepared for, and within 10 minutes of the message a company of at least 100 young women passed through the gates of the mill, formed into line on Passaic avenue, and, with waving of handkerchiefs and shouts of merriment, passed over the Clay street bridge to No. 3 mill in Ogden street on the Newark side of the Passaic River.

After parading up and down Ogden street for an hour or more, the girls returned to Kearney and held a special meeting in Ball's hall on Grant avenue. Here it was decided that the girls in Nos. 1, 2 and 4 should stop work to-day, in which event the entire industry of the Clark Thread Company will be brought to an end for the time being.

An important meeting of the striking girls and spinners will be held to-night in Ball's hall, the result of which will probably end in a general strike of the 3,000 employes who are still at work in the mills.

MINERS TO MEET.

Five States to Send Delegates to the Pittsburg Convention.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 12.—A call for one of the most important conventions of miners and operators ever held has been issued from the executive office of the United Mine Workers by Secretary P. A. McBride.

It calls a conference of miners and mine operators to meet in Pittsburg on April 7 to consult upon questions of wages, etc.

The near approach of the time when by resolution of the miners in convention last month the eight-hour day is to be everywhere demanded makes it of far more than usual interest. Miners from Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Indiana and Illinois will be represented.

Railroad Employes Suspended.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 12.—Over fifty men, employed by the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad Company in its general offices on the main line and Pemicky road, have been temporarily suspended. The cause of those dismissals is said by the officials to be the coke strike, which has reduced the road's enormous traffic to small local haulage.

The Rioting Cloakmakers Held.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Joseph Baroness and the eleven other striking cloakmakers who were arrested by Inspector Byrnes' detectives on suspicion of complicity in the attack on a non-union shop at Jamaica, L. I., were held without bail for examination.

SIMMONS FOUND GUILTY.

The Verdict a Terrible Surprise to the Wealthy Bank Wrecker.

NEW YORK, March 12.—James A. Simmons, the bank wrecker, was convicted on the first of the five indictments against him by a jury in the United States Court last night, and with this conviction ends the last of the criminal cases that grew out of the downfall of three banks of this city a year ago last winter.

The verdict was a terrible surprise to the wealthy prisoner, and he plainly showed his agitation when the verdict was announced at 11 o'clock last night. The jury had been out since 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

The verdict finds the prisoner guilty of the first count, which charged Simmons with aiding and abetting P. J. Claasen in embezzling $623,000 in bonds of the Sixth National Bank.

The prisoner was remanded to await sentence. An appeal will probably be taken.

BIG FIRE IN PITTSBURG.

Two Large Buildings Burned at Midnight With a Loss of $300,000.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 12.—The Germania Bank building, on the southwest corner of Diamond and Wood streets, and the Weldin building, on the northwest corner of the same streets, were burned at midnight.

The Germania building is occupied by the Chamber of Commerce, R. G. Dun & Co., Rea Brothers & Co., bankers and brokers; the Mutual Union Telegraph Co., and several other offices. The total loss from the fire will reach at least $300,000.

At one time the two blocks on either side of Diamond street were threatened, and it was with great difficulty that the fire was gotten under control.

About two years ago the Weldin building was crushed in by the Willey building, then being erected, and 18 people were killed. The Weldin building had just lately been completed.

CORBIN DENIES IT.

He Will Not Establish a Five-Day Line of Steamships.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Referring to the article to the effect that he was about to establish a five-day line of steamships between Montauk Point and Milford Haven, Mr. Corbin makes the following statement:

"There is no truth whatever contained in the article. It was entirely unauthorized. I have had no interview with anybody in connection with the matter, and can see no reason for the publication except a desire to secure some free advertising for the paper."

TRENTON, N. J., March 12.—Some of the results of the town elections are as follows: Orange went Democratic; South Orange elected the Citizens' Reform ticket; West Orange's ticket is non-partisan; the same is true of East Orange. The Democrats carried Ocean Township; the Republican ticket was successful at Asbury Park; the Democrats won at Atlantic City; Cape May elected a Democratic mayor; the Republicans carried Camden; the Citizens' party elected their ticket at Bound Brook; North Plainfield was carried by the Republicans.

Driven to Work by White Caps.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., March 12.—Pedestrians had their attention attracted yesterday by a genuine White Cap notice which was tacked onto the house of Eugene Hartwell. It stated briefly that if he did not go to work within the week and support his family he would have to stand the consequences. Hartwell has not worked for nearly two months, and his family is a large one, consisting of a wife and six children. He has started to work again.

BLAINE IS SILENT

Salisbury's Terms of Arbitration Not Yet Accepted.

CHANGES MAY BE NECESSARY.

Bismarck or Carnot Said to be the Only Available Arbitrators.

Hon. Jerry Simpson Talks to a Thousand Farmers—The Presidnent Has Good Luck Shooting Ducks in Maryland—Changes Expected in the Treasury Department. Minister Swift's Successor.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Nothing could be learned at the State Department as to whether Secretary Blaine would accept the terms of arbitration set forth in the latest dispatch which he has received from Lord Salisbury in regard to the Behring Sea trouble. But that the outcome will be arbitration, no one doubts.

Mr. Blaine will, it is thought, endeavor to make some changes in the scheme which Lord Salisbury has embodied, but whether he is or is not successful in that effort arbitration will ensue.

Members of Congress who were spoken to about the matter expressed gratification at the prospect of a peaceful solution of what has been a difficult question to handle.

Who is to be the arbitrator? This is a question surrounded by more difficulties than are at first apparent. Existing complications between the crowned heads of the European monarchies embarrass the question of selection not a little.

Both sides would have accepted ex-Emperor Dom Pedro of Brazil had he retained full possession of his health and mental faculties, and his award as arbitrator would have been acquiesced in by both the United States and the government of Great Britain. The reigning sovereigns of Germany, Italy and Austria are more or less involved in alliances which make their services impossible. The president of the French republic or Prince Bismarck seem to be the only available arbitrators left.

FARMERS HEAR SIMPSON.

The Kansas Statesman Advocates Many Things at the Annapolis Meeting.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The monster mass meeting of the tillers of the soil of Maryland, held under the auspices of the Farmers' Alliance, at Annapolis, was a big affair.

More than 1,000 farmers were in Convention Hall when Hon. Jerry Simpson of Kansas made his address. He advocated reduction of the tariff, government railroads and abolition of the army and navy.

He denounced the press as being under subsidies; favored in income tax, if necessary, that would keep fortunes at $100,000. He spoke for two hours and was repeatedly cheered.

THE PRESIDENT'S LUCK.

He Shoots Six Ducks and is Elated Over His Success.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—President Harrison and his party were blessed with fairly good luck in duck shooting at Bengies Point, Md., during the day.

The President was in the blind from daylight until 2 p. m., and as a result of his patience shot six ducks. The other members of the party secured ten.

The President did not miss a shot and was much elated over his success.

Must Wait for His Salary.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Through some error, possibly in enrolling the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriations bill, the compensation of $3,000, which should have been provided for the superintendent of the free delivery system of the Postoffice Department, was omitted. The office, however, is mentioned in the bill, and the result will be that the superintendent will be without salary from July 1 until such time at the next session of Congress that a deficiency bill can be passed.

Brazil's Consulates.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—By a decree of the provisional government of Brazil the consulates of that country to the United States are divided into two classes; that of the consulate-general at New York, embracing the New England States, the Pacific coast and the Middle Atlantic States to the boundary of Maryland, and that of the consulate at Baltimore, all the other Atlantic and Gulf States from Maryland to Texas inclusive.

Minister Swift's Successor.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Politicians here familiar with the Senatorial situation in California predict that the contest will in some measure be simplified by the death of Minister Swift at Tokio. Friends of M. H. De Young will ask the President to appoint Mr. Estee to the vacancy at Tokio and thus clear the track for De Young to come to the Senate.

Mr. Huston's Return to Washington.

IT IS NOW LINGO'S TURN.

His Lawyers Make a Bitter Attack Upon Dr. Formad.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 12.—Counsel for the defence in the trial of Francis Lingo made a bitter attack upon Dr. Formad.

It was said in open court that threats had been made against him, and that abusive language had been used. These accusations were only mildly denied. During this, fortunately for Lingo, the jurymen were not in the room, else they might have looked upon it as a desperate effort on the part of Lingo's lawyers to gain a point, and might have been influenced against the defendant by its failure.

The cross-examination of Dr. Formad took such a wide scope that Judge Garrison was kept busy overruling questions. Technical questions were put, one after another, to Dr. Formad, but his evidence was not shaken.

Early in the afternoon session the Commonwealth rested its case, and Lawyer George Taylor made a brilliant opening speech. It was short, but the outline of the evidence he promised to produce was such as to intimate that he would prove an alibi for Lingo. When he finished, the first witness for the defence was called.

HORRIBLE DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

An Old Man Hacks His Wife With a Razor and Cuts His Own Throat.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 12.—Peter Hecker, a German, aged 63 years, living with his family on Central avenue, this city, slashed his wife with a razor last night so badly that her recovery is very doubtful. He then cut his own throat and expired in about half an hour.

The neighbors were startled by cries of "Help!" and when they reached the couple's apartment they found the wife lying across a chair. She was horribly hacked and cut, there being no less than 20 wounds on her body and head.

Search was made for the husband and he was found lying in a pool of blood on the bed room floor. The razor with which the deed was done lay at his side. He died a few minutes after he was found.

A quarrel over a matter of religion was the cause, the husband being angry because the wife went to a certain church.

SUICIDE OF A JUDGE.

Samuel N. Rockhill of Bordentown, N. J., Shoots Himself.

BORDENTOWN, N. J., March 12.—The tragic death of Justice Samuel N. Rockwell, one of the most prominent citizens of this place, has caused a general feeling of sadness.

Shortly after midnight a pistol shot was heard from his library and upon investigation the Judge was found lying dead upon the floor. Blood flowed from a ragged hole in his head in front of his right ear. In his hand was the pistol with which he had committed the deed.

Various causes are assigned for the suicide. Some of Judge Rochhill's friends attribute it to mental depression caused by Bright's disease. Others say that he had been in financial difficulties for some time, and this seems to be generally accepted as the true cause.

Judge Rockhill was a very popular man and had many friends. He was quartermaster of Washington Post, G. A. R., and representative of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of the United States.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., March 12.—Daniel Crowley, aged 23, of Elmira, N. Y., and Charles Rose, aged 25, employes of the Pennyod Iron Works in Pennsylvania, were killed at Blackstone last evening. RECONCILED AT LAST Prince Napoleon Receives His Son Victor.

A VERY AFFECTING INTERVIEW.

The Invalid Has a Relapse and His Family is Much Alarmed.

Children Buried Alive by the Falling Walls of a Synagogue—The Pope's Orders Obeyed by Archbishops—A Ship Wrecked and Fourteen Persons Drowned—Hon. Windthorst Believed to be Dying.

ROME, March 12.—A bulletin has just come from the sick room of Prince Napoleon, and states that the invalid's condition has undergone a change of a decidedly unsatisfactory character.

His fever has returned with increasing intensity, and the gravest apprehension is now felt by the family.

Owing to this dangerous condition, the family decided to make Prince Victor to his father's bedside. King Humbert had paved the way for this by using his good offices with both father and son.

Prince Napoleon urged no further objection to meeting and talking with Victor, and in a few moments the son was seated at the bedside of his dying father.

Victor controlled himself for a time, but his feelings quickly overcame him, and he burst into tears. He kissed his father repeatedly, and was utterly broken down.

Napoleon clasped his son's hands in his own, and said in a clear voice, "Oh, Marcel, Marcel." They were left alone for ten minutes.

CRUSHED IN THE RUINS.

The Walls and Roof of a Synagogue Collapse Without Warning.

LONDON, March 12.—A dispatch from Tunis gives an account of a dreadful disaster at a place called Mendel, in the vicinity of Cabes.

A children's service was in progress in the synagogue at that place, when, without warning, the walls of the building collapsed, and the roof fell to the floor with a crash that was heard all over the town.

Hundreds of people hastened to the spot to find that the whole congregation had been buried beneath the fallen walls and roof.

The shrieks of the struggling victims, held fast by the heavy beams, stones, etc., horrified the spectators, rendering them powerless for a moment to do anything toward rescuing the injured from their terrible position.

A few cool headed ones, however, took the lead and the work of extricating the victims began.

Within a short time 50 maimed and bleeding men, women and children were taken out and covered for, and four dead bodies, crushed out of all semblance to humanity, were removed to the deadhouse.

The number killed cannot be even approximately estimated. It is known that the building was crowded with people, and hundred of dead bodies must still be buried beneath the tons of debris not yet removed.

Obeyed the Vatican's Protest.

ROME, March 12.—One sign that there is no cessation of bitterness between the Vatican and the Quirinal is the opposition of the Pope to the proposed visit to King Humbert by the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, Austrian heir presumptive. This visit had been officially determined upon, when the Vatican sent an indignant protest to the Austrian court, and it is now stated the visit will not be made. This incident of Austrian subserviency to Papal influence has tended much to weaken the attachment of Italy to the Triple Alliance.

Trouble Expected in Berlin.

BRUSSELS, March 12.—There is great uneasiness in the lower quarter of the city over the passage of the House Suffrage bill. The Socialists are speaking more boldly than ever before. The Government is aware of the danger, and the troops are kept on the alert to deal with an insurrection, should one break out. Owing to the dulness of trade a large number of people are idle, and there are all the elements, on a smaller scale, for a Parisian revolution.

GEN. PALMER CHOSEN.

The Long Struggle for the Senatorship in Illinois is Ended.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 12.—True to their announcement Dr. Moore and Mr. Cockrell, Alliance members of the House, voted for General Palmer for United States Senator, and thus secured his election and broke the deadlock on the 154th ballot.

These two members issued an address in which they stated that being unable to elect A. J. Streeter, their candidate for Senator, they had decided to cast their votes for John M. Palmer, the Democratic candidate.

When the roll call was begun the Republicans did not answer to their names, but later acknowledged their presence and voted for Lindley.

Palmer received 103 votes, Lindley 100, Streeter 1. Taubenbeck voted for Streeter.

Palmer was then declared duly elected.

The most exciting scenes ever witnessed on a Representative floor followed.

When Taubenbeck voted for Streeter he dropped back in his chair and cried freely.

Fire bells and church bells all over the city were rung as soon as Palmer's election was made known, and on the public buildings and private houses flags were hoisted and bunting hung out.

Guns Fired for Palmer.

Don't Want to Leave Their Teacher.

A teacher up in a certain school not a hundred miles from Fourth street is paying the price of personal popularity in a way that is not at all to her liking or to her advantage as a teacher. It is examination time in the public schools now, and both teachers and children are doing their best to secure large promotion lists. But for some weeks past this teacher, who is young and pretty, has found her boys, who have been all the term models of diligence and enthusiasm, now growing indifferent in their work and utterly careless of advancement. Nothing Miss Blank could do, not even notifying the parents, seemed to make any difference. Finally, as one mother made remonstrance with her son, the cause of it all transpired. "Don't you want to be promoted, Freddie?" asked the mother.

Yes, Freddie did want to be promoted.

"Then why don't you study more for your examinations?" she asked.

"Because just this," said the boy. "We boys want to be promoted, but we want to stay with Miss Blank more. If Miss Blank could be promoted, too, we'd all go. But she won't, and we've talked about it and we've concluded that we'd rather stay with Miss Blank and not be promoted, than be promoted and have to leave her."

This is the kind of feeling that writers make poetry and romances out of: isn't it? And just think what a charming young woman Miss Blank must be to have a roomful of such devotion as that!

WHAT MORE CAN BE ASKED?

PLAINFIELD'S STREET RAILWAY COMPANY WILLING TO BE JUDGED BY ITS ENEMIES.

Pullman Vestibule Cars to Run With Noiseless Gearing Through Our Streets at Five Cents Fare for the Masses and Three Cents for School Teachers and Scholars.

At a meeting held last evening, at which were present President Smith and Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts and Spangenberg, the directors of the Plainfield Street Railway Company stated in detail what they proposed to do for this city in the way of electric transportation.

Said Director Riker, "We are willing to submit our system now running on Central and Washington avenues, Newark, to a verdict of its enemies. We only ask that the back files of the Newark papers be turned to and a list made of those who bitterly opposed us when our road was proposed, and made speeches at the mass meetings called to prevent its construction. Ask those very men today for their opinion—some of whom swore they would go through every court before our cars should run past their brownstone mansions—and we will desire no other endorsement.

"Our road—the Rapid Transit of Newark—is carrying 10,000 people a day, though it runs through what we were told were the 'back streets' of the city. Many of our regular customers walk blocks and cross lines of horse cars to travel on our electric cars, and during pleasant days and Summer evenings large numbers of old and young people ride over our five miles of track merely for recreation and pleasure."

The Plainfield Street Railway Company which asks for a franchise to construct, operate and maintain in this city the same system, is duly incorporated, the required $2,000 a mile is deposited with the State Treasurer, and the company is ready to put in the plant at once so as to secure some of this year's Summer traffic. At last evening's meeting the directors listened to the suggestions and demands of the councilmen present, as to what the people would desire. The company conceded all requests, as follows:

Throughout the route as already published in THE PRESS, the rails will be of the most improved character, with a double track on Front street.

Ornamental steel poles will be used and guard wires strung wherever electric light, telegraph or telephone wires cross the trolley wire. The poles will be erected between the sidewalk and curb.

Noiseless gearing will be used on the cars, and the latter will be built by the Pullman company, vestibuled, heated, and lighted by electricity. They shall be as handsome as the Newark cars which are of mahogany, with upholstered spring seats and richly decorated ceilings.

They will be run in the beginning according to the following schedule: 6 A. M. to 10 A. M., every 15 minutes; 10 A. M. to 3 P. M., every 30 minutes; 3 P. M. to 8 P. M., every 15 minutes; 8 P. M. to midnight, every 30 minutes. This headway is to be reduced as traffic demands.

The fare will be five cents at all hours for adults, and three cents for children between the ages of four and ten. School tickets for teachers and scholars will be sold at three cents each.

The minimum speed is to be six miles an hour, and the maximum, twelve miles.

Signs will be hung on the front platforms of the cars, designating their destination—whether Netherwood, Grant avenue or elsewhere.

The company will give a bond of $10,000 to faithfully fulfill all requirements and provisions above or hereafter agreed to, and to construct, maintain and operate the road accordingly.

The company agrees also to take down the poles and wires whenever a better system of running street cars by electricity shall be devised. In that event the company will abide by the decision of two experts selected one by the city and one by the company. In case these two cannot agree, they shall select a third to decide.

The company is to pay the city nothing for the first five years, but after five years $10 a car per annum, and after ten years $20 per car.

An ordinance is to be drawn up embodying all of the above requirements and provisions, and granting the franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company. The whole matter will be presented for action at a meeting of the Council, Friday evening of next week.

Getting Rid of the Tramps.

The tramps, who of late have been very troublesome in this neighborhood, will be chary of the place as soon as they hear that measures are being taken to make them useful to the community by putting them at manual labor.

Last night Police Captain Grant, with officers Cooney and Kiely, made a raid on a gang of the fellows who had taken possession of Simpson's barn on Washington street. They captured nine—the entire party. Before Justice Nash this morning the tramps gave the names of Geo. Raven, Frank Stevens, Geo. Brown, Edw. Splan, John Mitchell, Wm. Davis, Thos. Murphy, Geo. Frank and Thomas Riley. They were threatened with being put to work on the streets, with ball and chain on their legs, but this alarming prospect caused them to plead for clemency, and they were ordered to leave town inside of five minutes and never come back. They promised faithfully to stay away forever.

Here's Another Who Will Eventually Thank THE PRESS and Confess His Mistake.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I think it very kind of you to publish, in you Tuesday night's issue, the funny letter of "Pro Bono Publico" on the subject of street cars. It was very amusing and I have no doubt that it has caused a hearty laugh in many a home where THE PRESS is a welcome and entertaining visitor. However, the writer, who seems to be quite a humorist, should not try to simply ridicule the "trolley system," because I think he would much better prove his case by giving simple facts, such, for instance, as are combined in to-day's New York Times.

[Here follows a long newspaper story from Albany of something that probably never happened, but which our correspondent calls "simple facts," and goes on to say:]

The above extract will do more to convince the good people as to the dangers of the trolley system, than the biting sarcasm of "Pro Bono Publico."

You see by the above that I do not think your correspondent means what he says, because the letter contains so many statements which are neither facts nor worthy of serious consideration. I strongly suspect that "Bret Harte," or "Mark Twain," is the author of the humorous production headed, "Plainfield to be glorified," because I don't know anyone in our city who could write one of the most sarcastic communications which have ever appeared in your columns.

ONE WHO HAS NO AXE TO GRIND.

[If this correspondent will make a trip to Newark and take a ride over the Rapid Transit road on Central avenue and Washington, he can then speak understandingly of what Plainfield is to have. Newspaper stories of what happens in far off cities, are not "simple facts," and it is dishonest to be led by them into passing judgment on something one is ignorant of.—Ed.]

The Administrators Made Receivers Also

Chancellor McGill yesterday appointed Elias R. Pope and John W. Harrison, receivers of the real estate owned by Job Male at the time of his death. The former appointment of these same gentlemen was as administrators, in which office they have to do with the personal property. Now they have charge of the entire estate, real and personal.

—Code la Montanye died at his home on East Third street, after a prolonged illness, this afternoon.

—As sure as two and two make four, Peck has the choicest assortment of embroideries to be found.

For burns and wounds we would recommend Salvation Oil. All druggists sell it at 25 cents.

Many cases have come under our notice where a single bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup relieved a sufferer from a severe cough, which had been treated for months by competent physicians. 25 cents.

Murderer Fish Weeps Like a Child.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y., March 12.—After receiving the dispatch from Albany announcing the commutation of Frank Fish's sentence to life imprisonment, O. C. Armstrong, his lawyer, went to Auburn to break the news to the prisoner. Fish was completely overcome when he realized that his life had been spared and wept like a child. He has been put to work in the button shop.

An Alleged Case of Poisoning.

DANBURY, Conn., March 12.—Howard W. Croffut, 40 years old and married, was taken seriously ill last night and died shortly afterward. It is thought to be a case of poisoning and the coroner will hold an inquest.

The Atlantic City Electric Railway, Which is not so Fine in Any Respect as Plainfield's is to be, is an Entire Success.

The following letter is one of a number that will be published in these columns, received from just such sources all over the country:

DEAR SIR:—Your communication dated the 6th inst., received. Am happy to answer your questions as per your letter, as to our general experience.

1st.—Our road has been in operation since the Spring of 1889.

2nd.—As to profitableness we are now arranging to place more cars in service.

3rd.—Our system is known as the Sprague. It is not equal in any respect to the apparatus now on the market.

4th.—There is no danger to life with a 500 volt circuit. I have personally lifted a bare footed colored boy from the ground who was tangled up in some of our wires, the first season the road was in operation. The boy had the full benefit of all that the 500 volt circuit could do, and ran home without any ill results arising from his experience.

5th.—Our wires have never killed or injured, either man or beast.

6th.—Our cars and motors make no noise beyond that which is natural to the car itself, as we use wooden tooth gearing in the motors thus completely obviating the noise.

7th.—We have some sparking both from the car wheels and the trolley. Your query is the first intimation, to the writer's knowledge, that such a thing was objectionable, as there absolutely cannot be any danger from it. The cleaner the track and the better the contact between the wheels and rails the less the sparking. I might state that we have no sparking as long as the tracks are clean.

We have passed through the same opposition and possibly more, as you are now experiencing. We have found in every instance that our most persistent obstructionists are now our best patrons. Col. L. Perrine, Jr., of Trenton, N. J., President of the Trenton Horse Railroad Co., had very earnest opposition to his efforts in obtaining a franchise, and he had the entire City Councils come to Atlantic City, to inspect our road. He now has his franchise with permission to use overhead trolley wires throughout the city of Trenton.

We are entirely satisfied with the operation and business of our road. Our experience has been without exception that the objections raised by individuals against the adoption of electricity for railway work is due entirely to a lack of knowledge on their part.

We have personally visited and inspected roads operated by electricity in Boston, Mass, Lynn, Mass, Pittsburgh, Pa., Washington, D. C., Baltimore, Md., Kansas City, Mo., and several other places, and have found our experience repeated in every case. We trust that this letter will be a means of nullifying all objections.

I am, yours very truly,

W. E. HARRINGTON,
Managing Electrician, Atlantic City Electric Railway.

EMPLOYES DISSATISFIED.

New Rules of the United States Express Company Objected to.

Employes of the United States Express Company are in a state of mind over the new method adopted by the company for identifying the men in its service and putting them under bonds. The new rule went into effect March 1 and is said to be the result of the company's discovery that a certain Plainfield employe, who has since been discharged after making restitution, had for some time been guilty of systematic embezzlement. A description of each applicant must be prepared and signed by a superintendent or agent. It calls for the "height, weight, complexion, color of hair, color of eyes, kind of nose, what hair worn on face, color of hair on face, any particular marks or deformity by which applicant can be identified, and any other remarks by superintendent or agent as to appearance or antecedents, etc." Attached thereto must be a good photographic likeness of the applicant.

Heretofore bonds have generally been furnished, when required, by surety companies. Now no such bonds or personal bonds will be accepted. The express company is going to start an indemnity fund of its own to secure it against loss through employes. Into this fund employes will pay their insurance premiums. From time to time the company may distribute as a gratuity such sums from this fund as it sees fit. In directing the management of the fund, the company reserves complete power. The premiums range from $2 for three-hundred-dollar bonds to $6.75 for thousand-dollar bonds. The company says these rates are lower than those of surety companies.

Objection by the employes is made principally against the photograph clause. They fear the pictures will get into a sort of Rogues' Gallery. Old employes as well as new ones are subject to the rules.

Another new rule is that employes who carry valuables for the company must provide themselves constantly with revolvers as a measure of defense against theft.

I HAVE had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical, it allayed the inflammation and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing and pleasant, and I strongly urge its use by all sufferers.—GEO. TERRY, Little Falls, N. Y.

The Kind of a Man He Really Is.
(From The Horseman.)

Yes, one touch of nature makes the whole world kin, in everything. It even rules party in politics, as most strikingly demonstrated in Somerset county, New Jersey, a Republican stronghold, but recently carried by the Democrats, W. J. Keys, of South Branch, being at the head of the ticket, and he won the Senatorship away off. The new Senator is an old New Yorker, and in war times was in command of temporary forage stables, facing City Hall Square. He has a strong fancy for fine horses, and when he settled for a country life on the South Branch he called his place the Ellis Stock Farm, and gathered a choice collection of trotting stock within its confines. This name was given to the farm as a compliment to his wife, whose name was Ellis, she being a sister of the wealthy Philadelphia turf patron, Frank Ellis, who owned Nettle, 2.18.

When Mr. Keys came before the electors he had to meet, among other things, the grave charge of being a trotting-horse man, who had races on his track and pigeon-shoots on his grounds while church-going people were at their devotions; that he was a wine-bibber and a friend of publicans and sinners, and all that sort of thing.

In point of fact, he is not given to Sunday racing or week-day drinking, and is not fond of shooting, but always acts the part of a good, quiet citizen and a kind neighbor, ever ready to lend a helping hand in case of calamity or need. One of his neighbors died and the grief-stricken wife had nowhere to turn or look to for funeral arrangements. Neighbor Keys came and managed the last sad rites, bringing his carriages to convey the mourners to the grave.

Another neighbor's barn was struck by lightning and three of his horses killed. Mr. Keys was promptly there with words of cheer, and horses to lend his acquaintance, until he could collect his insurance money and buy others. Now both these neighbors were red-hot Republicans, but when the widow of the first heard of the unfair canvass she marshaled her female friends and went to the county seat, the town of Somerville, and they made a store to store canvass, bearing witness as to what sort of a man and neighbor W. J. Keys really is; and the other neighbor renounced his party for the nonce and voted for the man whose kind action had touched his heart.

Newspapers, as Viewed by a Plainfield Pastor.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, pastor of Plainfield's Seventh-Day Baptist church, in a recent issue of the denominational journal, The Outlook, which he edits, publishes the following editorial:

It has always been easy to make the Sunday paper attractive to the irreligious, non-church-going masses. It has been left for the Sunday Press of New York to mark the complete triumph of the Sunday paper, by calling to its aid the best religious talent in the city in which it is published. This has been accomplished by arranging for a series of religious articles, appearing on successive Sundays, from the pens of representative men in the various denominations. On Sunday morning, Dec. 14, 1890, the writer heard a prominent Baptist ask a newsdealer: "Have you a Press? I want to see why Dr. McArthur is a Baptist." It needs but short line of logic to show that it was right for that man to buy the Press on his way to church, if it was right for Dr. McArthur to tempt him thus by writing for it. The same is true of the people of each denomination in turn, and of religious people in general. If it is wrong to publish a Sunday paper, these clergymen are party to the crime. If they are not, the Sunday paper is right, and all outcry against it should be stopped. From this time forward, Baptists must not pass condemnatory resolutions nor indulge in strong rhetoric against that which their most truly representative man participates in. When Dr. Robinson's article appears, it must be taken as a "flag of truce" by the Presbyterians, and a cessation of hostilities on their part against what used to be the "supreme Sunday wickedness."

The bottom truth in the matter is this. there can be no standard for Sunday observance, because there is no authority for it outside of church custom and individual choice. If there be nothing more than this on which to found "Sabbath-keeping", everything must fall into the chaos of contradiction and ruin. And since the Bible knows nothing about the keeping of Sunday, it is quite right for the Press and its compeers to be published on Sunday, and for these reverend gentlemen to aid in that work. But when they consented to write the whole case was "given away", and when the Sunday paper is thus vouched for by the men of highest character and influence in these various denominations, all opposition to it, as such, must forever cease.

Even the saintly Mail and Express, with its horse-racing tips on one page, its "Sabbath Reform" matter on another, and its Scripture quotations at mast head, must be routed in the fight, when its degenerate rivals gain such allies as Abbott, McArthur, Huntington, and Robinson.

The settlement of the account with Jehovah, the Lord of the Sabbath (which these religious teachers, who claim to be guided by the Word of God rather than by the traditions of men, treat as though it had no rights they are bound to respect) is quite another and a more difficult affair. Now that they have settled the Sunday question as it ought to be settled, we invite them, in the name of the Lord of the Sabbath, to inquire after the truth concerning that day.

A SOLITARY PROHIBITION VOTE.

All Republicans Elected in Westfield, Except J. H. C. Marsh and C. R. Clark.

Westfield held its township election Tuesday. The committees of both parties had agreed upon $500 appropriation for the fire department, but the firemen issued a special ticket increasing the figures to $800, and the latter amount received a majority.

The result of the election for the offices was substantially as in recent years. There was a total of 261 Republican votes and 220 Democratic votes, and one Prohibition vote that contained only the name of A. K. Gale. The following were elected:

Charles R. Clark, Dem., township clerk; over Brown, Rep., by 31 majority.

John M. C. Marsh, Dem., assessor, 282 votes. No opposition.

A. K. Gale, Rep., collector, 119 majority over Bartine, Dem.

N. B. Gardner, Rep., town committeeman; 51 majority over Bushnell, Dem.

Chas. Farrington, Rep., fire commissioner; 48 majority over Kestor, Dem.

W. J. Cox, Rep., overseer of the poor; 100 majority over Robert Woodruff, Jr., Dem.

Thomas Folsom and William Schoonover, Reps., were elected surveyors of highways.

Joseph W. Cory and Oliver M. Pierson, Reps., were elected commissioners of appeal.

J. S. W. Whittke, Rep., was elected justice of the peace by one majority over John W. R. Bennett.

Condition of the Rescued Miners.

JEANESVILLE, Pa., March 12.—The condition of the rescued miners is such that the physician has allowed them all to get out of bed for the first time. Big Joe's eyes are considerably swollen and highly inflamed and it is with difficulty that he can see. Franko is badly troubled with rheumatism. Tomaskasky and Berno are doing well but none of the men have sufficient strength to do any walking.

The Mystery of the Swamp.

BALDWINS, L. I., March 12.—The authorities are making every effort to unravel the mystery surrounding the death of the unknown man found in the swamp at Millburn. The inquest was adjourned until March 24, and in the meantime efforts will be made to identify the man.

Preparing for the Veterans.

LANSING, Mich., March 12.—The House has passed the bill authorizing Detroit to raise $50,000 to entertain the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic next August. A bill asking for $50,000 additional from the State for the same purpose will be discussed March 19.

Obstinate Senators Compromise.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 12.—The Senate fight was settled, after 17 hours' contiuous battle, by a compromise. The compromise was that the Lieutenant-Governor could designate any member to act as president during his absence for one day, instead of two days, as at present.

A Newspaper Changes Hands.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March 12.—The sale of the Berkshire County Eagle to J. Howard, a prominent Republican of this city, is announced. The Eagle is the oldest paper in Berkshire County, and it will continue to be conducted as a Republican organ.

Her Wedding Gown Her Shroud.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 12.—Tortured by the fear that for the second time her wedding would be postponed, Tillie Lang, a 21-year-old girl, of Allegheny, last night took poison, and will be buried with her bridal gown for a shroud.

Leland's Long Branch Hotel Sold.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., March 12.—Leland's famous Ocean Hotel at Long Branch was sold at foreclosure sale for $68,075 to Col. Geo. W. Bliss of New York. The property is one of the finest along the coast.

Pitcher Keefe Refused the Offer.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Manager Mutrie offered Tim Keefe, the star pitcher, $3,500 to sign a contract to play with the Giants, but Keefe refused to sign for less than $4,500.

Amused and Content.

It is easy enough to awaken an American crowd from indifference or lethargy. In a ferry-boat the other day every one sat erect, looking stiff and severe, says the New York Tribune. The cabin was cold, and the look of disgust on the scores of faces deepened to one of hatred of all corporations. The boat was shaking heavily, and the chandeliers rattled like light artillery. There was a sharp crack, and one of the glass globes came flying through the air. A man thrust out both hands, and, with a quick and deft gesture, caught the whizzing glass just as it was about to be shattered to a thousand pieces on the cabin floor. "A good catch!" some one shouted. "Bravo," cried another, while a running fire of applause and hand-clapping went over the cabin that changed the situation entirely. A hum of laughter and conversation arose on the air. It lasted during the trip across the river. The crowd was all good nature and smiles. Some one had amused the people and they were content.

To Check Desertions.

It is well known in the Russian army that death follows desertion. A deserter was lately shot who got away a year ago and had traveled 4,000 miles. It cost the government over $3,000 to find him, but it would have paid $20,000 sooner than let him get away. Over 30,000 soldiers were assembled to see him shot.

A Scientific Problem.

One of the greatest problems of the future is thought to be the transformation of carbon energy into light upon the same principle that the glow-worm and fire-fly give their light, and when a single pound of combustible material will furnish as much light as a now obtained from a ton of coal.

Her Recitation.

"Miss Emersonia Osgoodson will now favor the company with a recitation," announced the teacher to the friends that had assembled in the school-room to enjoy the regular Friday afternoon exercises.

Little Miss Emersonia stood forth and recited as follows:

"Coruscate, corulgate, diminutive stellar orb!
How inexpliable to me seems the stupendous problem of thy existence!
Elevated to such an immeasurable distance in the illimitable depths of space apparently in a perpendicular direction from the terraqueous planet we occupy!
Resembling in the dazzling and unapproachable effulgence a crystalized carbon gem of surpassing brilliancy and impenetrability glittering in the ethereal vault whose boundless immensity we endeavor to bring within the compass of the human intellectual grasp by the use of the concrete term firmament!"

When the dear little Boston girl had finished reciting these touching lines in her rapt, soulful, Bostonian way and sat down there was a dry spectacle in the school-room.—Chicago Tribune.

A Cultured Appetite.

"Do you think you could manage a morsel of the turkey?" said he.

"Why, yes; but just a small piece, please.",

He started to trim off a delicate bit and asked: "Is there any part you would specially like, Miss S.?"

"Oh, well, I'm not particular," she answered, as she looked demuredly at her knife and fork. "Just give me a wing and a leg and a few slices off the breast, with a portion of the gizzard and a spoonful of dressing, and I'll reach the vegetables myself."—West Chester Local News.

Where to Apply.

"Excuse me," he said, as he entered the shop of a cobbler, "but I want to ask you the meaning of a word."

"Vhell?"

"The word is 'articulate.' Do you know what it means?"

"My frendt, where you get dose shoes?"

"At a shoe store on Woodward avenue."

"Vhell, you go right oafer by Woodward avenue und ask dot shoe store to articulate for you! Dat vhas me! Good-day!"—Detroit Free Press.

A SLIGHT CHANGE.

Irate Father—Now come right along with me. I'll allow no miserable book worm of a school-teacher to thrash a boy of mine. I'll teach him a lesson he won't forget for many days.

Father—Did you liak this boy of mine this morning?

Teacher (with angelic smile)—I did, sir.

Father—Well, I just came down to say I'm much obliged to you. You see I have an affection of the spine which has weakened me so that I am unable to give him the necessary chastisement when he needs it. Good-day.—Judge.

Lady—Why, what kind of a pick do you mean?

Tramp—A tooth-pick.—Boston Herald.

Of Course They Do.

Mrs. Tabby—Don't coarse expressions jar upon your nerves, Mrs. Gabb?

Mrs. Gabb—You bet they do.—Jury.

A STRONG NERVE!

Do you know the value of a strong nerve?

Do you remember the story of the aeronaut, who, when the safety valve at the top of the balloon would not work, boldly mounted the delicate netting step by step, swinging out over the vast swell of the madly thrashing balloon, hanging tooth and nail over the yawning abyss and raging sea below, until he closed the valve, stopped the escape of gas and made the airship rise again to safety?

It was nerve which saved him and his companion.

Would you have had the nerve to do it?

A THOUSAND TIMES NO!

You are strong enough in muscle, but your nerves are weak and shattered. You would have turned pale, your nerves would have trembled, relaxed and left you prostrate and powerless, not only in this, but in almost any other emergency.

You have courage enough but your nerve power is weak, exhausted, wastedly and unreliable.

You have used up your nerve strength by overwork, confinement, worry or dissipation, all out of proportion to your physical strength. That is why you look so well and feel so unutterably played out. You are weak without effort, tired without exertion; feel languid, spiritless, nerveless, have no ambition, energy or content. That is why you have restless, sleepless nights and wake mornings enervated, lifeless, tired. That is why you are at times gloomy and depressed, why your heart palpitates so easily, why you tremble at the least excitement and are ashamed at your lack of nerve even in trivial things. In the Spring these symptoms are always aggravated by spring debility.

You need a new nerve, for nerve strength is the real power of the body. IT IS THE MAINSPRING OF LIFE AND HEALTH.

How get it? Easily enough. Use Dr. Greene's Nervura, the greatest known restorer of nerve strength, the best brain invigorant, the most wonderful giver of strength, power and vigor to the weakened, run down and exhausted system. It is a purely vegetable and perfectly harmless remedy, and can be procured at all druggists at $1 per bottle. Get it, you who have weak nerves.

Ringing Words of Hope.

For eight years I have been constantly under the care of doctors, five years under eminent allopathic and three with homeopathic physicians, but found no relief, nor, from what the doctors told me, did I expect to get any better. I was convinced they did not understand my case, so I thought I would try Dr. Greene's Nervura, and the result has been truly wonderful. I now feel in better health than for the last twenty years. During all this time I have been suffering with Malaria, Heart Disease, Kidney and Liver complaints, nervous prostration and sleeplessness. "For the three months before taking Dr. Greene's Nervura I had been confined to my room, and most of the time to the bed." I feel, with the blessing of God Dr. Greene's Nervura has given me a new lease of life and health, and that I am cured of all my troubles. I have a great desire that others may be benefited as I have been, and take every opportunity to recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura to the sick.

...STYLISH WOMAN.

She Appears in Either of Two Varieties of Dress.

New Designs in Braiding Can Be Bought So Perfect in Design as to Deceive Beholders—Imitation Pattern Gowns—A Lesson in Color.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Gowns of two varieties are seen upon the streets. Gowns lively and gowns severe. The former are furbelowed as to the bodice and flounced as to the skirt, and are set off with natural flowers of the gaudiest variety. The latter are plain to the last degree of monotony in the waist and are so contracted in the skirt that the wearers justly complain that they run the risk of getting knees in their skirts.

The former are in all the new shades of green, violet and cafe-au-lait. The latter are in subdued tints of the old colors, wrought out in homespun or English tweed.

The former are worn by women with more money than position. The latter by those who regard severity in street costume as the sign mark of the Four Hundred.

A street dress which would, however, have been more appropriate as a driving gown was one of the new shades of warm, sympathetic brown. The skirt was a plain habit skirt with short demi-train. The bodice was very short on the hips and ended in a point in front. It was shirred at neck and waist. The bottom of the bodice was treated to a series of points which were outlined with gilt cord of the narrowest variety. The sleeves were very long and were finished by a deep fall of lace which covered the backs of a pair of gloves made to match the costume and stitched with gold cord.

An evening dress from the establishment of the same modiste was of white China silk made in precisely the same way, save that the neck was treated to a Medici collar, very high in the back of the neck and very low in front, and the sleeves were left short to the elbow, where they were met by white gloves stitched with gold to match the waist trimmings.

Dressmakers do not allow the lack of an embroidered or an embossed pattern upon the material to deter them in the matter of procuring the general effect of a pattern dress. With singular deftness they outline figures, either natural or conventional, upon the plain material, and then give them into the hands of an apprentice to be traced with narrow braiding, which either exactly matches the cloth or harmonizes well with it. Thus a costly effect is produced at low price.

In all the standard colors, pretty figures can be bought in braided designs ready to be sewed on. These are fine in material, well made, delicate in outline, and so nicely constructed that they will deceive even the closest observer who seeks to detect the machine-made article from the hand-wrought. A design sewed upon a black gown was of conventional roses with green leaves connected by a cobweb of lace in imitation of the imported pattern dresses which carry out that idea.

A lesson in color may not come amiss at a season when so many combination dresses are being planned. In all cases where figured or checked goods are to be combined with the plain material, let the groundwork of the checked goods correspond with the color of the plain. A brown felge cloth may be combined with a brown goods spotted with black, yellow, green or whatever color one may wish. But, mark you, a yellow material would not look well combined with a brown cloth dotted with yellow. If the groundwork of the principal material is brown, the groundwork of the novelty goods must also be brown, though it may be combined or dotted with specks or figures of whatever color is desired.

A certain otherwise pretty tea gown was spoiled for all but evening wear by a disregard of these rules of color. The woman selecting it, in ignorance of the law of prevailing harmony, chose a white challie with lavender figure and bought some black net to drape the front of the gown and for the sleeves. Thus a white groundwork was brought in direct juxtaposition with black draperies. The effect was so incongruous that the modiste to lessen it lined the black net with lavender challie, and ran half a dozen rows of lavender ribbon through the open meshes of the black net.

The effect was still incongruous during the day, but by gaslight it looked much better because a certain purple figure upon the lavender ground appeared black by artificial light.

To remedy this poorly selected combination, one of two things might have been done. Either the black net should have been replaced by white to match the general tone of the challie, or the challie should have been exchanged for one with a black ground and purple or lavender figures if desired. The ribbons might then have been of lavender and the general tone would have been in much better harmony.

This mistake is frequently seen and often accounts for the despairing cry which one hears from the possessor of a new gown: "I thought those two shades would combine well; I saw a gown of them last season and it was lovely."

Upon investigation it will generally be found that some law of combination has been violated to produce the ugly effect. Another thing not generally known is this: Many colors are pretty only when combined with another contrasting one, in limited quantities. Pink and blue, for example, make a pretty, accepted French combination. But with this rule the blue must predominate. A blue dress relieved by pink is chic and becoming. But how lurid and unpleasant is a pink dress trimmed with blue. All pink does beautifully. But get off with blue, Heaven forbid!

Cafe-au-lait relieved by brown is charming. But brown with cafe-au-lait trimming is insipid. A heliotrope tea gown with orange satin lilting and ribbons is unique, startling and fascinating. It was Bernhardt's own idea, carried out by herself, for a boudoir robe. But fancy the horror of an orange satin dress trimmed with heliotrope. Lavender and old rose kiss each other prettily. But never, oh never, must old rose and lavender be wooers.

WORTH DINNER GOWN.

The dowager robe at wedding breakfasts is no longer the regulation black or ruby velvet. A recent wedding saw the bride's mother dressed in olive plush with court train. A border of white Russian fox fur bordered the bottom of the skirt and outlined the low-cut bodice. Diamonds and emeralds formed the ornaments. White Suede gloves stitched with olive were worn.

Easter dresses are already planned. Women from previous experience have found the difficulty there is in finding a modiste to construct a gown the week or two preceding Easter Sunday. So a few of the wiser ones have taken time by the hand and are getting their Easter gowns made.

An exquisitely-planned church dress is as follows: The habit skirt and waist material are of gray and black silk in pin stripes. The skirt is of the plain material. The waist has a zouave jacket of gray cloth outlined with silver braid. The collar is gray with silver beading and the gray cuffs are edged with silver. With this gown is to be worn cut silver stick pins and girdle, and, also! oh, shame, that it should be planned thus deliberately! a prayer book and hymnal with the initials of the owner wrought out in cut silver. The general effect cannot but be pretty, quiet and in good taste.

Another Easter gown is in two shades of green nicely combined and is to be worn with a flower muff of red roses. The roses are of the natural sort, to be renewed at each wearing. The delicate little green toque which accompanies this is trimmed as to the front with seven red roses, arranged closely together to form a little pyramid just over the front locks. These roses must also be natural.

Why He Didn't.

Dry Doolan—Hurry up and give me a drink, barkeep. I haven't had one for six months.

Barkeeper—If you kept off as long as that, I wouldn't break through now.

Dry Doolan—Keep off? I had to keep off. I've had six months on the island, with "water, water, everywhere, but not a drop to drink."—Boston Herald.

Hard to Believe.

Mrs. Browning (of Boston) — Well, dear, how did you like Chicago?

Mr. Browning (just returned from Chicago)—Oh, I didn't like it. There's too much rustle and bustle there to suit me.

Mrs. Browning (quite shocked)—Bustle? Oh, horrors! haven't they discarded those vulgar things yet?—Judge.

A Matter of Taste.

Tom Knox—You seem to have a great liking for the single eyeglass, Hoffy.

Hoffman Howes—Aw—ya'as; the double ones make a man look so owlish, ye know!

Tom Knox—Then you prefer to look like a one-eyed owl, I suppose?—Puck.

FUN BY FIRELIGHT.

How the Bavarians Amuse Themselves Long Winter Evenings.

As to amusement, you may trust a Bavarian not to be behind in that. The men meet almost nightly in the different inns and beer-houses, according to their status in the local society, where they have talk, singing, music, cards, etc., the large glass mugs of beer at their side being constantly replenished. The beer is fortunately light and wholesome, but the amount drunk is a serious expense, and much more than the men usually can properly afford.

Besides these nightly gatherings there are different clubs or societies that meet at certain times at one or other of the inns for an evening's amusement, some of them under the patronage of the priest. In many of them the women join, but the women's chief entertainments are kunkl or spinning parties at home, and very cozy and picturesque these spinning parties are.

The great feature in a Bavarian sitting-room is the large porcelain stove that stands out into the room, and that is usually lit from the passage outside. Round this stove a bench runs, making a delightfully warm seat, the back being the porcelain stove.

But besides this stove, in the older houses there is in the wall a hole with a chimney, where a particular sort of pine, that burns brightly without sending out sparks, is burned at night for the purpose of light only. In olden times, when such luxuries as lamps were unthought of, it was often the only means of illumination. Some still use them constantly; others keep them only for festive occasions. A man (generally the wag or story-teller of the party) sits beside it to keep it replenished. The women have their spinning wheels or knitting, and the men sit in the darker corners; and there are always some to sing songs or tell stories or keep the fun going in some way.

One such scene especially recurs to me, says a writer in the National Review. Imagine an old, dark-panelled room. In her armchair, close to the stove, in the full light of the blazing pine wood, sits the handsome old hostress, in her picturesque costume, busy with her spinning wheel. A young woman with a wheel is in an opposite corner. Three daughters knitting and guests sit in a circle, more or less, the light playing on the varied faces and time-worn furniture as bright firelight alone can.

One man has a guitar, and two young girls sing Tyrolese songs and the compositions of one of the men present pleasantly together. At last schnapps of different kinds (a sort of cheap liqueurs) and delicious coffee, with home-made cake, are handedround, and the evening ends with hearty farewell greetings.

WHEN A KNOT IS NOT A KNOT.

Something About the Use of the Much-Abused Word.

To the average landlubber, and in fact to many seamen, the knot is the same thing as the geographical, nautical, or sea mile, and that is used solely to prevent confusion with the statute land mile. This use of the word, however, is improper, and the authorities in naval and marine matters abroad have taken the subject in hand of late, and are sending out the true meaning and usage of the salt-flavored unit.

The knot, they announce, is simply a unit for measuring speed at sea, and has nothing to do with distance, which is measured by the nautical mile of a little over 6,080 feet, says the New York Times. Their exact definition of a knot is "a speed of one nautical mile an hour," so that one knot is a speed of a little more than 101 feet a minute. Therefore, on a log line with a half-minute glass or time interval, the distance between the knot should be nearly fifty-one feet. The word is derived from the knots on the log line, and the number of knots which pass over a ship's rail during the half-minute or other time measurement give the speed of the vessel.

In late years, through an exaggerated straining after precision in general marine writing, the expression "knots per hour," which from the above explanation may be seen to be a nautical barbarism, has jumped into use to express the speed of a ship. So the proper word mile has been practically displaced, and it is a common thing to read that "the City of Paris' daily run was 500 knots." This would be about 4 1-6 miles, which would be slow going even for a raft.

The word knot is also used incorrectly in speaking of coal endurance, as "the Growler's coal endurance is 26,000 knots at a 10-knot speed." One might as sensibly say "the vessel lay within two knots of her dock." Chief Engineer Isherwood of the United States navy, in his reports on speed trials, goes so far out of his way to avoid these errors that he uses the lengthy expression "geographical miles an hour" to express speed rather than use the simple, but much abused term, "knot."

The Size of Canada.

The area of the Dominion of Canada is estimated at 3,379,000 square miles, or, including its water surface, 3,519,000 square miles. It is the largest of all the British possessions, constituting 40 per cent. of the Empire, the total area of which is over 8,000,000 square miles. Canada lacks only 237,002 square miles of being as large as the whole continent of Europe; it is nearly thirty times as large as Great Britain and Ireland, and is 500,000 square miles larger than the United States, exclusive of Alaska. Canada covers more than 1-14 part of the earth's surface, but contains only 1-286 part of the population of the world.

Worn Out by Kissing.

A striking instance of the effect of trifles oft repeated is seen in a recent statement that a large quantity of the metal on the foot of the famous statue of St. Peter at the Vatican has been worn away by the frequent kisses of votaries. In order to prevent similar injury, the foot of a statue of the Saviour in the Minerva has been protected by a brass buskin, while the face of a bronze statue of the Saviour has been quite kissed away in the course of years.

MODERN LOVE SCENE.

It Ends, of Course, in a Triumphant Victory for "Man."

He (with dignified composure)—Why are you so disagreeable, Helen?

She (artlessly surprised)—Disagreeable? Am I?

He (as before)—Always—to me.

She (carelessly)—Indeed? But, luckily it is a grievance you are not obliged to bear.

He (resignedly)—You certainly seem any thing but kind and polite.

She—Thank you, very much.

He (restlessly)—Oh, I don't know that it is your fault. Of course people spoil you; they flatter your vanity.

She—Am I vain, too?

He (warming to the subject)—Are you? How could you be otherwise in the frivolous, worldly life you live—the poor little round of dancing and dressing—you have no choice but to be vain and worldly.

She (smiling slightly)—Dear me!

He (throwing prudence to the winds)—Yes—jest—that is right. You are too selfish, too cruel, to care whom you hurt. Go on, Helen.

"YES—JEST—THAT'S RIGHT."

She (suddenly serious)—But if I hurt you so, why do you seek this pain? Why did you come up to-night, for instance?

He (impetuously)—I came because—Helen, you well know why—because I can't stay away! And I love you so. (Pleadingly) Dearest, I am willing to wait—but, give me hope—just a little.

She (opening her eyes on him)—Hope of what?

He (desperately)—That you will sometime be my wife.

She (thoughtfully)—Disagreeable, impolite, unkind, vain, worldly, selfish and cruel. (With tenderness) You poor boy, is that the sort of woman you would like to marry? Do you mean it, Arthur?

He (clutching her hand)—Yes, oh, yes! May I hope, Helen?

She—I am afraid, dear, I could never live up, that is, down, to your ideal, but if you like to take me, hampered with virtues you don't dream of, perhaps I can acquire, by degrees, the faults you love me for.

He (rapturously)—Oh! Helen, dear, you are quite bad enough—I mean I am quite good enough—I mean—

She (consolingly)—I know you do, dearest. I knew it from the first.—Madeline S. Bridges, in Life.

A Dog with Legal Instincts.

A Boston lawyer who resides in the suburbs is the owner of a dog that certainly possesses the instincts of an attorney. The other day he saw another dog carrying off a tempting-looking bone. A second dog followed at a short distance. The lawyer's dog quickly conceived a plan of action worthy of an eminent legal mind. He immediately brought action against the dog with the bone. The third dog at once quickened his pace and lost no time in instituting supplementary proceedings in his own behalf. This assistance proved equivalent to a decree for the plaintiff, for the lawyer's dog left the third dog to bear the brunt of the litigation, and, seizing the bone, fled to his own kennel, where possession was truly nine points of the law.—Boston Traveler.

Put to the Test.

Briggs—Didn't I hear something about your going to be married a year or so ago?

Griggs—O, yes. My fiances and I thought it would be a good thing to give our love a final test; so she went abroad for a year. She returned the other day.

Briggs—And was her love as fresh as ever?

Griggs—He was fresh enough. She married him in London.—West Shore.

HOUSE DECORATIONS.

An Inexhaustible Supply.

Mrs. Brown—I heard to-day that Mr. Van Gabbler owns a gas well, but I don't believe it.

Mr. Brown—You would be quite prepared to believe it if you had ever heard his wife talk.—Mansey's Weekly.

And Therefore to Be Told.

Amy—You shouldn't tell such things about people.

Laura—Why not? Charlotte gave me the most positive assurance that it was a secret.—Judge.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

A Perfect Success. 7

The Rev. A. Antoine of Refugio, Tex., writes: As far as I am able to judge, I think Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic is a perfect success, for any one. I had suffered from a most painful nervousness as I did. I feel now like myself again after taking the Tonic.

A Strong Proof.

CAZELIA, ONT., CANADA, June, '88.

I was first attacked by epilepsy in November 1879; residing in New York I consulted the best physicians, but they could only arrest the disease, the honest ones told me there was no cure for it. I was compelled to give up my occupation and return to Canada in 1878; since then I tried innumerable remedies and consulted some of the best physicians, but nothing benefited me until I began to use Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic in September '88, since then I had not a single attack.

M. J. CLIFFORD.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

FIVE VESSELS LOST

They Left Port Months Ago and Have Not Been Heard of.

THEY CARRIED OVER 100 MEN.

The Coast Along the Atlantic Seaboard Strewn With Wreckage.

Much Uneasiness at the Maritime Exchange in New York—The Vessels Carried Millions of Dollars' Worth of Property. A Vessel Wrecked in the English Channel and 24 Persons Drowned.

NEW YORK, March 13.—"The coast along the Atlantic seaboard is strewn with wreckage."

This notice is posted on the Maritime Exchange, and much uneasiness is felt for overdue vessels.

A large number of vessels are overdue at various ports, and many are posted as missing at Lloyd's.

Among the number unaccounted for are the following:

The German bark Nimrod, commanded by Captain E. D. B. Wieding. She sailed from Picton, N. S., Oct. 31 for Liverpool and is now three months overdue and is believed to have gone down. The Nimrod is a wooden ship and was formerly known as the Sancho Panza. She registers 726 tons and was built in 1855 at Medford, N. J.

The steamship Thanemore, Captain Butcher. She is an iron screw vessel and registers 3,032 tons. She was built by Tod, Macgregor & Co., of Glasgow, for W. Johnson & Co., who owned her. She left Baltimore Nov. 26 for London, with 543 head of cattle, and has not been heard of since.

The British brig Edmond, Captain Crowell. She left St. Johns, N. B., on Nov. 27, with lumber for Barbadoes, and has never been heard of.

The British ship Glenfinart, 1,601 tons, Captain Stirret. She left Greenock for San Francisco on Aug. 2, 1890, and is supposed to have shared the fate of the others.

The British ship Marianne Graves, Captain Williams. She left Mayport, Wales, for St. Johns, on Oct. 9, and has not yet been reported. She was of 202 tons, and owned by G. Pritchard.

Millions of dollars' worth of property and hundreds of human lives have probably been lost with these vessels.

TWENTY-FOUR DROWNED.

A British Iron Ship Wrecked in the English Channel.

LONDON, March 13.—The startling news has reached this city that the British iron ship Dryad, 1,085 tons, from Shields, bound for Valparaiso, has been wrecked at Start Point, on the coast of Devonshire.

The officers, passengers and crew, in all twenty-four persons, were drowned.

A foreign steamship is also reported as having been wrecked near the same place. All on board are said to have been lost.

TWO DEAD INFANTS FOUND.

Alice Goodrich Suspected of Being the Mother of the Babies.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., March 13.—Coroner W. E. Vandyke impanelled a jury to inquire into the facts of the finding of dead twin babies in Newhold's Woods yesterday. The fleshless bodies were found by Sym Briggs, an employe of Collector W. R. Joline, while cutting down some brier hedges near the edge of the woods.

One of the bodies was wrapped in a piece of canton flannel and was frightfully decomposed. The other had been pulled from the bundle and dragged into the woods and torn to pieces by dogs. Undertaker J. H. Sexton buried the bodies in Mount Carmel Cemetery.

The coroner's jury was in session but a few minutes and adjourned the case until Friday, March 27.

It is generally believed here that the mother of the two babies was Alice Goodrich, who escaped from the Monmouth Memorial Hospital Sunday, Jan. 4, after confinement there for two weeks. A physician to-day said that the remains had been in the woods three months.

Estee Leads in California.

SACRAMENTO, March 13.—An effort was made to secure signers for the Republican caucus during the morning, but the required number could not be secured, and the Legislature met in joint session to ballot for United States Senator, with the Republicans still scattering their votes. The first ballot resulted: Estee 31, De Young 24, Felton 16, Blanchard 12, Johnston 4, Wetmore 1. The Democrats cast 27 votes for Coleman.

Stolen Diamonds Recovered.

NEW YORK, March 13.—Stolen diamonds to the value of $27,300 have been recovered by Inspector Byrnes. They were the property of Levison & Co., jewelers, of Nos. 41 and 843 Maiden lane, and are the balance of the $30,000 worth of gems that their trusted salesman, William C. Duncan, stole from them on Jan. 15 last.

TRYING TO SAVE LINGO.

Many Colored Witnesses Called in the Prisoner's Behalf.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 13.—A further attempt to establish an alibi for Francis Lingo, on trial for the murder of Mrs. Annie Miller, was made by his counsel. The court room was crowded as usual. Judge Garrison was prompt in repressing any expression of feeling on the part of the auditors.

The witnesses examined were all colored persons, and some comment was made upon this fact. It appears as though the people of the prisoner's race are determined to save him if possible. His wife was one of the witnesses. She told a straight-sounding story of her husband's return to his home on the Thursday afternoon of the murder. She got a little tangled up, however, on the cross-examination.

Lingo assumed a different air from that on the previous days of the trial. He kept his face fixed upon his counsel, ex-Judge Wescott, and away from the witnesses, and only once or twice did he turn toward them. Once it was in response to a request of his counsel, so that one of the witnesses could identify him as the man he had seen in a certain locality. None of the usual smiles were to be observed upon the face of the defendant, and he evidently realized that upon the testimony of these witnesses his fate largely depended.

THE MURDERERS SAFE.

Slocum and Smiler Granted a Stay of Execution.

NEW YORK, March 13.—The counsel for Harris A. Smiler and James J. Slocum presented petitions to the United States Court for writs of habeas corpus with a view of saving their clients from being put to death by electricity during the week beginning March 16.

Judge Lacombe denied the application for the writs whereupon the lawyers made an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States and Judge Lacombe gave them until the 23d inst. in which to obtain a hearing.

Smiler is the Salvation Army lieutenant who murdered Maggie Drainey, one of his three mistresses, on April 3, 1890.

Slocum is the ex-baseball player who killed his wife on December 31, 1889.

The appeal from Judge Lacombe's action in denying the writ will operate as a stay to the execution.

JACK BURKE WHIPPED.

Knocked Out in the Third Round by Ted Pritchard.

LONDON, March 13.—Jack Burke and Ted Pritchard met in the ring at the rooms of the Albany Club last night and in nine minutes and seven seconds Burke was knocked out, while Pritchard was as fresh as when time was called for the first round.

Although Pritchard was the favorite, it was expected that Burke would make a better showing.

In the first and second rounds Burke got in some good blows, but they lacked steam. In the third round Burke was knocked down three times, and failing to rise the last time within the limited 10 seconds was declared out.

It was quite evident that Burke's fighting powers are on the wane. The fight was for $5,000.

The Hungarian Girl Disappears.

NEW YORK, March 13.—Rosa Kohlmayer, the Hungarian girl suspected by some of being Esther Solymosi, whose disappearance and reported murder by Jews in Tisza-Eszlar, Hungary, caused the Jewish massacre there in 1882, is missing from her home and her friends believe that she has secreted herself to avoid further annoyance from those who are seeking to identify her as Esther. On the other hand, the believers in the identity of Rosa and Esther claim that she has fled to avoid the certainty of the exposure of her secret.

Bishop Paddock's Funeral.

BOSTON, March 13.—The funeral services over the remains of the Right Rev. Benjamin Henry Paddock, D. D., Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Massachusetts, were held at Trinity Church and were very largely attended. Bishops Williams of Connecticut, Clark of Rhode Island, Niles of New Hampshire, and Neely of Maine, and 146 of the 161 clergy of the diocese were present.

Iron Works to be Removed.

POTTSTOWN, Pa., March 13.—Papers of agreement for the removal of the Ellis & Lessig Iron Works of this city, to Salem, Va., have been signed by the firm, and by Col. Logan and Capt. Langborn, representing the citizens of Salem, who offered $100,000 and forty acres of land to the iron company to locate there.

Senator Hearst's Body at Home.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—The special train conveying the body of Senator Hearst has arrived from Washington. The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon.

Spiritualistic Manifestations.

BOSTON, Mass., March 13.—The Judiciary Committee of the Senate reported against the petition for a law to prevent fraud in spiritualistic manifestations.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Ex-Minister Foster to Negotiate a Treaty With Spain.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER COMING.

He Will Watch Britain's Interests in the Behring Sea Settlement.

The President Bags Thirteen Ducks and Will Return to Washington To-morrow—Senators Will Have the Say About Fourth-Class Postmasters—The Gunboat Bennington Said to be a Failure.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—There is a well-authenticated rumor here that ex-Minister John W. Foster has been selected an auxiliary envoy to proceed to Madrid and assist Minister Grubb in the negotiating of the reciprocity treaty which Mr. Blaine desires to make with Spain.

The report states further that the Spanish officers are far from being in a treaty-making mood and that their attitude is giving Mr. Blaine much concern.

His selection of Mr. Foster is a wise one. It was Mr. Foster who successfully negotiated a treaty with Spain on the part of this government several years ago. He was at that time the American Minister at Madrid, and he is now the legal counsellor of the Spanish government at this capital. He is an accomplished diplomat, speaks Spanish fluently and is personally acquainted with the leading statesmen of that country.

TUPPER TO TAKE A HAND.

He Will Look After England's Interest in the Behring Sea Discussion.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—It is stated that Sir Charles Tupper is soon to arrive in this city and arrange matters with Mr. Blaine in reference to an arbitration of the Behring Sea question.

Advices received at the Treasury Department indicate a more general onslaught on the seal fisheries this spring and summer than ever before.

There are now fitting out at Victoria, B. C., forty vessels which will infest the waters about the seal islands.

At San Francisco twenty vessels are being made ready for sea, bound for the Islands of St. Paul and St. George. A government official in this city says that "when the pending controversy as to jurisdiction in the Behring Sea is settled, there will be nothing to settle," that is, all the seals will have been destroyed.

It has been settled that both governments shall send as soon as possible one gunboat to Behring Sea to do police duty until the question is disposed of.

Mrs. Harrison's Long Walks.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Mrs. Harrison has taken to long walks in the afternoons. She has a brisk step, and the exercise and fresh air are greatly benefiting her health. She takes lessons several times a week in water color painting from Mr. James H. Moser, the artist, who has a studio in the northwestern part of the city. Mrs. Harrison gives a lunch today at the White House.

The Dominion Seeks Reciprocity.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—An Ottawa dispatch says that the Dominion government has decided to inform Secretary Blaine that they were prepared to enter into negotiations at once in the direction of reciprocity and only waited his pleasure to fix a date when he would be willing to receive the Canadian Commissioners. Sir Charles Tupper will represent the interests of Canada and Great Britain will be looked after by Joseph Chamberlain.

The President Bagged Thirteen Ducks.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—President Harrison bagged 13 ducks during the day, one of which was a canvas-back weighing three and a half pounds. It was the first and only canvas-back shot at Bengies, Md., this season. Gen. Sewell and Mr. Knight together brought down 12 ducks. The President will return to Washington to-morrow.

Senators Will Have the Say.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Postmaster-General Wanamaker has decided that hereafter ex-Congressmen shall not have any say in appointing fourth-class postmasters in their districts, and that all such nominations shall be referred to the Republican Senators.

To Succeed Warden Brush.

NEWBURG, N. Y., March 13.—Trustworthy advices from Albany are that Postmaster William R. Brown, of this city, will soon be appointed warden of Sing Sing prison by Governor Hill. He will succeed Warden A. A. Brush, of Poughkeepsie, who is a Republican in politics, and has held the office for many years.

Sutherland Arrested Again.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 13.—H. E. Sutherland of Hazleton, who was recently arrested for sending obscene letters through the mail, defaming the character of the Rev. Mr. Donohue, has been rearrested charged with sending obscene letters to Rev. Monroe of Altoona. He was held in $6,000 bail.

Attacked by Two Dogs.

READING, Pa., March 13.—At Friedensburg, this county, "Birdie" Miller, a school girl, was attacked by a bulldog and a bloodhound and bitten so badly that she will probably die. There are 40 terribly lacerated wounds on her body.

The Late Minister Swift's Will.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—The will of the late John Swift, United States Minister to Japan, has been filed for probate. The estate, which is valued at $200,000, is left to his widow.

The Eight-Hour-Day Bill Passed.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 13.—The bill making eight hours a day's work in institutions under the control of the State passed the Senate.

THE GRIP'S RETURN.

Chicago Has Another Visitation and the Mortality is High.

CHICAGO, March 13.—The grip is on the increase, and there seems a fair probability that Chicago is about to have another visitation like that of last winter. The County Hospital is filled with patients, and as pneumonia follows in many cases the mortality is high. Already the effect of the epidemic is visible in industries employing a large number of men.

Half of the regular force of street car employes is laid up and the ranks of the police are thinned. Forty letter carriers are prostrated, together with 50 postal clerks, as well as Postmaster Sexton and Assistant Hubbard.

In the Custom House 12 clerks are on the grip sick list, and at the Pension Office eight have failed to report for the same cause.

At Hooley's Theatre last night, where Rosina Vokes's company is playing, the grip made itself felt.

The green room looked like a hospital, with doctors and nurses and medicine enough to stock a drug store. Rosina Vokes, Felix Morris and Eleanor Lane were all suffering from the disease, and Charles J. Bell was so ill that he couldn't appear.

HOW WILL HE BE RECEIVED?

The Jews of San Francisco Discussing the Visit of the Czarewitch.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—The Jewish community is divided in opinion as to just what attention should be shown to the Czarewitch, the eldest son of the Emperor of Russia, who will arrive in this city on the China steamship in about two weeks.

Some think that as the representative of the Russian government which has passed laws inflicting great hardship and injustice upon the Jews, making exiles and bankrupts of thousands of them, the Czarewith should be coldly received by San Francisco.

Others think that he should be openly snubbed, while the less radical believe he should at least be ignored by the Jewish people and courteously treated by the city officials.

ARRESTED FOR MURDER.

A Handsome Young Woman Charged With Poisoning Her Stepmother.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., March 13.—Mrs. Ida Elder, a handsome young woman, 22 years of age, was arrested at the depot last night on her arrival from Pittsburg on the charge of the murder of her stepmother, Mrs. Levi Repman, in Wampum, Pa., in July, 1889.

It is believed that "Rough on Rats" was given to Mrs. Repman, who was ill at the time, and it was stated she had died of heart disease.

Mrs. Elder is the wife of a locomotive engineer, who lived with her just one month after their marriage. She is apparently indifferent to the serious charge against her, but refuses to talk with any one on the subject.

Two Attempts to Wreck Trains.

NORWALK, Conn., March 13.—An Eastbound accommodation train on the Consolidated road ran into a pile of ties which had been placed across the track at East Norwalk last evening. The locomotive was slightly damaged, but no part of the train left the track. An hour later the Boston express for New York struck a similar obstruction near South Norwalk drawbridge, with precisely the same result. Officers are searching for the would-be train wreckers.

A Political Contest Settled.

NYACK, N. Y., March 13.—The long contest over the collectorship of Orangetown, Rockland County, which has agitated the people of this vicinity for a week, was settled last night. The Town Board, composed of five Democrats, voted to count the four disputed ballots cast for "H Smith" as votes for Henry E. Smith, the Republican candidate for collector. The vote in the board was 4 to 1.

The Connecticut House Adjourns.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 13.—A vote on a minor matter in the House showed the Republicans in the minority. A motion was therefore made to take a recess until next Tuesday. The Republicans left the House in a body and a vote showed no quorum. Under the special rule the Speaker declared a recess until next Tuesday. No vote has been taken on the Judson resolution.

Killed by a Mad Bull.

HAVERHILL, Mass., March 13.—John E. Carr, an ex-member of the New Hampshire Legislature, and latterly a resident of this place, was killed by a mad bull during the morning in his pasture. The animal rushed upon Mr. Carr and gored him in a frightful manner, and then stamped upon his senseless body until life was extinct. The bull was killed.

Barely Escaped With Their Lives.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 13.—Word has been received here that the Wood block in the village of Elbridge was burned at 1 a. m. The postoffice was located in the burned building. Dentist Wright and Justice Farnham, who occupied rooms over the postoffice, barely escaped with their lives, and had their hair and beard singed.

Killed by a Falling Derrick.

BOSTON, March 13.—John Manning of Hampshire street, Roxbury, and Lawrence Grennan of Morse avenue, Brookline, were killed by a falling derrick while at work on the Muddy river improvements at Brookline.

[Lived Over 100 Years.

DANBURY, Conn., March 13.—Aunt Clara Burr, formerly of Salem, N. Y., but for many years a resident of this place, died last evening, aged over 100 years. Amos Burr, her husband, aged 85, survives her.

Crusade Against Tights.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 13.—Legislator Seyfert of Lancaster County has introduced a bill in the Legislature forbidding the use of tights on the stage.

BALMACEDA KILLED

Rumors of the Murder of the Chilian President.

THE REBELS AGAIN VICTORIOUS.

News of the Assassination Has Not Yet Reached Washington.

Scene in the Italian Chamber—Signor Crispi Threatens to Shoot Signor Imbriani—Seventy Lives Lost by the Blizzard in England—Mystery About Parnell's Manifesto—Financial Flurry in Paris.

LONDON, March 13.—There are rumors here that information has been received at Hamburg by private cablegrams from Chili to the effect that President Balmaceda has been murdered.

Advices from Chili state that there has been further fighting between the insurgents and the government troops, and that the former were victorious.

It is reported here that the Republic of Uruguay has offered to mediate between the contending factions.

No News in Washington.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The report of the assassination of President Balmaceda has not yet reached here, but it may be true for all that. The absence of news would not be considered as negativing the report, for the reason that business transactions between this country and Chili are entirely cut off by the course of the revolution, and one of the incidents of the war is the recent suspension of news reports direct from that country.

SIGNOR CRISPI ARMED.

Disgraceful Scene in the Italian Chamber of Deputies.

ROME, March 13.—A sensational scene was enacted in the Chamber of Deputies during the sitting.

Signor Imbriani cried out to the Crispi group: "Yes, you are the servants of Austria," to which Signor Crispi responded by saying: "Servants, no! good friends, yes."

Signor Imbriani repeated his taunt with emphasis, whereupon Signor Crispi directed a gesture of insult to that gentleman.

To a demand from Signor Imbriani that he withdraw the insult, Signor Crispi refused, saying that while he held the position of a Minister of State he had been compelled to endure the annoyance of Signor Imbriani. "But now," furiously exclaimed the ex-Premier, "I am no longer bound to do so, as I am only a deputy. In my pocket I have a revolver, if Imbriani annoys me, let him beware!"

This outburst was followed by a scene of extraordinary excitement and confusion.

The Pope and Kaiser Anxious.

BERLIN, March 13.—The Pope has telegraphed to ask the health of Herr Windthorst. The condition of the Catholic leader, and the probable effect of his death, should his illness prove fatal, of which, in view of his advanced age, he being in his 80th year, there is great apprehension, excites much discussion. The Kaiser, it is said, is with Windthorst's opposition to his naval projects, is deeply concerned. The Kaiser prides himself on owning credit to the Imperial cause Herr Windthorst and his followers, and has conceived what appears and is believed to be a sincere attachment for the veteran champion of the Roman Church.

Riots Expected at Brussels.

BRUSSELS, March 13.—A large number of strangers from Germany and France have arrived in this city within the past few days. Some of these have been recognized as active socialistic agitators. Soon after their arrival they disappeared into the quarters of the city where the socialist movement has its strongest hold. The Government maintains the utmost vigilance, and suspicious strangers are carefully watched. It is feared that a riot may break out at any time.

Relief for Distress in Ireland.

LONDON, March 13.—In the House of Commons Chief Secretary Balfour asked a credit of £25,871 for the relief of distress in Ireland. Every possible means had been taken, he said, to expedite relief works, which otherwise would not have been begun before April or May. Messrs. John Morley and Thomas Russell spoke in support of the credit, which was adopted.

At least Seventy Dead.

LONDON, March 13.—It is already known that at least seventy lives have been lost off the coast during the blizzard this week, and that less than ten men perished from exposure after they had successfully reached land. A large number of vessels are missing, and the gravest apprehension is felt that the list of wrecks and number of lives lost will be greatly swelled.

Disaster on the Great Western.

LONDON, March 13.—A terrible disaster is reported on the Great Western railway, on which many hundreds of laborers are employed repairing the tracks. A gang of workmen engaged in opening a way for a train that had broken down in the snow did not see the relief train approaching. The relief train dashed into them, two being killed and several fatally injured.

Parnell's Manifesto.

LONDON, March 13.—Mr. Parnell is making a great deal of mystery about the manifesto which he is about to issue to his supporters on both sides of the Atlantic. He does not at his house and nobody knows where he has gone. It is thought that his manifesto will not be published until the arrival in America of his special envoys.

300,000 Men Out of Work in Italy.

ROME, March 13.—Not less than 300,000 men are out of work in Italy. It is, therefore, a matter of considerable apprehension that the Government looks forward to May 1, the date on which a general strike and labor demonstration is proposed by an influential section of the socialists and labor agitators.

A NOTABLE CELEBRATION.

Archbishop Williams' Jubilee Attended by Many Prelates and Priests.

BOSTON, March 13.—The celebration of the 25th anniversary of the elevation to the episcopacy of the Roman Catholic Church of Archbishop John J. Williams was an inspiring one. The rows of acolytes, clad in white and purple, the cross and censor bearers, the seminarians, the priests in their white surplices and the prelates wearing their purple robes, the officiating clergy in their gorgeous vestments, and the Archbishop in his pontifical robes—while the clouds of incense which permeated the atmosphere and the beautiful music added to the grandeur and solemnity of the occasion.

Pontifical high mass was celebrated before a large audience. The bishops and clergy formed in the sacristy in the rear of the cathedral, and just before 10 o'clock emerged in procession into the cathedral.

Following the priests and immediately preceding the prelates came the archiepiscopal cross bearer, with a boy on either side carrying a lighted candle. He wore a robe richly embroidered with gold. Then came the bishops—Healy, of Portland, Me.; Bradley, of Manchester, N. H.; De Goesbriand, of Burlington, Vt.; McMahon, of Hartford, Conn.; Harkins, of Providence, R. I.; O'Reilly, of Springfield, Mass., and McQuade, of Rochester, N. Y.

When the procession reached the altar the officiating clergymen took their places beside the Archbishop, while the other bishops and clergy arranged themselves, as many as could be accommodated, within the sanctuary, the others, to a large number, seating themselves before the high altar.

After the gospel the sermon was preached by Rev. James A. Healey, D.D., Bishop of Portland. At the conclusion of the services the Archbishop attended a banquet given by the clergy of the archdiocese at which the visiting prelates were present. The presentation of jubilee gifts to the Archbishop followed.

WATTERSON DISGUSTED.

The Louisville Editor Talks About New York Politics.

LOUISVILLE, March 13.—Henry Watterson was in a very bad humor when asked during the day about the recent publications regarding the Hill and Cleveland letters. He said:

"I am not troubling myself about politics just now, and least of all with New York politics, which stink in the nostrils of good people everywhere. Whatever I have written to Mr. Cleveland is my affair, and whatever he has written to me is his affair. In the meantime I am engaged in no conspiracies and refuse to be put on exhibition for purposes either of news vending or controversy."

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

AN EDITORIAL NOTE OR TWO.

The request of the Corporation Counsel that his salary be increased to $1,000 per year, is all right except that he put the figure too low.

Mayor Gilbert's veto of the ordinance permitting the barrooms to keep open until midnight, was perfectly just and proper. If the saloon keepers continue in their demands for more privileges than are now tolerated by the people, there will be a no-license Council elected the next time the citizens get an opportunity of voting.

In speaking of the Choral Society's concert the Central Times says: "The young protege of Mr. Fitzhugh, whose name for some unknown reason was kept in the background until the evening of the concert, scored a most emphatic hit." This proves that the Times does not read THE PRESS as closely as the rest of Plainfield's intelligent citizens do. The young woman's name and other information about her, was published in these columns days before the concert.

It has become necessary for us to say to whom it may concern, that the views of no one are allowed an airing in THE PRESS except through the medium of a communication. If a professional musician, for instance, comes to this city, and he or she accepts the people's money as pay for goods that are not delivered, THE PRESS will say so if it pleases; but it will not say so to please anybody else.

Why do those who are entirely ignorant of just what sort of a trolley road is proposed to be constructed and maintained in Plainfield, have so much to say against it? 'Tis true, some of the obstructionists, like poll parrots, say nothing but what somebody else has said about some kind of a trolley system somewhere else. Yet we also read an editorial opinion in the Central Times that "The trolley system is not desirable because it is dangerous to life and property, unsightly and abominably noisy." The fact of the matter is, the trolley system of "to-day" has wooden-cogged, noiseless gearing, and there is no record of ever a life or a bit of property destroyed by it.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Ex-Mayor Rockfellow is confined to the house recovering from the effects of a recent operation on his throat.

Dr. Edward Rushmore will leave Plainfield to-morrow for a few days, to accompany his brother Howard Rushmore to North Carolina. During the former's absence his patients will be left to the care of Dr. T. S. Davis.

The eldest son of the Rev. F. Koechli, is under treatment by Dr. Kipp, the specialist, of Newark, for cataracts over both eyes. This surgeon says his patient will have to undergo different operations on each eye and that an entire cure will take a year or more.

A social gathering numbering about forty, attended a fancy dress sociable at the residence of A. B. Carpenter, 230 East Front street, last night. All had a very enjoyable time, thanks to the efforts of a committee consisting of C. O. Pearson, E. V. Taynor, F. Kesselring and A. B. Carpenter.

The sad news has just been received by THE PRESS of the death of E. Coriell Boice, of this city. He died of consumption at Los Angeles, where he and his mother have been living the past eighteen months. He was in the twenty first year of his age and the son of the late L. B. Boice who also died of consumption. Mrs. Boice left Los Angeles, yesterday, with the body of her son, and expects to arrive here on Tuesday of next week.

Mr. Krehbiel at The Casino.

A large number of tickets have already been disposed of among Plainfield's society and musical people, for Henry E. Krehbiel's lecture at The Casino, next Thursday evening. His subject is to be Wagner's musical comedy, "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg." He will be assisted at the piano by Mr. Venino. The New York Times says of the lecturer:

Mr. Krehbiel is not a rabid Wagnerite. He is liberal and unprejudiced in his views, and he is not afraid to lay his finger in the joints of Wagner's armor. At the same time he is what every man must be, what every man is, who has honestly studied the great German's works, a frank admirer of his dramas. His lectures are based on a deep and thoughtful study of the dramas themselves and of the literature from which their books were derived. No person who desires to listen intelligently to Wagner's works should miss these discourses.

One Reason of Mr. Slater's Strength.

The New York World says: "The Republicans made a clean sweep in North Plainfield. Mayor Place was re-elected by a majority of only 7, his opponent being Fred M. Slater, a very popular Democrat and a prominent member of the Crescent League, which is by all odds the most influential organization in the town."

The New York Sun says: "Mayor Place, a New York business man, was elected Mayor by a majority of 7 only, but he was opposed by Fred M. Slater, a popular member of the Crescent League, who drew many votes through personal friendship."

I HAD catarrh of the head and throat for five years. I used Ely's Cream Balm, and from the first application I was relieved. The sense of smell, which had been lost, was restored after using one bottle. I have found the Balm the only satisfactory remedy for catarrh, and it has effected a cure in my case.—H. L. Meyer, Waverly, N. Y.

SAVING A STREET'S GOOD NAME.

Notorious People Ejected from a Neighborhood They Were Ruining.

Because of unsavory stories that have for some time been afloat concerning their doings, a family occupying a house on East Front street are to be ejected. Gossips have long connected the name of a certain man about town with the name of the woman of the household, and the man's frequent visits to the place, coupled with the fact that the husband seemed to possess full knowledge of just what was going on, and that he appeared to sanction the affair, gave color to the unpleasant stories afloat. So notorious was the neighborhood becoming because of the disrepute concerning the inmates and guests of the house, that the neighbors as a matter of self-protection felt compelled to call in the aid of the law. At first it was thought advisable to institute criminal proceedings, and secure punishment for the offending parties, but as a quiet and effectual way out of the difficulty it was decided merely to have the objectionable parties legally removed from the premises. With the aid of the sympathetic landlord, who was astounded to learn the truth, this was readily accomplished. A local justice of the peace promptly issued a writ of ejectment, as soon as he heard the facts. One of the things told to him, aside from the story concerning the woman of the house and the man about town, was that certain charming damsels who were ostensibly demure and modest French lady's maids were utilized as an attraction for giddy-headed, generous-handed, easily-fleeced young business men from New York. The disreputable establishment is to be promptly broken up, but already boasts are made that another part of the city is to be afflicted with its obnoxious presence. The police will be ready to take a hand at any fresh outbreak of the nuisance.

An Aged Woman Injured.

A serious accident happened to and aged and respected citizen of this city last evening. Mrs. Aaron Johnson, aged 85 years, a resident of No. 80 East Second street, while descending the stairs from the second story, fell from the top to the bottom of the stairs, sustaining severe bruises and a fracture of one of her ribs. Mrs. Johnson is a sister of "Uncle" Isaac Brown, of Broadway. Dr. Hedges is attending the case. The fall is supposed to have been caused by an attack of vertigo.

Borough Freeholders Cannot Serve.

Governor Abbett, Monday, signed the bill abolishing the office of Freeholder in boroughs. The election of Jacob Long to that office from North Plainfield Borough on Tuesday, is, therefore, null and void.

Go where you will, you will find people using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and unanimous in its praise.

THEY KNEW ABOUT THE APPLE.

And They Lived in America When There Were Seven Stars in the Pleiades, 500 Years Before Christ.

In spite of the rain, a large number of the Y. M. C. A. members and their friends turned out last night to listen with much interest to the talk on "Prehistoric Mounds and Ruins in North America", by George H. Fountain. The lecture was illustrated by nearly fifty lantern slides, the greater number of which are the only ones in existence.

It was shown that the Mound-builders had a knowledge of geometry and surveying, by the construction of their mounds in the form of circles, squares, triangles and crosses, many of them from twenty to forty feet in height, and covering or inclosing a great many acres of ground.

Mounds have been found in the shape of a serpent with an apple in or near its mouth, thus giving evidence of a knowledge of the story of Adam's fall. The extreme antiquity of these remarkable people is shown by their representation of the seven stars of the Pleiades. There are now but six stars in that constellation visible to the naked eye, the seventh having disappeared three hundred years before Christ. Hence these people must have lived nearly 2,500 years ago.

The ridges of Archean rock in British America, the Black Hills in Dakota, and the Appalachian line of mountains, are the oldest in the geological history of the earth. If our continent is the oldest—Mr. Fountain asked—why should not these evidences of civilization be among the oldest on the earth?

The similarity of the architecture of the Aztecs to that of the Egyptians previous to the time of Pharoah was shown by slides from photographs of the ruins of their temples and dwellings. In Arizona there is an artificially constructed pyramid covering forty-five acres of ground, while the great pyramid of Egypt covers but thirteen acres.

There is no doubting the fact that man—concluded the lecturer—has fallen from the height he attained in the arts and sciences thousands of years ago; and is slowly crawling back on his hands and knees, now and then re-discovering some phenomenon. He finds the uses of lightning, and the next moment it kills him. He holds up his head with pride as he drives the mighty locomotive, and then discovers among the ruins of Egypt great engines that could not have been driven except by steam.

When Not to Beware.

"Beware of the first glass," exclaims the temperance advocate. From a vinous standpoint this remark is of regulation measurement and plumb, but when you come to eye-glasses, the "first" is the very quality you don't want to beware of, and if there is any place on this mundane periphery (or words to that effect) where eye-glasses, spectacles, opera-glasses, etc., etc., are to be had in perfection that place is Collier's, 3 Park avenue.

To Slaughter Clay Pigeons in the Borough.

The Plainfield Crescent League contemplate establishing shooting matches on their new base-ball grounds in North Plainfield. James K. Arnold, T. H. Keller and Seymour G. Smith have charge of the arrangements, and as soon as suitable weather comes, trap shooting, at inanimate targets, will be begun under their direction.

Champion Players to Shuffle the Cards.

The best whist players of the Plainfield Crescent League are to be formed into a team to enter a whist tournament in which Fanwood, Westfield and Elizabeth athletic clubs will be represented. The first game of the tournament will be played at an early date.

A GRAVE ON THE MOUNTAIN.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER BURIED TOGETHER IN A LONELY SPOT.

The Husband's Own Hands Prepared Their Last Resting Place, But All the Quiet Valley is Disturbed Because of His Strange Disposal of the Dead.

When Jarard Underhill dug his wife's grave in the wilds of the Watchung Mountains back of North Plainfield, every tongue in Washington Valley was set wagging, and strange stories reached the progressive little borough and its more sedate municipal neighbor, concerning the man's disposition of his dead. And in the country stores the old-time loungers, trembling with nervous excitement, shifted uneasily about from cracker box to sugar barrel, and recited over and over, one to the other, the queer tales that were afloat, and gazed at Underhill, every time he passed in view, with big-eyed wonderment and awe.

It was not that Underhill was doing anything he had no right to do; nobody denied his privilege of making his entire farm a charnel place, providing there were naught of mystery or crime connected with each interment: but to everybody in general, and to the conservative-minded country people especially, this action of the man had in it something of cruel-heartedness, selfishness, gross inhumanity.

Underhill has been a dairy farmer in the Valley several years. The land he occupies is supposed to belong to his mother, who lives with him. His father, a gray-haired, white-bearded, pleasant-faced old gentleman, sometimes rambles out to the old place, but his home is with his sister, Mrs. Lydia E. Wright, 130 Park avenue, Plainfield, where in former days he was known as a school teacher. Underhill was at one time a farmer near New Market, but went extensively into the dairy business in the mountains. He kept many cattle, and served large numbers of customers in Plainfield and the borough. The burden became too heavy for him, and he gave it up last fall and joined the ranks of salesmen in the shoe house of Morse & Rogers, Duane street, New York, commuting daily between the crescent city and the metropolis. He is affable in manner, and gentlemanly in conversation; but his neighbors call him queer, and shrug their shoulders about him. Among the people of the Valley he has made himself not a general favorite.

About four weeks ago Underhill lost a daughter, Hattie, two years old. His wife also was very ill, and at her earnest request the body of the child was temporarily laid in the receiving vault at Hillside Cemetery, Plainfield, not to be buried until the warm summer months.

"I have such a horror of having people buried in the cold, wet ground in winter!"—she said.

When she urged that a family plot, in a beautiful part of Hillside, be purchased, and that her child and herself be buried there, the husband seemed ready enough to fulfill her wishes, and in the belief that what she had asked on her death-bed would all be granted, she died content. The death occurred last week.

Scarcely was the clay cold when Underhill and his hired man, with pick and shovel, trudged across the sloping fields to the foot of Second Mountain, and clambered up the hill-side, and dug a deep hole in the frozen earth.

Not many hours had passed before it was well noised about that "Jerry" was going to bury his wife in the wildest woodland spot on the farm. To a people who were accustomed to sober-minded conventionalities, to things done in rute, and who reverenced time-honored customs, especially in matters pertaining to burial of the dead, this was a horrifying innovation. Public feeling quickly was aroused, and displeasure at Underhill's action was freely expressed. Some good people went so far as to reproach Underhill personally, and to suggest that interment of the departed be made in orthodox fashion, in an orthodox burying-ground, but they were told that it was nobody's business if the husband wished to bury his dead on the farm. His mother—it was asserted—desired to found a family burying-plot on the homestead, as was the custom in many rural localities.

But when Sunday, the day of the funeral, came, numbers stayed away because they had grown so angry at Underhill for not arranging for his wife the kind of obsequies they were used to witnessing. Those who did attend were shocked more than they had anticipated.

Being of the faith of the Society of Friends, Underhill had arranged for what was called a Quaker funeral.

The casket containing the body of the child had been removed from the vault at Hillside, and was brought in and laid beside that inclosing all that was mortal of the mother.

Everybody sat around, solemn-visaged, and waited in grim silence. Presently the Rev. Samuel B. Haines, a Quaker preacher from abroad, arose and said a few words extolling the womanly virtues of the departed, and eulogizing her qualities as a wife, a mother, and a Christian. Then the coffin lid was screwed down, and the dead, wan face was sealed from earthly sight forever. Not a word of Scripture was read; not a prayer was uttered. To those who had their own ideas about Christian burials the service seemed disrespectful, almost heathenish. At Underhill's direction several neighbors carried the coffins to a wagon, and, amid injunctions from the husband to the drivers of the various vehicles about the place, to be careful how they drove around, and to be sure not to cut up the sod on his land, the wagon was drawn across lots, rattling over mounds and stones, and plunging across meadows, to the foot of the mountain near the waiting grave.

Those who went to the hill-side were only enough to carry the heavy coffins stumblingly up the mountain to their final resting place. A few rain drops fell on the caskets, as they were lowered, one after the other, into the grave. These tears from heaven were the only ones visibly shed. The damp earth was hastily shoveled in, and the funeral was over.

Verily, a strange burial it seemed to the people of the Valley. And they gazed in wonderment at the husband, and thought how little he seemed like a mourner, and how queer he was to bury his dear ones in such odd fashion.

"Brutal, inhuman, shameful!"—they muttered to themselves; and during the succeeding days openly used the same and stronger language in speaking of the event.

When they learned what Underhill's wife's wishes had been, and were told that he had acted in direct opposition to her dying requests, they became still more violent of speech, and from saying sharp things fell to wondering if there were no way to have the man arrested. But they could find no law that he had offended, except, perchance, the law of custom and humanity, and had to content themselves with glaring at him on the highways and pointing their fingers and making scornful utterances.

"She was such a nice lady!"—they said among themselves. Everybody loved her, and performed various neighborly offices in her behalf. One kind-hearted young woman spent day after day by her bedside, allievating pain, soothing the patient to rest, tenderly providing for every want, and making happy for the sufferer the closing days of life.

"If only her relatives were alive!"—muttered the disaffected ones.—"Wouldn't Underhill catch it!" But her last surviving relative, an aunt, died while visiting the farm two years ago, and now lies under the sod at Sharon, N. Y. Sharon was the girlhood home of Mrs. Underhill. In those days she was blithe-hearted Nita Eldridge.

When it is hinted that Underhill wanted the grave at a spot that he could visit frequently, it is argued that the existing grave is out of sight and virtually in a wilderness, whereas on the road which Underhill journeys over to Plainfield every day, and but a short distance from the house, is a graveyard where the grave would be in constant view before him.

And so the people talk on, and Underhill seemingly cares not. Throughout the Valley, and at Washingtonville, and in villages farther on the road to Stirling and Morristown, and among North Plainfielders and others, gossip over the case is given free rein. But Underhill goes on with his daily tasks, and journeys back and forth at night-fall and day-break to and from his home, and gives no evidence save of untroubled serenity as to what the people have to say.

And up on the mountain-side, now bleak and dreary, the bodies of mother and daughter sleep on unconscious of it all forevermore. Above the rough mound of new earth the boughs of the forest trees creak and wail dismally in the blast. Near at hand the wind sighs through a group of pines. Slanting upward is the mountain-side, chilly March mists wreathing its summit. Beyond the sobbing pines rolling meadows stretch away to the farm-house. Sloping onward in the distance, beyond the roadway, are other fields, and yonder is a faint glimpse of water—a placid stream that creeps along to the rocky ice-clad gorge where plunge and splash and roar Wetumpka Falls.

Whatever of bickering, whatever of strife, whatever of injustice and inhumanity, may have been left behind, the death-glazed eye need never know. The hands that were loved are vanished; the voices that were sweetest music to the ear are stilled. The bodies are dead: what matters it where they lie, so they repose in God's broad acre. In the spring-time the fragrant wood violet and dainty wild lily of the valley will bloom about the grave on the mountain-side. The mound will be flecked with patches of sunlight, sifted through waving boughs of green. The trees will softly rustle, as if in lullaby, and the pines will chant in requiem over the dust that has returned to the earth which gave it. And the little rills and tiny cascades purling down the hill-side will murmur notes of liquid sweetness and purity, and all through the summer wild birds will carol in the branches overhead, and insects will chirp in the grasses round about; and all nature will be at peace with God. And the silvery stream in the distance will lend its gleam of quiet to the restful picture, and the grassy fields will wave drowsily in the breeze, and the hills shutting in that peaceful spot will lift up their everlasting heads to the bluest and calmest of skies, and from even the grandeur of the distant gorge and its noisy cataract will float gentlest murmurs of singing waters. What more lovely retreat for weary, life-worn mortal!—the busy world afar off; the noisy, humdrum cities shut from view; everything near to nature's heart; everything near to heaven!

Do not the dead verily rest in green pastures, and beside still waters? Is that grave a neglected, a forsaken one, that has so much of beauty and peace surrounding it? In the fall of the year, the leaves will tenderly shroud the habitation of the dead, till another chill winter be past, and the mild and gentle spring has come again. And so the years will roll on, and so the dead will rest, undisturbed by aught that man can say or do, until the Resurrection.

Yet human passions rage as ever, among the people; and bitterness of spirit, and warfare of opinion, prevail. And motives are questioned, and strife is engendered, and unhappiness and weariness and wretchedness wax great. And whether it be seed-time, or harvest, and whether it be a time for mirth or a time for mourning, earthly temperaments cease not their chafing, and weary hearts cannot be rid of their troubles. Only the spirits of the departed are at rest, and there be troublous times even above the frail dust which they have left behind. Vanity and vexation are on every hand. In sweetest rest lies the silent clay beneath the sod; but instead of balm and ointment for the wounds of the living, mankind makes other wounds.

"Vanitas vanitatum!"—dixit Ecclesiastes.
—"Vanitas vanitatum, et omnia vanitas."

He Hopes as All Hope, That the Sound of That Whistle Will Seldom be Heard.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I reside in a neighboring city, but for some weeks past my duties have called me frequently to Plainfield, I have been greatly pleased with your beautiful city, as well as with its intelligent and hospitable citizens. This is certainly a delightful place in which to live. But even in a beautiful city like Plainfield an intelligent observer sees some things not pleasant to look upon, and hears some sounds not the most agreeable to the ear.

For example: every day that I have been here for some time past my sympathetic nature has been aroused by the bawling of a poor cow whose calf had been taken from her, and perchance sold to the cruel butcher. The poor cow has seemingly been heart-broken over her great loss, and has frequently given expression of her great grief in many deep, sonorous bawls, which are enough to melt any heart into tenderness and call forth expressions of the deepest sympathy.

To-day, while listening with emotion to her deep-toned lamentations of grief over the loss of her offspring, I ventured to express my sympathy for the poor cow to an old friend of yours, and wondered how any person could be so cruel as to deprive her of her darling calf, and thus break her heart with grief, when your friend exclaimed: "Why, my dear man, that is not a cow lowing for her calf, that is the new 'fire alarm whistle' which the Common Council and Board of Fire Engineers have been trying with a view of purchasing for the city."

Well, well, well! I confess I was surprised! What a relief that intelligence was to my poor sympathetic nature! Here my heart had been throbbing all this time with pity for that poor cow in her plaintive wailings for her offspring, and behold, after all, it was not a cow, but simply an unfeeling, inanimate object—a deep-toned fire alarm whistle!

I see since by THE PRESS that the Common Council and Board of Fire Engineers have accepted the alarm whistle; and hereafter the ears of the Plainfielders will be greeted with its sonorous tones and plaintive wails, informing them that some building is on fire.

I hope no member of the fire department will mistake its urgent calls for the lowing of a cow, as I did. But really, your Councilmen must have been raised on dairy farms, and fallen in love with the lowing of cows, or they would have chosen a whistle with a different tone. Hoping however, the new fire whistle's calls to the fire department for active duty will be few and far apart.

I remain,
LITERAL.

The Cornell Mill Strike.

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 13.—The Cornell mill strike is still on, only 100 out of 960 looms running. The weavers are very determined.

THE climate of England and Ireland is peculiarly adapted to the spinning of fine linen yarn, on account of the prevailing moisture; hence it comes that Germany, whose production consists mainly of heavy linens, must send to England for all her fine yarns, the flax of which, however, is grown largely in Belgium, Holland and Russia.

UNLEAVENED BREAD.

Hebrew Bakers Are Three Months Preparing for the Passover.

Over three thousand years ago the Israelites made their exodus from bondage under Egyptian rulers, and ever since that time the week following the fifteenth day of the first Hebrew month, the month of Nison, has been set aside for commemoration of their departure. It was on the night of the fourteenth of Nison that the Hebrews, now numbering three million, were led to freedom by Moses. In chapters twelve and thirteen of Genesis the manner of celebration on the first night of the feast is partly told, and there it is commanded that unleavened bread be eaten on the first night and no leaven be kept in the house at any time during the week. This is in remembrance of the fact that the Jews in their hurry to leave Egypt were forced to take along unleavened bread, which they had to bake in the sun. A great many Israelites have a separate set of dishes to be used once a year during this week only, and those who have not an extra set of dishes scour out their dishes thoroughly. In Europe, when they happen to have any bread or other sort of leaven in the house the housewife locks the pantry and hands over the key to some old Christian friend of hers to keep till the feast is over.

The making of these unleavened cakes called matzos has come to be quite an industry in this country, says the Times-Star of Cincinnati. For three months before the feast of passover the matzos bakers are busy, and nearly eight million matzos are baked in this city from the middle of January to the middle of April. This represents about four hundred and forty-five thousand dollars.

Said the head baker at a large bakery: "We make about eight thousand matzos a day, for which we use four barrels of flour."

"Do you use the ordinary flour?"

"Yes, but it is the finest quality, and has to be examined by a Hebrew, who judges whether it is satisfactory. We buy ours in this city. Then the water used must be put into a vessel before sundown and remain to settle for the whole night. This bakery is for baking unleavened bread only, and every thing is especially got for this bakery, even to the rags we use."

"How do you prepare the flour?"

"We take, say, fifteen pounds of flour, and, mixing it with water, we put it into a copper kettle, where it is thoroughly mixed. Then this man, the kneader, takes it, and on this block by means of pressing on this heavy beam, he kneads the dough to the proper cohesiveness." The reporter saw a block, on top of which was a beam four feet long, fastened by a spring at the back of the block; and there was a man jumping on and off the beam, so as to make a sort of artificial kneader, the beam rising when the man jumped off.

"It is then taken to the next room," said the baker, "and about a third of it at a time is passed seven times through these rollers, which, you see, are arranged like a clothes-wringer's rollers, only these are iron. Having been so pressed, it is of the proper thickness. Care has to be taken here that while one piece of dough is being pressed the other pieces should not become too hard; therefore a man is continually beating them. The piece of dough, now a strip ten inches wide by ten feet long, is put under the hands of a man who uses a roller much like the ordinary dough roller, except that there are sharp projections sticking out all around to make little holes in the cakes. Next to him is a man with a sharpened wheel which he uses to cut the strip into pieces, each the length of a cake. These pieces are put into an oven, and in two minutes they are done."

And the gentleman handed the reporter a matzo, which was almost tasteless except for the slight browning it had received.

"Are these cakes made the same way in Europe?"

"No; abroad there is more hard work. Women knead the dough by hand, and the cakes are thicker than we make them here.

"Matzos cost about ten cents a pound, and the meal which we make by grinding broken matzos costs eleven cents a pound. We make one hundred pounds of meal a day."

In Tam O'Shanter Style.

Until recently it was the popular belief that a church in a Morgan County cemetery was haunted, says the Savannah News. A belated horseman took refuge in the church during a storm, when he saw the form of a woman standing in the pulpit, gesticulating in a threatening manner and at the same moment an unearthly laugh broke the stillness of the surroundings. Hastily beating a retreat, the man mounted his horse and was in the act of fleeing, when he felt an icy clutch from behind. Putting spurs to his frightened steed, he galloped off with the object still clinging on behind, its demoniacal laugh still ringing in his ears. Almost crazed by fright, he frantically drew rein at the nearest neighbor's and when his arrival was made known his friend found an old harmless idiot, commonly known as "Crazy Jane," still clinging to him, seated behind him on the horse. She it was who had given the church the reputation of being haunted.

Eaters of Earth.

Much has been written about the earth-eating tribes of various countries, but it is not generally known that the inhabitants of Pesadova, a village of Portugal, have for generations eaten a variety of earth found in the neighborhood. It is said that any of them leaving home is afflicted with a singular malady with gastric symptoms unless he be provided with a supply of the earth. The reason of this is probably the presence of arsenic in the earth, which is known to produce these singular effects upon its habitual consumers.

As Bad as the Yankee.

In the case of thirty-four patent medicines and articles of nourishment found badly adulterated by the government chemist of France, thirty-one had the printed statement: "We warrant the inclosed to be wholly and absolutely free from adulteration."

AN OLD GUN.

A War-Time Outlaw's Story Recalled by a Revolutionary Relic.

It is more than six feet long—six feet seven inches. Pretty good length for a gun barrel? And a shotgun at that!

Standing in the corner of McQueen's restaurant on Decatur street is this old revolutionary relic, says the Atlanta Constitution. There is no such shotgun in Atlanta as that. It was purchased by Mr. Donald McQueen in Charleston, S. C., in 1823. It was pretty well worn when he purchased it, having seen service in the revolutionary war.

It was a fine gun in its day, finished with the finest of flint and steel locks, and besides the Tories that it had slain, deer, turkeys, squirrels and birds turned their toes heavenward when the old blunderbuss was brought to bear upon them.

During the last days of the late war there existed a gang of notorious outlaws in Robinson County, N. C., known as the "Lowry gang." One of the members of this band of bushwhackers was Henry Berry. He was as brave as a lion and as reckless as—well, he was an out-and-out free-booter, who regarded neither God nor man.

He got on a spree one night, and in his maranding around the country he came in contact with a party of soldiers. He retreated at once to his stronghold, but carried with him this old gun, which he had pilfered from the McQueen homestead. Fearing that he would be overtaken and captured, he prepared to defend himself. Placing his foot on the hammer, he blew in the muzzle of the gun to see if it was loaded. As a matter of course it was. Fifteen blue whistlers went crashing through Berry's skull and the country was well rid of one dare-devil outlaw.

The old gun had nothing to do with the next tragedy, but there was a close connection between it and the case. A little tallow-faced fellow named Jim Donehoo read in the newspapers the offer of a reward for the capture of Steve Lowry, who became chief of the band of outlaws after Berry's death. He tramped all the way from his plantation home in Alabama to North Carolina. The reward offered was six thousand dollars. Donehoo learned of the whereabouts of Lowry and effected the capture of the outlaw by deliberately shooting him. Donehoo drew the reward from the State; the Lowry gang became a thing of the past, and Donehoo, the little Alabamian, purchased a farm in North Carolina with the money that was awarded him for killing Lowry. He settled down to lead a quiet and peaceable life. But he was not destined to enjoy the fruits of his labor uninterruptedly.

Steve Lowry left a little boy, who was imbued with his father's fearless and undaunted spirit. This boy, even though he was but a child at the time of the tragedy, swore to avenge his father's death. He endeavored to keep his word, but was unfortunate.

Donehoo was justified. He killed the father, drew the reward and killed the son twenty years after in self-defense. That is what the coroner's jury said.

The old gun, which is only a link in the chain of circumstances that make up this strange story, is now a breech-loader, with several inches of the original barrel cut off. And it is still six feet seven inches long.

A Pathetic Story.

"I have heard and read many pathetic stories," said Senator Hear to a Washington Star reporter recently, "but none of them ever awoke so much sad sympathy as one which Prof. Gallaudet related the other day. The professor has a favorite pupil, a little deaf mute boy who is exceptionally bright. Mr. Gallaudet asked him if he knew the story of George Washington and the cherry tree. With his nimble fingers the little one said he did, and then he proceeded to repeat it. The noiseless gesticulations continued until the boy had informed the professor of the elder Washington's discovery of the mutilated tree and of his quest for the mutilator. 'When George's father asked him who hacked his favorite cherry tree,' signaled the voiceless child, 'George put his hatchet in his left hand—' 'Stop,' interrupted the professor. 'Where do you get your authority for saying he took the hatchet in his left hand?' 'Why,' responded the boy, who knew nothing of speech, 'he needed his right hand to tell his father that he cut the tree.'"

A LITTLE KING.

Mother will put her work to go,
Even if dough is kneading dough,
For she can't work you know,
When the baby cries.

Father will lay his paper down
And at the trouble never frown,
But gently trot the boy to town,
When the baby cries.

Sister will leave her fancy work,
And tending baby never shirk,
But on her face a smile will lurk,
When the baby cries.

Brother will leave all of the boys,
And bat and ball and other toys,
And count it one of his greatest joys,
When the baby cries.

And so he rules us one and all,
A king—whose scepter is his call.
Before his throne he bids us fall,
And so the baby cries.

Of course there's some who sulk and pout
Or fret and scold as if the gout
From good temper had put them out,
When the baby cries.

But this adds fuel to the fire,
And puts you deeper in the mire,
To stop his music he'll not hire,
When he wants to cry.

And so 'tis much the better plan,
To simply do the best you can.
And think he soon will be a man,
And may be he won't cry.

And if his music does not cease,
But drowns your voice with loud increase,
Just kindly say—more, if you please,
And let the baby cry.

—Luella M. Stutzman, in Western Rural.

A SMALL BOY'S PRANKS.

Some of the Bits of Mischief He Can Think Of.

THERE is no time at which a small boy of, say four or five years of age, is riper for mischief than when he is all alone. In fact, one small curly head is better than half a dozen when novelties in mischief are to be wrought. If a man is left alone he will smoke or read; if a woman is left alone — we don't mean alone in the world—but alone in the house with no one to talk to, she will practice on the piano, or work the ends of her fingers off embroidering impossible animals and birds on a tidy.

But with a small boy it is entirely different. He can only pass the time pleasantly by engaging in a series of pursuits that are as full of fun to him as they are totally devoid of it to his parents. A boy at such a tender age has a very queer appreciation of what constitutes fun; but if he can enjoy what to him is the quintessence of fun, what difference does it make to him if older people are pleased to regard it in a different light?

It is difficult to understand the mental process by which the small boy conceives it to be bloomingly pleasant and mirth-provoking to mix a lot of lath nails, keys and buttons in his father's smoking tobacco. Yet the small boy does it, even when he knows a possible whipping is involved. A grown person would never think of indulging in such a freak when the comfort of his anatomy was involved—an adult would not do it unless the risk carried with it a pretty good chance of realizing a monetary reward.

Having mixed the nails, buttons and keys with the tobacco, about as thoroughly as a painter would mix paint, he returns the box to its proper place, and turns his attention to something else.

Noticing the feather duster on the table, he begins sweeping the open fireplace with it; but as he doesn't seem to be doing any damage, it soon ceases to be enjoyable; so he dips the duster in the sink, and, having got it thoroughly saturated, begins swabbing it around on top of the hot stove, just to hear it sizzle. This affords him rare sport, and causes his features to break into a series of pleasant smiles, and he continues to smile until the aroma of the consuming feather duster is a little too much for him. Then he beats off the charred feathers and the cat appears. The cat does not come too near, for only the other day he lathered her face with his father's lathering brush, and got so much soap in her eyes that she madly struggled from his hold before he could begin the operation of shaving her with the safety razor. He finally gets the poor quadruped into the butler's pantry, and, having closed both the kitchen and dining-room door, wonders how a black cat will look whitened with flour. So he thrusts the feather duster into the flour, and, stirring it around for awhile, hauls it out and begins banging the cat with it at long range. About as fast as the cat can shake the flour off, the boy can put it on. If it were self-raising flour it would be all the cat's nine lives are worth to venture out in the rain. As rough as it is on the cat, it is rougher on the flour, or rather on the bread-winner of the family, who will probably go right on eating biscuits made of that pulverized wheat without suspecting the mill it has been put through by that darling, golden-haired boy, the hope of his life, and the terror of his pocket-book.

From the flour he gracefully drifts into the dining-room, where he climbs upon the sideboard, and empties the contents of the salt-cellar into the sugar-bowl, and mixes the two in such a way that that night his father will suggest that they purchase their coffee at a different place, or else try some new-fangled coffee-pot. Having eaten all the raisins and dried currants, he proceeds to pour the English walnuts into his father's boots, that the dignitary may crack either his toes, the nuts, or both, when he attempts to put them on the next time.

It would, perhaps, be very difficult for the average thinker to account for the element of fun in the act of pouring water down a furnace register. It is even impossible to explain the circumstances that would lead a boy to think of such an experiment, and how he could realize a sensation of pleasure from it. But he does, though, if we can arrive at such a conclusion from a swift study of the smile that wreathes his molasses-painted face, because he goes to and fro from the sink to the register with a little tin dipper, and regrets that he hasn't the physical strength to manipulate an ordinary pail.

Having exhausted the possibilities of the register, he goes into the kitchen and amuses himself by standing at the top of the cellar stairs and throwing down all the coal contained in the kitchen scuttle, one lump at a time, which stretches the sport into a good half hour, and litters up the place with coal to such an extent that it can only be brought together again through the medium of the gardener and the garden rake.

The pride with which his parents regard the high Dutch clock in the hall may be approximately appreciated when it is stated that it is being paid for on the installment plan, and that the head of the house is paying for it by going without a restaurant luncheon daily and trying to feel that he is reveling on the apex of high Olympus while removing the damask wrapper from a home-made sandwich and a couple of pieces of frozen pie. Yet the small boy stands at the other end of the hall and tries his best to fracture the face of this rare old time-piece by directing arrows at it from the bow which his father bought him from a polite Indian at Niagara Falls. He doesn't succeed in hitting the clock, but he does succeed in disfiguring the wall paper all around it, which is simply equal to holding a note for one thrashing, which will be paid him when due, and that will be when the marks on the wall are discovered. He then changes the keys from one door to another, and takes quantities of vegetables into the library and stows them away behind the rows of books, where they will probably be discovered after they have sprouted, and sent their tender emerald shoots over the books to gain the benison of a breath of fresh air and a garland of dancing sunshine.

And so it is the small boy of tender years kills time and the happiness of the household. And so he will continue to do, even though his parents cobweb and gridiron him with switch marks until he is striped like a zebra and checked like an English ulster. The switch will not cause him to see the folly of purloining the beans for his bean-shooter instead of enjoying them honestly at the table, and still remaining whole in the matter of anatomy. And even after he has been whipped for nailing his father's high hat to the wall he is not half so sad at heart as at the doleful moment when he realizes that he has a fine ...tty-blower but not a bit of putty. —R. K. Munkittrick, in Once a Week.

Chinese Music.

The musical art of a people who represent one-fifth of the earth's population ought to be studied, if not for the sake of æsthetic pleasure at least in the interest of scientific knowledge. Yet there is scarcely a department in the history or philosophy of music concerning which the information to be found in the books is so unsatisfactory as that of Chinese music. Even a historian of the thoroughness and profundity of Ambros, after devoting many pages to an attempt to elucidate the Chinese theory, seems willing to believe the first traveler who sets down the modern practice of the art as nothing but crude, barbaric, unregulated noise. Crude, barbaric and noisy Chinese music certainly is, but not unregulated. Even the little music which can be heard on any holiday in the Chinese quarter of New York will serve to disclose to a discriminating ear that it is nothing if not methodical. The difficulty on the part of the historians has been that they have never come in contact with the Chinese, and therefore have had to depend on the descriptions of travelers and missionaries touching the practical side of the art. Correctly to apprehend music, however, requires special qualifications of education and natural gifts, and these have been possessed by so small a minority of those who have written about China that they are scarcely worth enumerating.—Century.

The Best Things In Cookery

Are always made with the ROYAL BAKING POWDER. It imparts that peculiar lightness, sweetness and flavor noticed in the finest rolls, biscuit, cake, etc., and which the most expert pastry cooks declare is unobtainable by the use of any other raising agent.

The ROYAL BAKING POWDER, besides rendering the food more palatable and wholesome, is, because of its higher leavening power, the most economical.

The ROYAL makes more and better food than any other baking powder because it is the purest.

New Orleans Citizens Indignant Over the Verdict.

THE HENNESSY JURY HISSED.

The Prisoners Remanded to Answer Another Charge of a Trivial Nature.

The Jurymen Will Not Discuss the Case. The Committee of Fifty Hold a Secret Meeting—Lynch Law Openly Advocated by Some of the Dead Chief's Intimate Friends.

NEW ORLEANS, March 13.—The trial of nine Sicilians for the assassination of Chief of Police D. C. Hennessy at 11:25 o'clock on the night of October 15, which has occupied the time of Judge Baker's division of the Criminal District Court since February 16, was concluded last evening, the jury bringing in a verdict of not guilty as to six of the accused, and failed to agree upon a verdict as to the other three.

When the jury handed in their verdict Judge Baker looked at it for some moments before he handed it over to Minute Clerk Screven. There was apprehensive silence while these preliminaries were going on. The prisoners stood up and there was a look of infinite woe pictured on the face of Macheca and some of the others.

The Jurymen Looked Careworn.

The jury looked more concerned than anyone in the room. Their faces were deathly pale and showed plainly the effect of their deliberations. Chief Clerk Screven read the verdict in a firm voice. As the verdict was read there was an audible expression of surprise and dissatisfaction. Judge Baker immediatly discharged the jurymen and ordered the prisoners remanded, as there was still another charge against them. The court then adjourned.

Jeered at by the Crowd.

When the jurymen left the court room they were surrounded by reporters, but none of them would discuss the case or how they reached a verdict. They kept together until they reached Lafayette square, where they were jeered at by a crowd who had already learned of the verdict.

Great Indignation Over the Verdict.

There is great indignation throughout the city over the verdict. There is another indictment against the accused, but it is for a lesser offence, and as it is concerns the same transaction the district attorney will have to enter a nolle prosequi.

The Committee of Order, known as the Committee of Fifty, appointed by the mayor soon after the killing of Chief Hennessy, held a secret meeting, and it is known that another conference of the intimate friends of Hennessy was held somewhere else.

It is impossible to learn what was done at these secret meetings, but the popular excitement is so intense that lynch law is openly advocated as the solution of the matter, on the ground that repeated trials have proved that it is impossible to convict Italians of murder.

DANGER IN THE FOG.

Several Serious Accidents on the Water Around New York.

NEW YORK, March 14.—The very thick weather which prevailed during the night and morning on the rivers and bays rendered navigation dangerous and all vessels were forced to proceed with the utmost precaution. Despite this precaution several serious accidents were reported.

Pilot boat Hope No. 1 ran ashore at Sandy Hook at 1:20 o'clock. Her crew were rescued by the crew of Life Saving Station No. 1. The boat of the rescuing party was stove in and the belated mariners had considerable difficulty in reaching the shore.

The Hope lies about fifty feet from the shore, just abreast of the fishing smack Scotia, which went to pieces last year. She is lurching heavily and her rudder is gone, as well as a portion of her keel, while the deck boat has been washed off and smashed on the rocks.

THE PRESIDENTIAL OUTLOOK.

Ex-Senator Ingalls Thinks Cleveland and Harrison Will Head the Tickets.

BOSTON, Mass., March 14.—Ex-Senator Ingalls of Kansas when asked who would be the opposing candidates in 1892, replied:

"Cleveland will be the next nominee of the Democratic party no matter what views he may express on the tariff, the silver or other questions. I believe that Mr. Harrison will be renominated and that he is entitled to it by the unwritten laws of parties and by the precedent of our political system. Hill is not mentioned in the West as a candidate."

In regard to the attitude of the parties on the silver question Mr. Ingalls said:

"If the Republican party nominates an anti-silver coinage candidate in 1892 and inserts a plank of the same character in its platform, it is doubtful if it could carry two States west of the Alleghanies. The gravity of the situation is not fully apprehended or appreciated in the East."

BEGGED TO BE KILLED.

A Man Run Over by a Train Attempts to Beat Out His Brains.

EAST MADISON, N. J., March 14.—While passing the station on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad last night, Samuel Muerner, a blacksmith, fell from a train on which he was a passenger and disappeared beneath the wheels. The train was stopped, and expecting to find the man dead, the trainhands ran back.

When they reached him they found he was still conscious, but so badly hurt that was praying for death, and was attempting to kill himself by beating his head with a large stone. He inflicted several wounds upon his scalp before he could be picked up, and when he was moved he implored the men to kill him. He was placed on the train and taken to St. Michael's Hospital in Newark.

LINGO ON THE STAND.

He Explains to the Jury About the Blood on His Clothes.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 14.—The feature of the day's session of the Miller murder trial was the taking of the stand by Lingo in his own behalf. Prior to being called Robert Jones, a ten-year-old colored schoolboy said he saw him washing blood from his hands at a pump in Merchantville on the morning of the murder.

When called Lingo appeared cool and answered the questions without getting confused. Witness showed the jury how he had cut his hand with the stalk knife on the day of the murder and admitted that he went to the pump near the school house to wash off the blood. The blood on his clothes came from his hand.

A Saratoga Man Murdered in Peru.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 14.—Miss C. M. Kinne of Saratoga has received news of the murder of her brother, Samuel Whitney Kinne, near Lima, Peru. Mr. Kinne is the son of Manuel Kinne of Herkimer County. He is an engineer and went to Peru last July as assistant superintendent on a large construction job in the employ of the Eastern Bridge Company, to work on a bridge about fifty miles from Lima. Five other men accompanied him, two of whom died of fever. The other three men and Kinne were on their way home when the latter was stabbed by a native and soon afterward died.

More Trouble for Barondess.

NEW YORK, March 14.—Joseph Barondess, the leader of the cloakmakers' strike, now confined in the Jamaica jail for the vitriol outrage, has been charged by Mr. Popkins and Mr. Fischel, cloak manufacturers of this city, with having asked and obtained of them $100 each to settle the strikes in their respective establishments recently. Warrants have been issued for his arrest on charges of extortion.

In less than an hour the hotel and several adjoining building were burned, causing a loss of $30,000. Twenty-five guests in the hotel barely escaped with their lives, some jumping from the second-story windows. Two weeks ago an unsuccessful attempt was made to set fire to the hotel.

PARNELL ASKS AID

He Appeals to Irish-Americans to Help His Envoys.

FULL TEXT OF THE DOCUMENT.

He Says the Patriotic Party is to be Entirely Reconstructed.

He Classifies the Seceders and Will Lop Off the Rotten Branches—Fortune, He Says, Has Unveiled the Danger—The Irish Leader Hopes to Win Freedom by Constitutional Means.

LONDON, March 14.—Mr. Parnell has made public his long-expected manifesto. The full text of the document follows:

HOUSE OF COMMONS,
Saturday, March 13.

TO THE IRISH PEOPLE OF AMERICA:

Fellow Countrymen—In 1880 and subsequent years you assisted me powerfully by your influence upon American public opinion, and with your generous financial support to create the great movement of the Land League.

Without your aid, so freely given and so constantly maintained, Ireland could not, for one moment, have made head against her oppressors.

Still less could she have attained the singular position of power, and the promise of success, which she has occupied during the last five years.

At the instant when victory seemed near and certain the hasty and meddlesome interferences of the English politicians in the complex organization of our party, aided by a sudden movement among some young raw recruits, eagerly seconded by a few malcontents, office-seekers and envious persons, who crept into our ranks, temporarily destroyed the unity of our forces, and sapped the independence of many Irish representatives.

His Task to Restore Unity.

It now becomes my task to restore this unity and reconstruct our movement, lopping off all unsound materials, taking effectual precautions against the admission in the future, into our army of any weak, treacherous or self-seeking elements.

Fortune has unveiled this danger and given space for this reconstruction before the general election, and after the disclosure has brought about a realization of the inefficiency of Mr. Gladstone's proposed solution of the situation to secure legitimate liberty, happiness and prosperity to your brothers and sisters in Ireland. This disclosure was timely and all-important.

The delegates, who at my request are now crossing the ocean to your shores, are well qualified with experience, ability and patriotism to fully explain and defend my position, which all that is sound, courageous and reliable at home have assumed with me at this crisis.

I commend them to your hospitality, and I am confident that you will extend to them the most favorable reception and hearing. They are each and all well tried soldiers, who have constantly distinguished themselves in our war against coercion and British misrule, and who, despite intimidation and influences of the most unscrupulous and far-reaching character, have bravely defended me during those dark and trying moments.

With a confidence even greater than in 1880, I appeal to you once more to assist me in quelling this mutiny and disloyalty to Ireland; to help me in securing a really independent Parliamentary party, so that we may make one more, even though it be our very last, effort, to win freedom and prosperity for our nation by constitutional means. Your faithful servant,

CHARLES STEWART PARNELL.

SHADOWING PARNELL.

The McCarthyites Engage a Detective to Follow the Irish Leader.

LONDON, March 14.—The McCarthyites are making every effort to defeat the object of the visit of Mr. Parnell's deputation to America. For about two weeks past a private detective has been engaged in following Mr. Parnell in Ireland and England with the view of getting up additional scandal about Mr. Parnell and Mrs. O'Shea, to be telegraphed to America about the same time as the arrival of the envoys.

It is said that the detective has gathered evidence showing that Mr. Parnell has kept up his relations with Mrs. O'Shea the same as before the divorce suit. Mr. Parnell's friends neither deny nor admit the statement, but aver that Mr. Parnell intends to marry Mrs. O'Shea as soon as the decree of divorce is made absolute. They also claim that Mrs. O'Shea and her daughters being without a protector, Mr. Parnell is justified in looking after them.

It is said that Mr. Parnell delayed the issue of his manifesto until after an interview with Thomas Power O'Connor, who went to Brighton to meet Mr. Parnell directly upon landing.

Comment on the Manifesto.

LONDON, March 14.—The Post thinks it will require deeds rather than words to open the purse of the American housemaid to Parnell. When he has shown to be still dictator of electoral Ireland he may succeed in getting money from Irish-Americans, but for the purposes of faction fighting his delegates are not likely to secure much assistance.

O'Brien Adjudicated a Bankrupt.

DUBLIN, March 14.—William O'Brien, M. P., has been adjudicated a bankrupt on petition of Lord Salisbury. Mr. O'Brien sued Lord Salisbury for libel and slander, lost his case and incurred costs amounting to $8,500. Lord Salisbury has been pursuing Mr. O'Brien for many months for these costs.

More Conductors Discharged.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 14.—Ten more Michigan Central passenger conductors have been dismissed, making 15 in all. The discharges were brought about by "spotters," who obtained free rides by claiming to be poor and out of work.

Slaves Strike for Freedom.

LONDON, March 14.—A dispatch just received from Zanzibar says the negroes of the Comoro Islands have revolted and the Sultan of the islands has fled for safety. The slaves have declared their freedom.

Two Miners Crushed to Death.

GREAT POOL PLAYING.

The Finest Game on Record Played at the Syracuse Tournament.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 14.—The greatest game of pool on record occurred in the National tournament last night between Powers and DeOro. The championship was at stake and also a $250 wager made by Keough and the Cuban.

The score ran evenly until after the fifth inning when powers struck a bad streak and went rapidly behind DeOro, who took advantage of every misplay until he was 34 points ahead.

Then came a nervy up-hill game, the champion getting the best of every frame to the fourteenth inning, when, by a run of 15, he crept two in the lead amid the cheers of 1,200 spectators.

The score ran neck and neck, standing 146 to 145 in DeOro's favor in the 20th inning. A bad shot by the Cuban gave Powers the game. Score, Powers 150, DeOro 146.

By this victory Powers retains the championship. DeOro will have to play a tie with Clearwater for second place.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

Fifteen Employes of a Brush Factory Fall to the Floor Unconscious.

READING, Pa., March 14.—Fifteen employes in the brush factory of Charles B. Miller, in Shoemakersville, this county, had a very narrow escape from asphyxiation about noon.

While the hands, numbering 23 in all, were at work on the second floor a sickening odor pervaded the building and in a few minutes 15 young men and women fell to the floor unconscious. The others managed to reach the windows and let in some fresh air. After much difficulty all were revived.

The deadly sulphur which had overcome the men and women came from the boiler, where the gas had exploded, shutting the damper. It is believed that but for the fact that some of the hands had strength enough to open the windows all would have been suffocated.

ACQUITTED THE BOY.

A Judge Says that Killing With a Baseball Bat is No Crime.

ALTOONA, March 14.—Boyd Gilmore, 16 years old, who was arrested in this city and taken to jail at Hollidaysburg for killing his uncle, Hugh Stewart, on Nov. 13, 1890, by striking him on the head with a baseball bat, was tried yesterday. After listening to a few witnesses Judge Dean refused to hear any more testimony, dismissed the case and acquitted the boy.

The Judge held that if the man had been killed with a knife or a revolver it would have been murder in the second degree, but as the killing was done with a baseball bat, which, he said, was not a deadly weapon, no case could be made against Boyd.

The Negro Orator to Go to England.

BOSTON, March 14.—Rev. John S. Smallwood of Virginia, the young negro orator has signed a contract with Right Hon. W. H. Bryan and Gen. Chas. H. DENVER, Col., March 14.—This city is without a mayor. The Supreme Court has denied a rehearing in the mayoralty case. The present mayor, Wolfe Londoner, was a few weeks ago declared to be illegally elected, after holding his office nearly a year.

JAKE KILRAIN WINS

He Knocks Out Godfrey in the Forty-Third Round.

BOTH MEN WERE IN FINE FORM.

They Fought Viciously and Did Some Clever Drinking and Stopping.

Godfrey Worked Hard on Kilrain's Heart, but His Blows Were Not Effective—Kilrain Punishes His Colored Rival Severely in Several Rounds—A Large Crowd of Sporting Men See the Battle.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 15.—The fight between Jake Kilrain of Baltimore and George Godfrey of Boston for $5,000, $4,500 to the winner, drew a large but select crowd to the California Athletic Club last night. Among the prominent sporting men present were Joe Thompson, the Australian bookmaker; Joe Harris, backer of Jim Hall; Parson Davies, Millionaire Jacky Baldwin, Jim Corbett and Major Broughlin.

Both men showed up in fine form. Kilrain weighed 190 pounds and Godfrey 174. Kilrain's seconds were Jim Hall and Mulloon. Godfrey was seconded by Peter Jackson and Frank Steele of Boston. The mill began sharp at 9 p. m.

Story of the Fight.

First Round—Godfrey started in on the aggressive, but his strong, left leads for Kilrain's head were cleverly dodged. In return, Kilrain got in with right and left on Godfrey's forehead, and followed this with heavy lunging of Godfrey's head. It was Kilrain's round.

Second Round—This round was a fine exhibition of science. Godfrey clinched whenever in close. Godfrey clinched.

Third Round—Opened by Kilrain swinging his left on Godfrey's jaw.

Fourth Round—Kilrain narrowly missed landing a tremendous left-hander on the negro's face. He then rushed Godfrey repeatedly, the latter saving himself by clinching. Kilrain's advantage in each was pronounced in this round.

Fifth Round—Again Godfrey led with his left, but failed to reach. The round was a succession of clinches by the negro to avoid Kilrain's blows.

From the sixth to the ninth round the honors were even, the men clinching several times.

A Display of Courtesies.

Ninth Round—Kilrain gave Godfrey a sharp downward blow on the chest, and received a swish on the jaw in return. During the clinch Godfrey used his right on Kilrain's head.

This angered Kilrain, and Godfrey begged his pardon. Kilrain testily replied: "That three times you've begged my pardon, now you are aiming for the spot all the same."

The next six rounds showed some clever ducking and stopping by both men and Kilrain manifested his cleverness by clinching at critical moments.

They Fight Viciously.

Sixteenth Round—The men went at it, hammer and tongs, and fought viciously. Kilrain got Godfrey's face and neck, and hit him repeatedly on the face with both hands. Godfrey was now pretty weary.

When time was called for the 17th round both men were too tired for a few seconds to do much, but there was heavy fighting, with honors even, in the following rounds.

Godfrey is Groggy.

Twenty-first Round—Kilrain started out to finish the man, giving him a right-hander in the eye and jaw. Godfrey laughed, though groggy, and scored several good blows. Then Kilrain hammered the negro on the mouth, chin and eyes, but the punishment seemed to have little effect.

Twenty-second Round—Kilrain fought Godfrey to the ropes, hitting him on the head and body. Godfrey turned his back on him and showed no return.

Twenty-fourth Round—Kilrain's exertions told on him, and Godfrey scored two blows on Kilrain's jaw and one on the nose and one over the heart.

Twenty-fifth Round—Godfrey had a little the best of things.

Twenty-sixth Round—Kilrain, again started in as though to finish his man, and punished him throughout the entire round. Godfrey stood up gamely, however and took his medicine.

Thirtieth and Thirty-first Rounds—Godfrey took considerable punishment in both these rounds.

Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth Rounds—Stubborn fighting, with honors even. The next few rounds witnessed some dangerous rushes by Kilrain, which Godfrey repulsed, but he received terrible punishment.

Kilrain knocked out Godfrey in the forty-third round.

There was great excitement after the fight and sporting men were busy arranging another fight for Kilrain.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., March 14.—The proclamation issued in consequence of the "mad dog scare" on Tuesday, that all dogs must be muzzled, has resulted in the killing of many valuable dogs, a number of the people having allowed their dogs to go at large on the streets, where they were shot by the police. Many families refuse to allow their children to go to school until the dogs are exterminated.

How to Take It.

To "take time by the forelock" is a wise proceeding in the main, but there emergencies when the forelock is not available, and it will be found better as a rule to take time by the ever-reliable Waterbury, the latest series of which can always be found at Collier's, 3 Park avenue—where the time-machinery of the solar-system is kept in working order and is daily open to public inspection.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

NOT MARRIED, EVEN IN FUN.

Wall Street Discusses a Flirtation Between Mr. Carll and a Fair Unknown.

Last January Howard P. Frothingham, the broker, of 2 Wall street, who married Miss Julia Bedloe, of this city, discharged George Carll, his head clerk. Carll told people to whom he applied for a situation that Mr. Frothingham had discharged him because he was going to get married. This gave rise to a sensational story, involving an alleged mock marriage at Mr. Frothingham's home, which circulated freely in Wall street Thursday It was much exaggerated. The facts appear to be as follows:

Mr. Frothingham and Mr. Carll were clerks together in the same house years ago. When Mr. Frothingham got rich he gave Carll employment, and during the summer used to invite him occasionally to his summer home on Lake Hopatcong, where many Plainfielders have been entertained. Carll is 36 years old. Last July he met a young woman at Mr. Frothingham's. She was something of a protege of Mrs. Frothingham's, and is of a well known Yonkers family. She was about Carll's age. The two began a vigorous flirtation at sight, and the next afternoon after they met they joined a large boating party on the lake. Father Brady, a Catholic priest of the neighborhood, was one of the party.

The boat was no sooner off the dock before Mr. Carll exclaimed: "Now, May, we can get married. We've got Father Brady aboard with us." The young woman laughingly assented, and a good deal of badinage followed, in which Father Brady joined. They carried this further, and announced to the rest of the party that they had been married. The extent to which the joke was being carried vexed Mr. Frothingham, and he told them to "drop it."

The young woman reopened the subject when the party had returned to the house, and she and Carll talked so seriously about it that some of the party thought there was something in it, after all. At the dinner table a young girl fell to crying, and, when questioned, said:

"May said she was going to hold George to it."

The evening did n't pass pleasantly for anyone, and finally Mr. Frothingham personally showed Carll to his bedroom, and gave him some sharp advice. The next morning they returned to New York, but not before Mr. Frothingham had talked to the young woman after a fashion which caused her to go home.

In New York Carll kept up a correspondence with the young woman, and ran up a bill of $6 for telephone messages to Yonkers. Mr. Frothingham paid the bill. Carll seemed for a time uncertain whether he was married or not, and finally asked his employer for an increase of salary, saying he was engaged and was going to be married in the spring. The young woman's parents were much alarmed, and vainly begged their daughter to end the affair, and Mr. Frothingham, who was greatly vexed, finally discharged Carll.

HOW ANOTHER CITY IS BUILDING UP.

Electric Street Railway in Syracuse Increasing the Value of Real Estate and Growing Very Popular.

Syracuse, N. Y., resembles Plainfield in its topography, being a broad level city centring upon the New York Central Railroad which runs through it. The electric street cars start in the business centre and proceed in all directions to the suburbs. They run on the main thoroughfares, and the finest residences are those located on the streets which have been made popular by electric street car conveniences. The citizens of Syracuse are broad and progressive in their views, and their beautiful city has become famous for its substantial growth and the intelligent spirit of enterprise which has directed its development.

With these explanations the following letter will be better understood. It is a city in other respects like Plainfield ought to be and will be. Its progressive citizens secure the things they are determined to have because they are essential to the comfort, health and self respect of the city—the people of Plainfield must not be deterred by "spook" stories from notorious New York papers or any other similar source. The Council should give the people the street railway now, and then macadamize the streets from curb to curb—giving better driveways on each side of the track than are now provided in just the narrow middle.

OFFICE OF THE SYRACUSE CONSOLIDATED STREET RAILWAY COMPANY.

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 6th inst., making inquiry about the practical operation of electric railways, is duly received. One of the lines owned by this company has been in operation about two years with electricity as a motive power, using the Thomson-Houston System, with overhead wire construction. So well are we pleased with it that we are now rebuilding other lines to be equipped with electricity. The citizens all like the power, and universally want it on all our roads. At first there was great fear among horsemen, but our experience is that horses soon become accustomed to our car and pay no attention. Improved motors now being built by all the leading companies, do away with much of the noise, and we are now trying one that makes no more noise than a horse car.

We cannot compare the receipts of our electric road with former horse car receipts there, as that line was built new for this power. We believe, however, that the receipts are 50 per cent. greater than they would be by use of horses, as we make more rapid transit and people cannot afford to walk. You ask what effect does an electric road have upon the value of property along and near its line? Our road here passes over some of our best residence streets, and all along the line, and in all adjacent streets, property has greatly advanced in value since the building of this electric road. We are now re-building a line which reaches another excellent section of the city, and in anticipation of electric cars running there property is selling at better figures.

Very truly yours,
T. L. POOLE,
Secretary.

Assignment of a Former Plainfielder.

Daniel A. Woodhouse, formerly of this city, Thomas V. Foster, and James G. Burchell, composing the firm of D. A. Woodhouse & Co., dealers in fire department, railway, and mill supplies at 12 Barclay street, New York, made an assignment Thursday to Samuel K. Brown, without preference. They have a factory at 14 and 16 Plymouth street, Brooklyn, and a branch at Philadelphia.

Two judgments were entered against the firm before the assignment in favor of John J. Burchell for $2 242. The liabilities, it is said, will not exceed $25,000. Mr. Woodhouse furnishes most of the supplies for the Plainfield and North Plainfield fire departments. The last lots of hose in both the city and the borough, were purchased of him.

How much does a human hair weigh?
Can a pencil mark be weighed, and the weight expressed?

These questions will be answered in a practical way by Franklin S Smith at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, next Thursday evening. A great many interesting facts will be given, and illustrated by scales and balances. A chemist's balance will be used to weigh a hair and pencil mark.

SWEET SINGERS, PLAINFIELD BRED.

How the Misses Manning are Pictured and Praised in a Leading New York Musical Organ.

The Keynote, a prominent New York musical paper, and a recognized authority on such subjects, presents in its February number the portraits of the Misses Sarah and Harriet Manning, of this city, with the following article of deserved praise:

Two artists for whom a great future is predicted, are the Misses Sarah and Harriet Manning. They are both gifted with naturally fine voices and have had the best teachers of this and foreign lands. They have been earnest students and are now conscientious musicians who have achieved a reputation for brilliant interpretation as well as technical proficiency. Each can sing about four octaves, which is considered phenomenal. They sing the most difficult music written with perfect ease. In distinct pronunciation they are said to be without a rival. Crowds have gathered to listen to their singing and pronounced them great; so much praise has been given them that it would be impossible to give it in detail here. Of fine personal appearance and charming manners, they are a delightful success, for they are indeed gifted with the genius of song in voices of wondrous beauty, and in the expression of meaning and feeling. The voice of Sarah Manning (soprano) is brilliant, clear and sweet, while Harriet Manning, (contralto) is noted for the great dramatic action of her singing. The repertoire of these vocalists is surprisingly varied and extensive, including the finest and most desirable concert selections from the standard oratorios and operas. Their list of songs seems endless, some of the composers represented being Lassen, Godard, Gleg, Abt, Delibes, Metra, Tosti, Franz, Gounod, Schubert, Rubinstein, Molloy, Cowen, Gotz, Pinsuti, Shelley, Tours, Becker, Millard, Barnby, Compana, Hullah, Pontet, etc., etc.

The Misses Manning were born at Plainfield, New Jersey, and are the daughters of Mr. Joel D. Manning of that place. The family is one of the oldest and best of the State, and is of English ancestry. The Misses Mannings' father's place, where they live, has been in possession of the Manning family over two hundred years, it being part of the original tract of land chartered to the Mannings by Queen Elizabeth. Mr. Henry Wolfsohn is the manager of these young ladies and may be addressed for unfilled dates at 331 East 14th street, N. Y.

Bible Bones.

A Plainfield woman who loves her Bible contributes the following:

“An old man once said, ‘For a long period I puzzled myself about the difficulties of Scripture, until at last I came to the resolution that the Bible was like eating fish: when I find a difficulty I lay it aside, and call it a bone. Why should I choke on the bone, when there is so much nutritious meat for me? Some day perhaps I may find that even the bone may afford me nourishment; would that there were less of picking of bones, and more of feasting on the substantial food with which infinite love has spread the spiritual bread.”

An Opinion from Abroad.

[From The New Brunswick Home News]

The Mayor of Plainfield vetoed an ordinance allowing the saloons to remain open until 12 o'clock at night; but the Aldermen passed it over his veto by a vote of 6 to 5. The saloons formerly closed at 11 o'clock, but this hour was probably too early for the Aldermen, who at their meetings often get very dry, and as they are frequently in session until 11 o'clock, did not favor an ordinance which would prevent them getting a drink before resting from their labors.

Pleasant to take; perfectly safe, even to the most delicate; and always efficacious. These are the chief attributes of Hires' Cough Cure. Add cheapness—twenty-five cents buys a bottle anywhere—and you have the greatest remedy in the world.

“THE COLLEEN BAWN.”

PLAINFIELD CHRISTIANS, STAY AT HOME!

Need This Sound Admonition of a Moody Convert, and Give the Wicked of Westfield Room to be Saved.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your issue of the 11th inst., you state that a host of Mr. Mills' friends in this city will undoubtedly flock to Westfield by next Monday evening in such numbers as to overflow that town. This means that they are going to the Mills meetings. If they are not Christians, I would say let them go, by all means. It will do them good if they are seeking good. But as for the Christians of our city, don't let us be selfish! We have had Mr. Mills with us, and the Lord blessed his labors, and many souls have been born into the Kingdom. Our own souls have taken on new life, and we rise up and call him blessed.

Westfield has a goodly number of Christian people within her borders that are anxious to hear and help along the cause. They have no building large enough to hold those of their own town who will want to hear Mr. Mills. Christians must not take up the room that is needed and ought after by those that are not now Christians. The meetings will be held only a few days. Some souls may be seeking this Jesus and will not be able to find room inside the building on account of Christians filling the house.

Let us all do our part here. Let every Christ-loving man, woman and child in our city pray earnestly that God will hear and bless the effort, and that many souls may be born, and new fires rekindled in cold hearts.

California's Senatorial Contest.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 14.—The last ballot in the Legislature for United States Senator resulted: Estee, 34; De Young, 24; Felton, 15; Blanchard, 11; Johnston, 4; Wetmore, 1. The Democrats gave 26 votes to Shanahan.

Prevented a Panic.

PARIS, March 14.—The belief is freely expressed that what might have been a panic was averted by the prompt and decided action of the Bank of France in connection with the financial troubles of the Societe des Depots de Comptes Courants. The press speaks in high terms of the course pursued by the bank.

Sudden Death of a Fenellite.

DUBLIN, March 14.—There will probably be a contest in North Sligo, as Mr. Peter McDonald, member of the House of Commons from that section, died suddenly at Sligo during the day. Mr. McDonald was elected to Parliament without opposition and was a supporter of Mr. Parnell.

Mr. Goff Declines the Nomination.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 14.—Lyman B. Goff has declined the Republican nomination for the Lieutenant-Governorship.

THE CIRCUIT JUDGES.

It is Still Uncertain Whether the President Will Make the Appointments.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The determination of President Harrison to defer the appointment of the nine Circuit Court judges authorized by the Evarts law is a great disappointment to many ex-members of Congress who are seeking the positions.

The Attorney-General has rendered an opinion that the President has the power to appoint the judges, but nevertheless the President has not yet indicated whether he will follow the opinion of his legal advisor or not. great pressure is being brought to bear to induce him to ignore it and call an extra session of the Senate to confirm the circuit judges whose names he will then send in.

The Union Revolt Denied.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The Spanish Minister denies most emphatically that there is any foundation for the rumors circulated in New York of a revolutionary outbreak in Cuba, or of any disaffection of any kind whatever that might lead to a revolt. If any such outbreak had occurred, the Minister says he would have been informed immediately by the Captain-General of Cuba.

Death of Hon. H. J. Perry.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The Secretary of State is in receipt of a dispatch from the United States Minister at Lisbon announcing the death of Hon. Horatio J. Perry, formerly secretary of legation to Spain, at his residence in Paco d'Arcos, a village in the immediate vicinity of Lisbon. He was a native of New Hampshire.

New York's Claim First

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Governor Hill of New York has made application for his State's portion of the money to be refunded by the government under the provisions of the Direct Tax bill, and he is the first Governor to do so. New York's share will be $2,325,000. It will be paid as soon as the claim is passed upon by the proper officers.

The President Returns to Washington.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The President returned last evening from his ducking trip on Chesapeake Bay. He expressed himself as well pleased with his success and the recuperation afforded him.

Treasurer Huston Resumes His Duties.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—United States Treasurer Huston has returned from Indiana and resumed his duties.

Soldiers Down With the Grip.

OMAHA, Neb., March 14.—Two hundred soldiers at Fort Omaha are down with the grip. The situation is becoming serious.

Peru's Ex-President in New York.

NEW YORK, March 14.—General Carceras, the Peruvian Minister to England and ex-President of Peru, called at police headquarters with several members of the legation and made a tour of the building.

Fell from a Chair and Was Killed.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., March 14.—Elizabeth Ward, an orphan, about 11 years of age, residing with a sister, Mrs. Frank Buchanan, fell from a chair while asleep yesterday afternoon and broke her neck, dying instantly.

Rev. Hyde Will Not Began.

NORWALK, Conn., March 14.—Rev. T. A. Hyde of Christ Episcopal church, Westport, has been asked by his congregation to resign because of his frequent absence without providing a supply for his pulpit. He says he will not retire, but will fight the matter in the courts if necessary. He also claims $1,500 back salary.

ALLOW ME to add my tribute to the efficacy of Ely's Cream Balm. I was suffering from a severe attack of influenza, and catarrh, and was induced to try your remedy. The result was marvelous. I could hardly articulate, and in less than twenty-four hours the catarrhal symptoms and miserableness disappeared and I was able to sing a heavy role in Grand Opera with voice unimpaired. I strongly recommend it to all singers.—WM. H. Hamilton, leading basso of the C. D. Hess Grand Opera Co.

The Story of the Pyramids.

Why have the pyramids endured for ages?

Because they are founded on a firm and strong foundation, which enables them to withstand the wear and tear of time.

In like manner strong and vigorous persons endure to late old age the wear and tear of years of energetic toil and labor.

It is only those who are weak in nerve-power or physical vigor—who have not sound strength of nerve and body constituting a firm foundation of health, who are weaklings in the world, who make failures of undertakings or who fall by the wayside in the hurly, burly rush of life. Disease is the mill-stone about the neck of energy, paralyzing effort, and keeping thousands from fulfilling their ambitions.

“Does this mean you?”

Have you lost your grit and energy?

DOES WEAKENING DISEASE HOLD YOU POWERLESS IN ITS GRASP?

Then look to yourself, for weak feeling and Spring debility are the fore-runners of exhaustion. Every sleepless moment you pass at night presages days of prostration: every hour you feel weak, nervous, languid, tired, with shattered nerves, trembling limbs, dull head, disordered stomach and irregular bowels may be followed by weeks and months of sickness. Every day you neglect these symptoms may mean years of unutterable misery—or those terrible results, “nervous prostration, heart failure, paralysis, insanity or premature death.”

Can you afford to be sick?

The world will pity you living and forget you dead.

Do you want to be well?

To be strong in nerve, vigorous in body, powerful in that bounding health which assures the success of every endeavor?

Then be advised, and go to the nearest drug store now—not to-morrow or next week, when it may be too late—and get a bottle of that wonderful strength and health restorer Dr. Greene's Nervura, the acknowledged greatest of all nerve and brain invigorants. It will certainly give you that health and strength you have looked for elsewhere in vain. It is purely vegetable and harmless and costs but $1 a bottle.

How to Build Health and Strength.

I wish to say, for the benefit of others, that I was taken sick with Heart Disease. I had two scientific physicians, and was under their care seven or eight months, but constantly grew worse; lost 75 pounds of flesh, and was so weak I could not raise myself in bed, and the doctors said I could be no better, but hearing of Dr. Greene's Nervura, I commenced taking it, and in a week I began to feel better. At present, after using it a few months, I am able to walk and ride out, have gained 40 pounds in weight, so that I consider that Dr. Greene's Nervura saved my life, for which I feel very grateful.

Mrs. J. M. BASS,
Orford, N. H.

Dr. Greene, of 35 West Fourteenth St., New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled.

N. B. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write Dr. Greene about your case, and a careful considered letter, fully explaining your disease and giving you a perfect understanding of all its symptoms will be returned, free of charge.

THE SONG OF VICTORY.

What though our way be rough and thorny?
What though thick clouds hang low an' dark?
What though our eyes grow dim and misty
In looking for the promised mark
Of foretold high and noble calling
Given by God, to fallen man?
What though we tire of daily striving,
To shun all earthly blight or ban?
What though all these to-day prevail,
If, when we come within the vail,
Our place with the redeemed may be,
To sing The Song of Victory?

What though the heart with grief is swelling
When friends prove false and turn away?
What though we find the thorn in plucking
The rose that grows along life's way?
What though we pass through vales of sadness?
What though our way is hedged about
With elements of dread and danger,
Of gloomy fears dismay and doubt?
What though all these 'tis ours to meet
As on we go with restless feet,
If we at last His face may see
And sing The Song of Victory?

What though we may not banish sorrow
From out the life we live on earth?
What though the throng that idly passes
Knows not, nor recognizes worth?
What though 'tis ours to live and labor,
To grief and disappointment know?
What though in lonely ways we wander
And pluck the bitter fruits that grow
From trees and vines of garish green,
Of golden hue and silvery sheen?
What matter if from these once free,
We sing The Song of Victory?

Oh, who decrees of fate may question?
Oh, who will falter, faint or fail?
Who feebly halt when storm-clouds gather
Or when the storm bursts weakly quail?
What though a tempest fierce arises
And hangs about in fearful form,
If we but trust the given promise
Of Him who rides upon the storm?
If we our hands in faith reach out,
Freed from all fear, alarm or doubt,
While sailing on the eternal sea,
We may sing The Song of Victory.

Victory graven on our banners
From highest standards full unfurled;
Victory when we change our mortal
Life for an immortal world;
When at last earth's journey ended,
A new and untried world awaits
Our footsteps, slowly made and measured,
Halt not at death's open gates;
If, when we lay our burdens down,
We may but win and wear a crown
Of righteousness—Oh, who so free
To sing The Song of Victory?

HARSH JUDGMENT.

Pick the Beam from Your Own Eye, Then the Mote from Your Brother's Eye.

That kind of man is comparatively rare who has learned to be as severe upon his own errors as upon those of others. Indeed, with some people, the main proof that they have a conscience is furnished by their indignant outcry against their neighbor's sins. They declare quite confidently that this is a wicked world, and that it is growing worse every day, but seem oblivious of the fact that they are part and parcel of it, and that their harsh judgments are certainly not helping to hasten the millennium.

When we speak of criticism we nearly always think of blame as necessarily involved in it. But the critic is the judge, and his office is by no means destroyed by a verdict which is complimentary. It seems so much easier, however, to attack a man's faults than to praise his virtues; so much more exhilarating to prove that he is wrong, than heartily to commend him for setting out toward the right. And yet that critic ceases to deserve the name who estimates individual character by its weakest and worse manifestations. There is in all of us a curious mixture of good and evil, of nobility and meanness. At times we may be put little lower than the angels, at other times but little higher than the fiends. But he who would ascertain our real caliber must not commit the cruel barbarity of vivisection. He must take the whole current of the life, and try to determine towards what quarter it is flowing.

It would be unwise to speak lightly of what seems to any man an obligation, yet that seemingly righteous impulse called "a sense of duty," has to answer sometimes for a good many foolish and hurtful things. One of its most offensive exhibitions takes the form of a kind of anonymous surgery which is eager to remove the mote out of your eye without letting you know whom to thank for the benefaction. "Your friend," "your well-wisher," "your brother in Christ," "one who prays for you"—these are some of the disguises under which these reformers work. Perhaps they mean well; but a cowardly act is always an evil one, and when what is called "a sense of duty" prompts in that direction, it is high time to consider whether the impulse is not more devilish than Divine.

It frequently happens that the ungenerous critic hits no one half so hard as he does himself. He has not reckoned on the recoil of the gun with which he is so ready to bring down others. For instance, a man goes into a strange city and connects himself with a certain church. After being in it some years, he raises the complaint that the people are unfriendly, and that during the whole long period of his attendance no one has ever spoken a word to him. Now it is quite possible that something may be wrong with the church, but there is certainly something wrong about the man who thus finds fault with it. The reproach of the protracted silence works both ways. If no one has spoken to him, it follows that he, too, has spoken to no one. Perhaps if the members of the church had reached a higher state of grace, they might have been able at length to overcome his extraordinary reticence; but if he had thrown himself with any good will into the church's work, then, whatever were its imperfections, such a state of things would be utterly impossible. An iceberg will lower the temperature even of the Gulf stream.

It might be thought that a man who was conscious of some faults in himself would neither have the desire nor the leisure to give much attention to the faults of others. But this does not seem to be the case. While he never spoke of wrongdoing as though it were a trifling thing, the most tender, compassionate heart in the world was the heart of the perfect man, Christ Jesus. If the censors of their fellows ever were the salt of the earth, in the process of wholesale vituperation they have for the most part lost their savor. As a general rule, it may be held that the harshness of criticism is in inverse proportion to the virtue of the critic. There is some reason to think that we, though, perhaps, we may not know it, are guilty of the very faults which we are so quick to discover in others.

This, however, is not always the case; though I do not know that much of the sting of fault-finding is removed even by the establishment of a valid claim to moral superiority on the part of the critic. The habit of throwing stones is an irritating one, even if those who indulge in it do not live in glass-houses. It hurts the poor fellow who is hit in the head with one of them, quite as much as though he could hit back. Indeed, if he is nearly as bad as he is made out to be, the probabilities are that it hurts his feelings more. No doubt it is difficult for a man whose temptations are not of that kind to understand how another can so easily fall into certain kinds of vice; and in his furious indignation over faults foreign to his own nature, he may be scarcely able to keep back the Pharisaic boast: "I am holier than thou." But the boast is an idle one, after all; for even if well founded, it touches but a mere segment of the moral law. It may tickle one's sense of respectability, but the old parable reminds that it does not justify in the sight of God.

When our Lord tells us first to cast out the beam of our own eye, in order that we may see clearly how to cast out the mote of our brother's eye, the whole setting of His words seems to suggest this important thought that while the beam may be taken to indicate the presence in ourselves of a larger degree of that particular fault which we condemn in another, the greatest beam of all is that very spirit of harsh judgment which blinds us to the real character and needs of our fellow-men. No one can be scolded into the Kingdom of Heaven. No amendment of moral health can be looked for if the physician fails to make a correct diagnosis of the patient's case, taking into account every circumstance, showing a kindly human sympathy, and remembering that he himself has not yet reached that land where the foul miasma of evil is felt no more.—Interior.

Good Rules.

To aim at cheerfulness without levity.

Never to show levity when people are engaged in worship.

Frequently to review your conduct and note your feelings.

To say as little as possible of yourself and those who are near you.

Not to affect to be witty, or jest so as to hurt the feelings of another.

Never to court the favor of the rich by flattering their vanities or their riches.

Never to think worse of another on account of his differing from you in political and religious subjects.

Never ridicule sacred things or what others may esteem as such, however absurd they may appear to you.

To speak with calmness and deliberation on all occasions, especially of circumstances which tend to irritate.—Christian at Work.

Lasting Words.

A company of the friends of Robert Browning observed the anniversary of his death a little while ago in London, by listening to his voice from a phonograph into which he had spoken some months before he died. It is said that all present were deeply moved as they heard the tones that so vividly recalled the dead poet. Are we not, every one of us, speaking constantly into phonographs that preserve a true, even though not a literal, record of our words, and of the spirit they breathed? Thoughtlessly, recklessly, we are printing upon the memories of those we live with and meet, that which again and again they will hear repeating itself in after years whenever they think of us. The vitality of words, their power to last, is an awful or a lovely thing, according to what kind of words they are.—Examiner.

Two Kinds of Bears.

A London congregation on a recent Sunday morning had an unwelcome addition to its numbers. A bear belonging to a showman, being left for a moment, finding the church door open, went in and took a seat in an unoccupied pew. Ladies fled from their pews screaming. There was general relief, even among the men, when the proprietor of the bear entered the church, bowed respectfully and apologetically to the preacher and attaching a strap to a ring in the bear's nose, led him out. Once in awhile bibed bears "show up" in church meetings, and the pity is that they can not be led out in like fashion.—Christian Enquirer.

ITEMS FROM THE RAM'S HORN.

The keynote to human life is God.

The devil never fires into his own men.

God's fishermen must fish in deep waters.

As soon as people begin to love they begin to be unselfish.

The most dishonest man living is the one who tries to rob his God.

To antagonize that which is good is proof positive that we are bad.

The things we consider calamities are very apt to be blessings in disguise.

There are just five steps leading to eternal life, and this is the highest up: "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

Every Christian who is more than a Christian in name will be sure to have a good deal of trouble with the devil.

Unless your religion has pointed some one else to Heaven you will be very much ashamed of it on the judgment day.

It doesn't make so much difference where we came from. The thing that concerns us above all other is "where are we going?"

It is only when we learn to read the thoughts of God that the windows of Heaven open, to let the angels pass up and down before us.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

COLD WATER FOR ME.

To Bacchus let others their eulogies hymn,
And wine let them quaff to satiety;
Let others be dull-eyed and palsied of limb;
But I sing the praise of sobriety.

Let Hermes, Anacreon, Ovid assert
That the man who drinks vintage will never age;
Using of cold water, it never can hurt;
Hurrah for that aqueous beverage!
Cold water for me;
Cold water for me;
'Tis flowing so crystal and free.
You may quaff all you will;
It can do you no ill;
Cold water, cold water for me.

SENTENCED FOR LIFE.

The Punishment Inflicted Upon a Persistent Rum Seller.

A man of fifty years of age has been sentenced to sixty-three years' imprisonment for selling liquor, being convicted on 723 out of 1,000 indictments. That sounds like law in some other country than this, but it is what has happened to G. F. Kibling, a citizen of Norwich, Vt., a little hamlet just across the river from Hanover, the seat of Dartmouth College.

Every college graduate for the last twenty years at least knows "Kib," for he has defied the law and the prophets as exemplified by the august faculty of the college, and has supplied the ardent more or less surreptitiously to all the students who chose to call on him.

Its quality has been terrible, its cost far from moderate, yet it was liquor, and that was enough. Time and time again has the faculty "nailed" him. Countless times has the victim appeared in court and penitently taken oath not to sell again.

He has even signed documents promising to keep the students "dry," which would be posted upon the college bulletin board for the delectation and guidance of the boys, who on that promise were allowed to get their meals at his hotel, for Mr. Kibling was enterprising and ran an "opera-house," billiard hall, boarding-house and blind bar-room all under one roof, to say nothing of skating-rink and other adjuncts too numerous to be catalogued. All this was in Hanover.

But not long ago there were signs of trouble. He saw a bigger storm than usual brewing in the faculty headquarters, stirred up mainly by Prof. Emerson, the instructor in chemistry. He therefore moved back across the river into Vermont, and there set up his gods, calling his place the Pine Tree Inn, or some such name.

The State of Vermont, as is well known, has a vigorous prohibitory law on its statute books, although it is not always well enforced. But it can be, as Mr. Kibling found out to his grief. Learned professors went to work collecting evidence, and to such good effect that they procured the modest number of one thousand indictments against the astonished Kibling for the illegal sale of liquors.

His son, true to his early training, promptly turned State's evidence against him, and he was brought into court. In vain did he try his old dodge of swearing that he would tempt the thirsty no more. Useless was his penitence, though accompanied by tears—a method that had always been potent before. A "compromise" was arranged whereby Kibling was tried on only seven hundred and twenty-three indictments, and on all these was found guilty and sentenced to sixty-three years or to pay a fine of eight thousand dollars. The luckless Bonifface chose the former alternative, and has begun his terrible term of imprisonment.—San Francisco Chronicle.

KING ALCOHOL.

Eleven Million Gallons Consumed in this Country in One Year.

The Census Office has issued census bulletin No. 22, which embodies the preliminary report on the quantity of distilled spirits consumed in the arts, manufactures and medicines in the United States during the year ended Dec. 31, 1889.

The report shows that the total amount of all forms of distilled spirits consumed by wholesale druggists and manufacturers, eleemosynary institutions and retail apothecaries amounted to 10,976,842 proof gallons. This report is the first ever made that was at all trustworthy, as previous reports of the same nature were merely estimates made by various persons, based upon such miscellaneous information on the subject as could easily be secured.

Census schedules to the number of 400,000 were sent to all the druggists, wholesale and retail, manufacturing concerns using distilled spirits, hospitals, dispensaries, asylums and other institutions of like nature in the United States, so that the vast number of detailed statements returned to the census office enabled the special agents to secure accurate and interesting information.

Of the total number of gallons of distilled spirits consumed in the United States in 1889, 6,745,152 gallons were of alcohol, 2,029,900 gallons of whisky, 1,453,048 gallons of cologne spirits, 266,874 gallons of brandy, 222,295 gallons of gin, 189,581 gallons of rum and 75,992 gallons of highwines, making the total consumption 10,976,842 gallons.

Cologne spirits is used for many purposes for which alcohol, on account of containing certain impurities, would be unsuitable. This is particularly true in relation to the preparation of a large number of fine chemicals. Whisky, brandy, rum and gin are likewise used in the manufacture of proprietary medicines and contain pharmaceutical preparations, tinctures and medicinal wines.

According to the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the twelve months ended June 30, 1889, 10,739,734 proof gallons of alcohol were withdrawn from bond on the payment of the tax. Inasmuch as only 6,745,152 proof gallons are accounted for as the result of census inquiries there is an unexplained balance of 3,994,582 proof gallons left. This discrepancy may be due to a certain quantity used in the arts which has not been reported to the census office and another quantity used for drinking purposes.

It appears that alcohol, as such (in some cases diluted with water), is used by certain foreign elements. It is drunk to a great extent by Poles, Norwegians, Swedes, Finns, Hungarians and Russians. Large dealers in the northwest familiar with this particular trade furnish the information that fully one-half of the alcohol sold in that section is drunk as a favorite beverage by these foreigners. Competent authorities in New York City estimate that about fifteen barrels of pure alcohol are daily consumed for drinking purposes alone in that city, and a considerable amount is used for the same purposes in the coal regions of Pennsylvania and other sections, and a very considerable quantity finds its way to the low groghops of the country, where it is compounded into low-grade whisky and retailed over the bar.

The returns sent in from all the various sources of information sought by the census office have been compiled into various tables, and show that out of the aggregate 10,976,842 gallons of distilled spirits consumed during 1889, the wholesale druggists and manufacturers used 7,066,940 gallons, the eleemosynary institutions used 102,790 gallons and the retail druggists used 2,907,412 gallons.

In all the interests and spirits combined New York led the States with 1,760,343 gallons, closely followed by Illinois, which is credited with using 1,306,323 gallons; Pennsylvania is third on the list with 1,143,941 gallons; Missouri comes fourth with 1,071,068 gallons, barely leading Massachusetts, which took care of 1,018,090 gallons, all these figures representing proof gallons.

The eleemosynary institutions of the country consumed 3,827 ordinary gallons of cologne spirits, and of this amount the District of Columbia used 1,433 gallons.

In view of the fact that the retail druggists are often accused of selling whisky, brandy, rum and gin as beverages, the table devoted to the retail apothecaries is especially interesting. New York druggists used and sold 148,180 gallons of whisky in 1889; Missouri, 95,156; Massachusetts, 93,958; Indiana, 84,364; Illinois, 51,260; Kansas, 25,517; Iowa, 17,227, and Maine, 16,047. Massachusetts' druggists used and sold 45,333 gallons of rum in 1889, which was 45 per cent. of all the rum used and sold by the retail druggists of the country, and her retail apothecaries also lead in the amount of gin they consumed—27,405 gallons, as against New York's score of 19,583 gallons.

In making up this report the census office used the factors furnished by the Internal Revenue Department in converting ordinary to proof gallons. The average strength of alcohol and of cologne spirits was taken at 1.88, or, in other words, at 88 per cent. above proof; that of highwines at 1.50, or 50 per cent. above proof. Whisky, brandy, rum and gin were taken as at proof.—Chicago News.

FACTS AND FINDINGS.

LORD CHIEF JUSTICE COLERIDGE is of the opinion that two-thirds of the jails could be shut if the country could be kept sober.

THE British Woman's Temperance Association is holding meetings in various parts of England, addressed by physicians of note, who point out from a medical stand-point the advantages of total abstinence.

TORONT Can., closes its saloon doors early on Saturday night, and keeps them closed on Sunday, with the result of a better observance of the Lord's day than is to found in any city of Europe or America.—Temperance.

AN English physician says that where a case of serious illness requires a consultation the chances of recovery are estimated chiefly by the drinking habits of the patient, and they most hopefully estimate the chances of the total abstainer.

THE editor of a weekly paper in Kansas has been shot at twice, assaulted three times and had the windows of his office smashed in three times within the space of four months, because he declared that the mayor ought to be impeached for drunkenness.—Albany Argus.

"I PROPOSE to die!" said a man as he entered a Sacramento saloon. "Give me a glass of beer in which to take poison!" It was handed him, his money dropped into the till and the bar keeper watched him as he sprinkled in strychnine and drank it off, to die two hours later.

"Night-Caps" and "Eye-Openers."

"Both the 'night-cap' and the 'eye-opener' are evils," said a local physician, recently, "but between the two, if one must be chosen, take the 'night-cap.' When a man gets to drinking early in the morning as a regular custom he is pretty far gone. A drink before breakfast is a pretty certain indication of a half-dozen others before sundown. The effect of a morning drink wears off very shortly, leaving the drinker collapsed just at a time when he is busiest at work, and it is natural for him to drink again to brace himself up. At night, however, while he sleeps nature repairs the damage, or part of it, which he has done by soaking his stomach with alcohol. If a man must drink he ought to have sense enough to steer clear of the 'eye-opener.' It is the last resort among drinkers and is the hardest to tear loose from."—Chicago Mail.

A Saloon-Keeper's Idea.

An American barkeeper, who wants to sell out his place, has lit upon a novel idea for doing it. Here's his idea: To every person who buys, a check will be given the amount of his purchase. When five dollars' worth of checks are gotten they can be returned and a ticket will be given him. Then, at the end of a given time, say two or three months, the present proprietor will resign and the bar-room, with all its contents, turned over to the holders of these tickets. These can then settle it among themselves as to which one is the owner. They can then raffle for it or do what they please with it. It will be theirs jointly, and they can settle it in any way they desire as to who is to have it.—Albany Argus.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

A Perfect Success. 7

The Rev. A. Antoine of Racine, Tex., writes: As for me I am free to say, I think Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic is a perfect success, for no one who suffered from a most painful nervous weak as I did. I feel now like myself again after using the Tonic.

I was first attacked by epilepsy in November 1876; residing in New York I consulted the best physicians, but they could only arrest the disease, the honest ones told me then there was no cure for it—I was compelled to give up my occupation and return to Canada in 1878; since then I tried innumerable remedies and consulted some of the best physicians, but nothing benefited me until I began to use Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic in September '88, since then I had not a single attack. THE MOB'S VICTIMS

New Orleans Quiet After the Terrible Tragedy.

THE DEAD ITALIANS BURIED.

Their Countrymen Indignant and Demand Energetic Intervention.

Italy's Minister Lays the Case Before President Harrison—Secretary Blaine Asks Louisiana's Governor to Bring the Offenders to Justice—Italians to Hold Mass Meetings and Denounce the Lynching.

NEW ORLEANS, March 16.—The excitement that preceded and followed the lynching of the 11 Italians who were accused of the assassination of Chief of Police Hennessy has cooled somewhat. People generally, however, seem indisposed to talk about the matter and the current of affairs runs about as usual.

Idle crowds still gather about the prison inspecting the gate through which the crowd entered or gaze curiously at the windows, at which were groups of prisoners peering through the bars at the people below. The tree in front of the jail on which Bagnetto was hanged was an object of peculiar interest to the crowds on the outside. It has been almost completely stripped of its bark by people anxious to secure relics of the lynching or the superstitious who put faith in the old tradition that there is luck in the rope or scaffold which serves the hangman's office.

The great majority of the people strongly support the action of the mob and of the Committee of Law and Order, under whose orders the lynchers acted, and while admitting that more of the prisoners were killed than had been originally intended, insist that this was inevitable in a movement of this kind. They point to the fact that the mob marched to and from the prison, and that no one was disturbed or injured save the men accused of the murder.

The press is unanimous in approving the action of the mob.

The Victims Buried.

All of the victims were buried during the day. Monasterio, Marchesi and Trahina were unclaimed up to noon, and the charity wagon took them to Potters' Field. Polita and Comitez were followed to the grave by a single carriage, and in the case of Bagnetto the hearse went alone. Joseph Macheca had the largest and best attended funeral. He had half a dozen pallbearers, none of whom were Italians. Caruso and Macheca were taken from their residences to the St. Louis Cathedral, and the ceremonies in each case were very imposing.

Action of the Authorities.

The authorities will in every probability take some action against the leaders of mob, but it is well understood that it will be merely formal, and that nothing will be done to them. Attorney-General Walter H. Rogers was seen at his residence and questioned as to his intentions in the premises. He said: "The question now presented to the authorities clothed with jurisdiction in this city and parish is: Have the laws of the State been violated? What crimes have resulted from such violence? The grand jury is in session, and we have in full operation the means and modes of enforcing laws. I have no doubt those charged with official duty will act firmly, justly and fearlessly."

Superintendent of Police Gaster was asked what steps he intended to take in the matter, and said that he could not arrest the community.

Still Expect Trouble.

Great fear is felt that the race troubles are not at an end here yet, and it is freely predicted that the first overt act on the part of Sicilians the Italian quarter will be sacked. The police hate the Italians, and would be of no use in suppressing an outbreak against them.

The Italians and all that strange mass of people from foreign Mediterranean seaports, which is so large an element of the foreign quarter of New Orleans, who are commonly called "Dagoes," are all armed and will fight like wildcats, with that strange fury that upon occasions characterizes the mobs of the Latin race, mad with fury and fright.

It will be an awful fight if it does come. The meddling of the Italian consul and his threats have greatly embittered the sentiment against the whole race. The Italian priests are peacemakers, but are powerless. The next fortnight is full of peril. Mayor Shakespeare, his secretary and six councilmen, it is said, are marked for the stiletto or bullet.

Vigilance Committee Still at Work.

The vigilant committee is said to be still at work and it said that to-morrow will be the day of reckoning for detective O'Mally. The jury will also be attended to but probably through the courts. The State had evidence against several of the jurors before the verdict was announced, and it is said that one of them has already confessed. The grand jury will indict one juror on Tuesday and more will follow.

Four Were Italian Subjects.

NEW ORLEANS, March 16.—Mr. Pasquale Corte, the Italian Consul in this city states that he called on the mayor of New Orleans and the Governor of Louisiana, and asked for the protection of the Italian subjects among the prisoners. None was given by either official. He immediately communicated with the Italian Minister at Washington and also with the home government at Rome. Four of the 11 were Italian subjects, viz: Monasterio, Marchesi, Comitez and Trahina. The others were either of American birth or naturalized.

Italians Feverish in Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 16.—Jerome Fedilli, Vice Consul here, said: "The lynching in New Orleans will cause trouble, I am afraid, between Italy and this government." The city market here is run by Italians, and they are feverish with excitement. In the Italian quarters, where there is a population of about 2,500 Italians, groups of men were seen standing about the streets having the newspapers translated and read to them.

An Italian Representative at Paris Angry.

PARIS, March 16.—Count Rasponi, of the Italian legation, expressed himself in very strong terms on what he called the cruel massacre of his countrymen at New Orleans. He said Italy could not afford to let such an outrage on humanity go without redress, and that it was a stain on the American people that could never be effaced.

The Galena Will be a Total Wreck.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The Signal Corps observers at Gay Head, Mass., reports that the United States vessels Nina and Galena ashore at this point are now away up on the beach. The Nina will probably be saved, but the Galena will be a total wreck. It is impossible for the wreckers to do anything, owing to the northwest gale and high sea that now prevails. No lives lost.

Developing Vermont Granite.

RUTLAND, Vt., March 16.—A large granite hill, known as Brocklebank Mountain, lying in Chelsea and Tunbridge, in Orange County, has been purchased by a wealthy syndicate, which will develop the granite quarries and build a railroad to connect with the Passumpsia Railway, running past the extensive copper mines in Strafford.

A Priest Arrested.

WILMINGTON, Del., March 16.—Father Charles O'Connor of the Diocese of New York, but for the past year engaged as a missionary on the Pacific coast, was arrested in this city last evening for vagrancy. When taken to the police station he became very boisterous, and he and his friend, a tramp, were placed in a cell.

Fitzsimmons Will Fight Hall.

CHICAGO, March 16.—G. R. Clarke, the backer of Bob Fitzsimmons, on behalf of the latter challenged Jim Hall of Australia to a finish fight and deposited $2,500 with the Inter-Ocean as a forfeit. The San Antonio Athletic Club has offered a purse of $15,000 for a fight between Hall and Fitzsimmons.

Found Dead in the Road.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 16.—James H. Marston, Aged 45, of Northampton, who has been on a spree for several days, was found dead on the road between Exeter and Stretham during the morning. An Irish farm hand, who was in his company, is wanted by the police in connection with the affair.

Rockefeller Gives $10,000.

ALTON, Ill., March 16.—John D. Rockefeller, of Standard Oil fame, has given $10,000 to Shurtleff College as an endowment fund, with the proviso that the sum be increased to $50,000 by other subscriptions.

Great Record for One County.

PENNFIELD, Pa., March 16.—Within the past 10 days Mrs. Jerry Copelin, of Decatur township, this county, gave birth to four children at once, and Mrs. Snyder, of New Washington, also this county, gave birth to triplets.

Thiak Wright Was Murdered.

NEW YORK, March 16.—The theory is advanced that William Wright, the companion of Carl Ruttinger, whose dead body was found floating in Arthur Kill, has also been murdered. The men have been fully traced from the time they left Germany to the time they left Mr. New's house in East 58th street on Feb. 2, where the trail is lost.

Perished in the Flames.

NEW YORK, March 16.—The residence of Gen. E. B. Fowler, at No. 382 Monroe street, Brooklyn, was partially burned at an early hour, and the General's son William, aged 22, perished in the flames. The other members of the family were rescued with great difficulty.

Corbett Will Give Kilrain a Chance.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—Jim Corbett says: "I stated that if Kilrain defeated Godfrey I would give him a chance for another 'go' at me, and I meant what I said. If he wants to try me again I'll give him an opportunity and a good whipping besides."

Losses by the Syracuse Fires.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 16.—A careful estimate of the loss by Saturday's fires puts the figure at $1,250,000. The buildings destroyed were valued at $550,000.

THE POLICE PUZZLED

Tottenville's Mystery More Complicated Than Ever.

IS THE VICTIM CARL RUTTINGER?

A Startling Statement Has Been Made to Inspector Byrnes.

Ruttinger's Life Was Insured for $30,000—A Rumor that the Body Found Was a Subterfuge to Obtain the Insurance Money—Disclosures Are Soon Expected—Wright's Visit to Boston.

NEW YORK, March 16.—Tottenville's murder eclipses all the mysteries that have startled the public and puzzled the police during the last decade. Inspector Byrnes, familiar as he is with remarkable crimes, has stated that he never heard of a case that could equal it. Each new fact developed since the body was discovered has added to the riddle. Circumstances contradict themselves in an inexplicable manner.

There is a theory that the police are working on with great secrecy. It is founded on the fact that District-Attorney Fitzgerald found insurance policies for $20,000 among Ruttinger's effects in the Victoria Accidental Company of Berlin and the Keinische Accident Insurance Company of Leipsig.

The policies are still in force and the premiums have been paid. There was found also a policy and receipt book of by-laws of the Equitable Life Insurance Company of New York, which has a branch office in Dresden. The receipt shows that Ruttinger paid his last premium on the policy last November in Dresden.

The startling statement has been made to Inspector Byrnes and to Staten Island authorities by some one who claims to know, that Ruttinger is not dead at all and that the body found at Elliott's dock is merely "a subterfuge to get the insurance money. Mr. New is the only one who has identified the body as Ruttinger. He might be deceived. A body may have been got from the morgue in this city, Philadelphia or Boston for money, that resembled Ruttinger. This may have been what took Wright to Boston.

The bodies taken from the morgue in this city were all accounted for yesterday by Keeper White. It would have been easy to dress the body in Ruttinger's clothes, with absolute mark of identification upon them, and drop the body where it would certainly be found. Inspector Byrnes is working on the case from this standpoint, and some startling disclosures are expected.

PARNELL'S ENVOYS HERE.

An Address of Welcome Presented to Them by New York Irishmen.

NEW YORK, March 16.—The delegates sent to this country by Mr. Parnell for the purpose of raising funds for the Nationalist movement arrived on the Etruria Yesterday. The delegation is composed of James J. O'Kelly, M. P.; John O'Connor, M. P.; W. H. K. Redmond, M. P., and Henry Harrison, M. P.

They were met down the bay by a reception committee on board a steamer, and Messrs. O'Kelly, Redmond and Harrison were transferred to it, while Mr. O'Connor proceeded to the city on the Etruria.

An address of welcome, signed by Michael Breslin as chairman, was presented to the delegates. The address spoke of them as the "representatives of Irish nationality as endorsed by Charles Stewart Parnell, leader of the Irish nation," and bade them a hearty welcome. The address protests against Ireland tamely submitting to the cluck of the Gladstone whip by abandoning the only public leader of modern days whom England has been unable to influence, purchase or deceive.

The address was received with cheers. The envoys replied to the address and expressed themselves as hopeful of their present mission to this country.

Sir John's Electioneering Dodge.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The Anglo-Canadian interest in the Supreme Court proceeding seems to have completely evaporated. This indifference gives point to the assertion heretofore freely made that the prohibition proceeding, with its theatrical accompaniments, was nothing but an electioneering dodge of Sir John Macdonald, who now has no further use for it. Acting Attorney-General Taft said the United States government would take no steps, so far as he was advised, to secure the dismissal of the proceedings instituted by the British government in the United States Supreme Court involving the jurisdiction of this government over the Behring Sea fisheries, pending the reported reference of that issue to arbitration.

Failure of a Banker.

YORK, Pa., March 16.—Michael Schall, of the banking firm of Schall & Danner, and interested in a dozen other enterprises, has failed and confessed judgment for $149,000. It is said that he has recently lost several hundred thousand dollars through indorsements and in other ways, and a number of suits are pending against him growing out of his various enterprises. It is stated that he will assign for the benefit of his creditors to-morrow.

A Race in Dories.

BOSTON, March 16.—Articles have been signed for a race in dories, 12 feet or under, by Capt. Andrews of Cambridge and S. W. Lawler of Chelsea. The race is to be started about June 17 and to be from Boston to Lands End, England. A cup, suitably inscribed, is to be the trophy.

Three Negroes Resentenced.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 16.—Henry Jones, George S. Key and Edward Smith, the three colored men convicted of having committed murder on the Island of Navasse, were resentenced to be hanged on Friday, May 15.

LOOKS LIKE A MURDER.

A Woman Found Dead at Atlantic City With Scars on Her Neck.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 16.—A death, which, to all appearances, looks like a murder, was discovered in this city by ex-Assemblyman James S. Beckwith, one of the proprietors of the Ocean House. A private cottage at No. 108 South Connecticut avenue, opposite the Ocean House, has been occupied since December by a middle aged maiden lady named Laura Purnell and a year-old baby.

Mr. Beckwith, seeing no signs of activity around the cottage during the last two days, decided to investigate. He knocked on the door, and receiving no response forced an entrance and found Miss Purnell dead upon the floor. The baby was beside the body crying. The police took charge of the body and began an investigation. The body was in a state of decomposition, and on the throat were scars, the flesh being slightly lacerated and the neck swollen.

The room was in disorder and the body only partially clothed. Nothing that would serve as a clew to the death of the woman was found. The neighbors' knowledge of her family connections is limited. She came to Atlantic City from Washington. The child's name is Auburn Eden.

On the table was a letter signed by S. B. Bell, Loudonburg, Pa., addressed to Miss Purnell. The cottage is in the best portion of the city. The occupant was always well dressed and appeared to be an educated lady with plenty of money. The supposition is that she came here with the child, who is believed to be a relative, intending to be a temporary cottager. Heart disease is thought by some to be the cause of death. The police authorities are continuing their investigation.

THE BIG WALKING MATCH.

The Attendance Not so Large as at the Start of Previous Races.

NEW YORK, March 16.—The six days go-as-you-please race was started in Madison Square Garden at midnight. Bob Fitzsimmons, the pugilist, gave the word.

The starters were E. C. Moore, John Hughes, Dan Herty, Robert Wheeler, George Manning, George Cartwright, Wm. Nolan, Frank Hart, Steve Brodie's Unknown, Daniel Burns, Lewis Seifert, Peter Golden, George Noremac, Pinkham Heweka, Ed. Murphy, Gus Guerrero, John Glick, Fred Wilson, W. H. Bunnell, Geo. Connors, Peter Hegleman, John Daly, Robert Peabody, Thomas Howarth, Geo. Tracy, Robert Pesch, Tim Curley, D. R. Bennett, Alfred Elson, H. O. Messie and M. Craig.

Ex-Champion James Albert did not start, owing to his failure to obtain a guarantee of $3,000.

The crowd was much smaller than that which has been present at the start of previous races.

"Lepper" Hughes was the first man on the track, George Tracy made the first lap and Gus Guerrero was the first to make a mile.

The walkers take no risk in this match. They know to a penny what they will get if they win. In other matches this was a matter of speculation, since they raced for the gate receipts principally. In this race they run for stipulated prizes, and the money has already been deposited. Ten thousand dollars are hung up in prizes and in this way: The $10,000 in prize money will be divided so that $5,000 will go to the winner of the match, $1,500 to the second man, $1,000 to the third, $750 to the fourth, $500 to the fifth and $250 to the sixth.

Threatened by Female Lynchers.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 16.—The Western Pennsylvania Humane Society received a letter from Brownsville, Pa., signed, "Many Women." The letter stated that Elias Mitchell had been caught by H. B. Cassidy assaulting his 16-year-old girl, Maggie, and unless the society took action the women of Brownsville would lynch the father. Agent O'Brien investigated the case and found it as represented. Maggie is a pet child in the town. Proceedings have been commenced against Mitchell, who is a widower, 35 years old. The women of the town had organized to lynch Mitchell.

The Girls to Strike To-morrow.

NEWARK, N. J., March 16.—This afternoon the question of whether or not the 1,800 girls employed at Clark's thread mills in Kearny will strike is to be settled. There is no doubt on the subject, and to-morrow morning the girls will quit work. So far as they can do it they are preparing for the strike. Already petitions have been framed asking the public to help the girls with funds to support them as long as they remain out.

Commissioner Groff Resigns.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Commissioner Groff of the General Land Office has tendered his resignation, but it has not yet been accepted by the President. The Commissioner says there is no truth whatever in the published report that a serious controversy with himself and Secretary Noble led to his resignation. His sole reason for resigning, he says, is failing health.

Escaped from Prison and Recaptured.

THOMASTON, Me., March 16.—George Knight, who has been in prison nearly 34 years for wife murder, made an attempt to escape at noon. He has had considerable liberty of late and succeeded in getting outside of the jail, but was quickly missed, pursued and captured.

Queen Victoria Afraid of Poison.

Efforts to Free Mrs. Maybrick.

MAKING TERMS WITH BISMARCK

The Alsace-Lorraine Delegates Return Home Much Disappointed.

No Relaxation of the Stringent Passport Regulations—Parnell Denies the Report that He Neglected His Duty in the Commons—Trouble at a Meeting in Galway. King Leopold in London.

LONDON, March 16.—Berlin advices state that the prospect of any full and complete reconciliation between the Emperor and Bismarck is considered far distant, although a modus vivendi may be established. Don Miguel is the Kaiser's man to succeed Caprivi, and neither Miguel nor the new Minister of Public Instruction, Count Zedlitz-Trutzschler, could get along with Bismarck.

The possibility that Bismarck may enter the Reichstag is said to make the Emperor anxious to prevent him from becoming the active leader of an opposition.

The Kaiser's mind seems been on warlike preparations, and it is believed that his chief motive in conciliating Bismarck and Waldersee is to have the Empire in harmony for the struggle that he expects must shortly come about.

His reception to the delegates from the Parliament of Alsace-Lorraine is considered as pointing to a preparation for hostilities. The delegates although courteously received entirely failed in their object to obtain even a promise for the relaxation of the stringent passport regulations.

Herr Schlumberger headed the deputation, which was composed entirely of the German element, a fact which is looked upon as significant, as showing that the French party in Lorraine constitute the chief part of the population, are irreconcilable. The delegates return home much disappointed.

PARNELL'S DENIAL.

He Says that He Did Not Neglect His Duty in the Commons.

GALWAY, March 16.—Mr. Parnell was interviewed by a reporter about the sensational report published by some of the New York dailies on Saturday and cabled back here, alleging that he had absented himself from the House of Commons during the debate on the Irish distress question Thursday night in order to be with Mrs. O'Shea at Brighton.

"The story is pure fiction," he replied. "There was nothing requiring my presence in the House at the time. The debate was a circumscribed one, and no useful question could have been asked upon it. The members of my party who are acquainted with the local details touched upon by the Chief Secretary were there and spoke."

Parnell then pointed out that McCarthy took no part in the debate, and that Sexton, Healy and all his chief opponents were likewise absent from the House on the night in question.

"That shows," Mr. Parnell continued, "how ridiculous this charge is. If my opponents could make any capital against me by jockeying the debate they would have done so. Then, of course there was no room for them to do so."

BRUTAL TREATMENT.

An Investigation of the Elkhorn Colliery Victims Former Reports.

POCAHONTAS, Va., March 16.—John Herse, the Bohemian correspondent who went to investigate the alleged ill-treatment of Hungarians on the Elk Horn extension in Virginia, has arrived at that place.

He says after a careful investigation, he found the report to be correct. The men were compelled to walk the entire distance of sixty miles, wading creeks and rivers, with only crackers to eat. The report of their escape, capture, being brought back and whipped, is true and was not denied by the foreman of the works.

They live in log shanties with only bread to eat. A statement which Herse has from Contractor Rolls shows that after three months' work they are in debt to the contractors $8.27 each. Herse secured their release, and now they are on their way here, where they will be cared for and sent wherever they desire to go.

Perth Amboy Fishermen Catch a Whale.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., March 16.—Fishermen Mundy, with two assistants during the morning captured a black whale thirty feet long. It had got too near the shore and the receding tide had stranded it on the mud bottom, leaving it without enough water to get out to sea again. This is the first whale ever caught in this vicinity.

The United Framers Union of New York city have agreed to strike on May 1 unless their demand for shorter hours and more wages are acceded to. They want eight hours to constitute a day's work on the first five days of the week and seven hours on Saturday.

THE PRESIDENT'S ACTION.

Secretary Blaine Sends a Letter to Governor Nicholls.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Baron Fava, the Italian Minister, formally brought to the attention of the President the slaughter of the Sicilian prisoners in the parish jail at New Orleans. As a result, Secretary Blaine sent the following dispatch to Governor Nicholls:

"It has been represented to the President by the Minister of Italy accredited to this government that among the victims of the deplorable massacre which took place in the city of New Orleans were three or more subjects of the King of Italy. Our treaty with that friendly government, which under the Constitution is the supreme law of the land, guarantees to the Italian subjects domiciled in the United States the most constant security for their persons and property—making them amenable on the same basis as our own citizens to the laws of the United States and of the several States in their due and orderly administration.

"The President deeply regrets that the citizens of New Orleans should have so disparaged the purity and adequacy of their own judicial tribunals as to transfer to the passionate judgment of a mob a question that should have been adjudged dispassionately and by settled rules of law. The government of the United States must give to the subjects of friendly foreign powers that security which it demands for our own citizens when temporarily under foreign jurisdiction.

"It is the hope of the President that you will co-operate with him in maintaining the obligations of the United States towards the Italian subjects who may be within the perils of the present excitement, that further bloodshed and violence may be prevented and that all offenders against the law may be promptly brought to justice.

ITALY AROUSED.

The Mob's Action Created a Profound Sensation in Rome.

ROME, March 16.—The news of the massacre of the Italian prisoners in New Orleans created a profound sensation here, and cables have been passing between the Cabinet and the Italian Minister at Washington. The general feeling is one of the utmost indignation and thirst for reprisals in some form. An English visitor, who was mistaken for an American, had a narrow escape from being mobbed.

It is expected that the subject will be brought up in the Chamber of Deputies. In the talk on the streets and in public places strong protests were uttered against any representation of Italy at the coming American exhibition.

The Riforma denounces the lynching as an outrage and says it is a disgrace to the United States that such acts are possible within its borders.

Signor Breganza will interpellate the government in Parliament regarding the affair.

EXCITEMENT IN NEW YORK.

The Italians Will Hold a Mass Meeting to Express Their Indignation.

NEW YORK, March 16.—Excited men gather in little groups on Mulberry street and talk and gesticulate wildly as they discuss the death of their countrymen at New Orleans. The little shops and cafes are crowded.

Of the 500,000 sons of Italy in America about 80,000 are located in New York. They support four newspapers and take the liveliest interest in the welfare of their countrymen in the United States. At two of the newspaper offices, L'Eco d'Italia and Il Progresso Italo-Americano, bulletins are posted containing copies of the cable sent to Prime Minister Rudini and his reply. These were read by thousands of Italians during the day.

A meeting was held last night by representatives of the Italian papers and arrangements perfected to hold a mass meeting on some evening during the week at either Tammany Hall, Cooper Institute or the Germania Assembly Rooms to protest against what is termed "the massacre of New Orleans."

BUSY WEEK AT ALBANY.

Forecast of Legislation in New York's Senate and Assembly.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 16.—To-night's session of the Legislature opens what promises to be the best week of the session.

The Assembly, in order to get through, has decided to hold three evening sessions Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, and hope to dispose of a great deal of business.

There is a move to reconsider the vote by which the listing bill was lost in the House and then an attempt will be made to pass it. It is not, however, thought possible, because there are petitions coming in against its passage from farmers, grangers and others in the north of the State.

The committee work this week will be lively, as in the Assembly all committees must be through by the 5th of April, and no bill can be introduced before that time.

To-morrow morning it is probable that the Senate Cities Committee, which investigated the affairs of New York city, will report on what they have found, and the report is likely to cause heated discussion.

In the Assembly the Committee on Contested Elections will to-morrow morning take up the case of Johnson and Strauahan. On the evening of the same day the Forestry Commission investigation will be closed and the committee will report by the first of next week.

Mr. Whipple's bill making Indians subject to all the laws of the State will have a hearing to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, and a number of Indians will appear. The Schaaf Licensing bill will probably get a hearing on Wednesday or Thursday. All of the insane bills, and there are about 10 of them, will be heard by the Senate Public Health Committee this week.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Ella Van Derveer, of New Brunswick, spent Sunday with Miss Fannie Schomp of West Front street.

Great interest is felt in the next play to be given by the "Pyramus and Thisbe" dramatic club, on the evening of the second of April, at The Casino. THE PRESS is told by one who knows, that the play translated from the French and given in Louis the XIVth dress, will be very brilliant, the farce following will be very laughable, and altogether a very delightful evening is promised.

F. W. Morse, formerly of this city, has been compelled to tender his resignation as Superintendent of the Magnetic Iron Ore Co., at Carthage, N. Y., because of the bad effect upon his lungs from breathing the dust of the mines. The company is very loath to accept the resignation but Mr. Morse is compelled with regret to insist. He may return to his former position with the Standard Oil Co., at Bayonne, and in such event will probably make his home in Plainfield again.

At "The Gables," Netherwood, yesterday, occurred the death of John Ferdinand Loeser, from congestion of the lungs. He leaves a wife and stepson. Funeral services will be held at his late home, Wednesday afternoon next, at 12:30 o'clock. During his residence of the past two years and a half at Netherwood, Mr. Loeser has been one of the most diligent in advancing the interests and prosperity of that community. He was largely interested in Netherwood real estate and was expectantly looking forward to great activity in that line within the next few months.

Sought Warm Blankets, and Got Cold Lead.

A shivering crowd of tramps became covetous of the fleecy, warm blankets displayed on the clothes line of Mrs. Martin Geagan, at 250 West Front street, Saturday night, and sought to appropriate the bed coverings to shelter them during their night's repose. Mrs. Geagan, however, detected the attempted theft, and caught one of the thieves by the collar and shook him until his teeth rattled like castanets and his head seemed in danger of flying off. The other tramps attempted to render assistance, but Mrs. Geagan's lusty cries for help brought Mr. Geagan with a revolver, to the scene of conflict. At sight of the weapon, the tramps fled precipitately.

"Come around here again,"—shouted Mr. Geagan—"and you'll get bullets instead of blankets."

THE BATTLE OPENS.

ARREST OF THE WATER SUPPLY COMPANY'S CONTRACTOR AND HIS MEN.

The Street Commissioner Orders Them to Stop Work—Chief of Police Grant Arrests Them—The City Judge Holds Them for Trial—and the Corporation Counsel Accepts Himself as Surety.

The fight between the city and the Plainfield Water Supply Company opened with a little skirmish this morning. The company have no franchise from the city to lay water pipes through the streets, but claim authority from a charter granted them years ago, but it is questionable whether the rights and privileges of this charter have been kept alive. However that may be, the Council did not propose that any company should tear up the streets of the city and lay water pipes therein, until after agreeing to such a contract with the city as should protect it and the people's interests. So an ordinance was recently passed imposing certain penalties upon anyone opening the public thoroughfares without permission from the Council.

Messrs Doud & Rice, the well-known contractors who recently laid the pipes for the Orange water works and are now engaged in extending the water works at Sewaren for John Taylor Johnston, had signed a contract to lay pipes through the streets of this city for the Plainfield Water Supply company, and began work this morning.

Just before nine o'clock Mr. Doud ordered a gang of twelve men to begin digging a ditch at the corner of North and Johnston avenues. The men struck their picks into the road between the centre and the curb, and threw up a few shovelfuls of earth. Street Commissioner Meeker called upon Mr. Doud to stop but the latter refused. Chief Grant, who was also present expecting the occurrence, then placed Mr. Doud and his men under arrest and they were arraigned before City Judge Codington.

There was no formal complaint and warrant of arrest. The Chief of Police merely stated that he had seen the men in the act of violating an ordinance in digging up a public thoroughfare. They all plead "not guilty." The Judge placed them under bail of $100 each to appear for a hearing at ten o'clock, Saturday morning. Corporation Counsel Marsh said he would be surety for the appearance of Mr. Doud, and Mr. Doud gave bail for his twelve dagoes.

The men arrested were: Thomas Doud, James Ross, Francis Frazers, Nicholas Greig, Francis Telto, Peter Russ, Antonio Telto, Thomas Barron, John Carbon, Sylvian Cassendy, Ferdinand Conn, Jacorrau Zandt, Antonio Cassendy. They were all released but will make no attempt to resume the work of pipe laying, this week, at least. Mr. Doud wired the facts of the affair at once to Counselor Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, the President of the Company, and awaits further instruction. Meanwhile he has set to work with his men to help the city out of a big trouble. They are digging drains to carry off the water that has accumulated in big ponds along the north side of the railroad near Netherwood.

It is needless to say that Mr. Doud and his men will not be ordered to stop that work. It is lifting a big care off the Street Committee's shoulders.

To-night's Minstrels.

The Lowell, Mass., Critic of two weeks ago, spoke as follows of the company that is to appear at Music Hall, this evening greatly strengthened:

The rain of last evening drove a great many people indoors, but they did not all go home by any means. About as many of them as could be comfortably accommodated without hanging out the Standing Room Only sign found their way into the Opera House to listen to the minstrels. Wilson has discarded to some extent the fancy costume and the rich stage settings that floated several minstrel troupes of not unalloyed worth last season.

His first part is made of good material, songs well sung and jokes well joked. George Wilson himself is a prime favorite with Lowell audiences, and his own peculiar methods, as exhibited last evening, cannot possibly have done anything to lessen his popularity. The novelties introduced in the second part were all pleasing and served to fill out a well rounded evening of minstrelsy that was more attractive, getting back, as it did, in a certain degree, something of the original flavor that has made a black-faced end man a distinctive American institution.

Another Beneficial Organization.

Saturday evening last a number of the employes of Scott's Printing Press Works, met in the rooms of the Democratic Association on West Front street, and perfected an organization to be known as the "Scott Press Works Mutual Aid Society" by the selection of the following named officers and committees:

President—Louis H. Brown.
Vice President—George H. Carpenter.
Secretary—John Wilson.
Treasurer—Henry C. Normer.
Finance Committee—Frank S. Templin, Wm. Neumiller, Daniel J. Randall.
Committee on By-Laws—Webster Grant, Geo. H. Carpenter, Daniel Livingston.

The object of the society is to protect and assist workingmen in case of sickness or accident.

Little Hope for His Life.

John Wilson Young, the stenographer who was terribly injured by leaping from a train near Grant avenue last week Sunday evening, has not recovered consciousness since last Monday. He is in a precarious condition, and there is little hope for his recovery.

ANOTHER TROLLEY SPOOK STORY CONTRADICTED.

Springfield Property Owners Attract Purchasers by Advertising Their Real Estate as "Near the Electric Railway."

In view of the several columns of misleading articles recently furnished to the Central Times, and publish-d in that journal without the condemnation they deserve from an honest paper, THE PRESS herewith publishes a letter just received from Springfield, Mass., which further proves how false all the trolley spook stories are. The citizens of Plainfield will understand that they can safely follow the lead of a community like that which comprises the population of this intelligent and most beautiful New England city, where no dangerous nuisances of any sort would be tolerated:

SPRINGFIELD STREET RAILWAY COMPANY,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
March 12, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 11th inst., at hand. Replying would say, last year we built a short electric line to enable us to see what there was in electricity for ourselves, and to give our citizens a sort of object lesson. And for us we are satisfied that electricity is preferable to horses. The line was built to a new park in the suburbs, through an undeveloped section of the city. The road is two miles in length, one-half of which runs through undeveloped country there being but three or four houses on the whole line of track. Since the laying of that track the land has been bought by a land improvement company, and a great many thousand dollars have been spent in grading and laying out of streets. It is bound to be one of the pleasantest parts of the city. During the summer we have carried as high as 4,500 people in a day on three electric cars.

The people took kindly to it and it is the most popular line in the city. In regard to the electric railway current, our men have taken it a great many times without any serious results. In regard to frightening horses, we find that horses soon become used to electric cars, and that horses that two or three months ago showed considerable fright today stand without hitching. We also use horses on this road and in a few days they become accustomed to them and pay no more attention to them than to an ordinary horse car. The new slow speed motors that are being placed on the market today, with gears running in oil, make less noise than an ordinary horse car. It is universally acknowledged that where electricity is used that it gives quicker transit, the cars are more comfortable and give better satisfaction every way. In regard to the cost of operating the electric railroad, we are not able at this time to say what the exact difference is, but we are satisfied that we can earn 8 per cent. easier with the increased stock for electricity than with a road operated by horses.

Some six years ago we were asked to extend the line into a section of the city known as the McKnight district, the Mc Knights paying us a bonus of $1 per foot for track laid in that section. At the time the extension was made there was but some half a dozen houses there and to day it is the handsomest part of the city, having the finest buildings and the finest streets. We have made several other extensions, the parties owning land adjoining, paying $1 per foot. And we find, that at part of the city has been built up at the expense of that part which has less street car accommodations. We find that it has invariably advanced the prices of real estate on our railway streets and on all streets close to the railway. We have noticed that people having places for sale are particular to state that their houses are near the street railroad. This company has been paid $20,000 bonus money for the extensions of its lines. Our people here as a rule have been anxious to have us extend our electric line, and have assisted us in securing the right. We will be glad to give you any further information you may desire.

Most respectfully,
A. E. SMITH, Manager.

REPEATEDLY,
It has been brought to my notice that a person in this city, who claims to be a bicycle repairer, is informing the public that he can sell any kind of Cycle at 10 per cent. below manufacturers' list price, not excepting the world famed Columbias.

As the number of manufacturers is constantly on the increase, some of whom are determined to introduce their inferior product at all hazards, I am not in a position to question the above statement with regard to all the wheels offered, but in justice to myself, and on behalf of the prominent Companies that I represent, viz.,
Pope Manufacturing Co.
The Hartford Cycle Co.,
Western Wheel Works,
Scheverling, Daly & Gales.
I beg to protest most emphatically against such an assumption, for in neither case may any one, be he Agent or Dealer, willfully reduce the regular list price without forfeiting the Agency or Custom of these Companies.

A discriminating public will draw its own conclusion.

Evanescent Joy.

The Boroughites all dearly love
Their new electric light,
And bless the name of Edison,
When'e'er they're out at night.
No more they'll wade in puddles deep,
Or fall in slushful holes,
And make remarks about the same
That jeopardize their souls;
And one, to view their happiness,
Would think their newest joy,
Was innocent and pure and whole,
And free from all alloy;
And yet, the while, they murmur,
As they wonder in their souls,
If the dear electric company
Will ever paint the poles.

HEALTHFUL PLAINFIELD.

The Crescent City Still the Foremost Attraction for Home-Seekers.

The annual report of the State Board of Health, for 1890, just issued, renews attention to the fact that Plainfield ranks foremost in healthfulness among the various cities of New Jersey.

The number of marriages in Plainfield during the year was 74, births 214, deaths 190. In North Plainfield the marriages numbered 25, the births 68, the deaths 60.

The death record of Plainfield is as follows:

Under one year, 38; one to five, 15; five to twenty, 15; twenty to sixty, 58; over sixty, 64; unclassified, none; total, including unclassified, 190; population census of 1890, 11,250; death-rate per 1,000, 16.89; deaths under five in each 100, or comparison of these with total deaths, 27.89; number of deaths from chief preventable diseases, 59; comparative number of deaths in each 100 from chief preventable diseases, 31.05; remittent fever, etc., none; enteric fever, 2; scarlet fever, 1; measles, none; whooping-cough, 3; croup and diphtheria, 12; erysipelas, 1; diarrhœal diseases, 13; consumption, male, 13; consumption, female, 14; acute lung diseases, 25; brain and nervous diseases of children, 8; diseases of heart and circulation, 17; renal and urinary diseases, 8; adult brain and spinal diseases, 26; digestive and intestinal diseases, 15; cancer, 3; acute rheumatism, 1; puerperal, 1; accident, 5.

The death rate of the State is 23.13 per 1,000 inhabitants, so that Plainfield is far below the average.

The following is the death record of North Plainfield:

Under one year, 7; one to five, 3; five to twenty, 4; twenty to sixty, 23; over sixty, 19; unclassified, 0; total, including unclassified, 60; population, census of 1890, 0; death-rate per 1,000, 0; remittent fever, etc., 1; enteric fever, 0; carlet fever, 0; measles, 0; Whooping-cough, 0; Croup and diphtheria, 7; erysipelas, 0; diarrhœa l diseases, 7; consumption—male 7; consumption—female, 6; acute lung diseases, 7; brain and nervous diseases of children, 2; diseases of heart and circulation, 4; renal and urinary diseases, 1; adult brain and spinal diseases, 8; digestive and intestinal diseases, 3; cancer, 2; acute rheumatism, 1; puerperal, 0; accident; 1.

For the Plainfield Board of Health, Oliver B. Leonard, Secretary, reports as follows:

"The attention of the Board of Health the past year has been mainly directed toward the prevention of causes that tend to create disease. Personal inspections have been kept up so as to avoid the accumulation of deleterious substances. Four hundred and five visitations have been made from house to house, and the Inspector has issued 136 notices for removal of nuisances. Householders have more generally conformed to the rules of the Board in the disposal of their kitchen garbage. Regularly-licensed collectors remove all such refuse matter from the premises for moderate pay, and cartmen carry off ashes and rubbish to a remote dumping-ground approved by the Board. A new ordinance was adopted by the Board, in the spring, regulating the business of cleaning out sinks, cesspools and privy-vaults. Owing to lack of sewers and increased number of dwelling-houses, these underground receptacles require watchful inspection. Permits have been issued in the past twelve months for emptying 665 cesspools and 476 vaults.

"The public supply of water so much expected the last year has not yet been realized. Its postponement to a future day, it is hoped, will result in measures being taken to introduce a system of sewers at the same time the water-mains are laid. In the collection and arrangement of vital statistics the Board has been especially careful, all returns being accurately compiled. The general state of health has been very good. There has not occurred any epidemic, and there have been but few deaths from contagious diseases. The principal causes of death have been, cholera infantum, 21 cases; paralysis, 15; consumption, 25; pneumonia, 20, and 18 of heart disease.

"It is a pleasure for the Board to be able to report the city of Plainfield in such a good sanitary condition at the close of this year, and to record the fact that its citizens have been exempt from any troublesome nuisances or serious sickness."

For North Plainfield Dr. J. H. Carman, Secretary, submits the following.

"We still use driven wells as the source of supply, and with few exceptions have excellent water. Our sewage we bottle, but do not hermetically seal, and have it carried away from time to time by odorless excavators. The water and sewerage system, while devoutly to be wished, seems to be a thing of the distant future. The Common Council have just consummated a contract with the Edison Electric Light Company, and the plant will be in operation in a few months. We have one or two slaughter-houses in the borough which are kept clean, the offal being carried away or otherwise disposed of. The capacity of our public school is somewhat overtaxed. We have a code of health ordinances, and have added during the past year a supplement providing for the licensing and regulating of the cleaning of cesspools and privies, in accordance with the act of May 9, 1889. We have an annual inspection of all premises and compel observation of health ordinances, wherever and wherever we find occupants inclined to transgress, which is not often. We regret that we have not power to control the plumbing arrangements of all dwellings, believing defective plumbing to be a frequent and fruitful source of disease, and earnestly wish that the present laws might be so amended as to vest such power in this and like local Boards of Health. With the exception of the epidemic of lagrippe, we have enjoyed a very healthy year. Had a number of cases of scarlatina simplex in the spring, and a few isolated cases of diphtheria, though the latter were very fatal. They were all traceable to local causes, and rigid quarantine and prompt burial of those that died, in which we found parents willing to co-operate, prevented anything like an epidemic."

The Plainfield health officials are: George W. Rockfellow, President, Samuel W. Serrell, Stephen A. Ginna, George W. Endicott, M. D., Oliver B Leonard, Secretary. Post Office address of all, Plainfield.

The officials of North Plainfield are: The Rev. T. Logan Murphy, the Rev. William E. Honeyman, P. M. French, B S. Braider, J. H. Carman, M. D., Jos Coddington, Inspector. Post Office address of all, North Plainfield, N. J.

CALLING IN THE MONEY.

Work on the Y. M. C. A. Building Speedily to be Begun.

The Building Committee of the Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association have issued, under date of March 12, a circular letter calling for the second payment on subscriptions to the Building Fund. The letter to each subscriber is as follows:

Referring to your subscription to the Building Fund of this Association, we desire to inform you that the total subscription to date amounts to $36,661.15, being over three-quarters of the estimated cost of $47,000 of the property and the proposed building.

In view of the growing work of this Association, and of the pressing need of larger and better facilities for doing the work more effectively than can possibly be done in our present restricted quarters, it is our opinion that the construction of the building should be commenced this Spring, and in order to place ourselves in funds wherewith to commence operations, we hereby give notice in accordance with the subscription agreement, that thirty days from date, the second of the four equal payments on your subscription will be payable.

Remittances may be sent to E. St. John, Treasurer, or the amount may be handed to any member of the Committee.

In sending this notice we recognize the fact that a few subscriptions were made conditional on the whole amount being raised, and to those who made such subscriptions we submit, that over three-fourths of the estimated cost is subscribed, that we have assurances of further contributions when the building is under way, and which only can be secured by commencing work; and that we feel that the work of the Committee will be facilitated if the condition under which such subscriptions were made, should be now waived. Payment on account of subscriptions will be accepted as a waiver of the special condition.

A Few Words From the "Patriarch," and a Few to Him.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your Editorial Notes of Friday you refer to the "ignorance of some obstructionists concerning just what sort of a trolley road it is proposed to construct and maintain in Plainfield." You also say, "The fact of the matter is, the trolley system to-day has wooden-cogged, noiseless gearing, etc."

Now, if you ever read your "e. c.," you may have seen that in Friday's edition, I set myself down as an "obstructionist" to the trolley system. I gave the opinion of the Scientific American,—pretty high authority—as to its inefficiency.

I instanced a California town which advertises, among its other supposed attractions for settlers, an electric railway, but adds, "pending the perfection of the storage system the motive power for the electric cars will be furnished by mules."

In preference to the pestiferous ugliness and reputed inefficiency of the trolley, I advocated, and still advocate, that our "electric" cars for the present be run by the patient and pathetic mule; but a man of my advanced years is always "open to conviction." Hence, if you will tell me where I can inspect one of those lovely, "noiseless gearing, wooden cogged" trolleys of to-day, I will do so. I may become converted and may hasten to desert my friend, the mule.

Of the comparative beauty of the mule and the trolley system I will not speak, except to remark that in my regard on this point the mule holds the ribbons by long odds, although even this may not be very complimentary to the mule.

Concerning the comparative danger of the trolley and the mule, I know the latter has an evil reputation, but I consider him to be a badly abused bird. Like many other subjects he will be found harmless if approached in the right spirit and from the right end! PATRIARCH.

[Take a trip to Newark, old man, and a ride over the "Rapid Transit" road, through Central avenue and Washington, as we have, and you will be convinced that that is Plainfield's i. t. want.—ED.]

NEW JERSEY FARM FACTS.

Gleaned From the Annual Report of the Board of Agriculture.

The report of the State Board of Agriculture for 1890 says that grain farming, as such, must be abandoned in New Jersey. The State, it says, is destined to become a market garden agriculturally. First-class vegetables, small fruits, poultry, and eggs, and, in the remote districts, eggs and butter, must become the staples. Illustrating this point, a Medford Granger is credited with raising $1,900 worth of cantaloups on a five-acre patch, and it is mentioned that Gloucester, Camden, Burlington, Salem, and Atlantic counties are now growing large quantities of vegetables and small fruits for the Philadelphia markets. The report states that the cranberry crop fell off 75,000 bushels last year.

Jerseymen are said to own 96,204 horses, valued at $9,931,703; 9,501 mules are held at $1,091,214, and 183,403 milch cows, valued at $6,325,004.

The report says that freight discrimination is retarding the development of the dairy interest and that oleomargarine and adulterated cheese have greatly injured trade in the genuine articles. It is stated that whereas a few years ago New Jersey annually exported butter worth $7,000,000, in 1890 the shipments fell to $2,000,000, and that the dairymen attribute this to the imitation butter. Cheese shipments have fallen off in a like manner. According to the report, pure lard is a difficult article to buy, as is unadulterated butter.

The Matinees That Will Please You Best.

Plainfielders who want thoroughly to enjoy themselves at a matinee should see Nat Goodwin who is filling one of the most successful engagements he ever played in New York, at the Bijou Theatre. "The Nominee," Yardley and Richardson's merry adaptation, is splendidly suited to the eccentric comedian's decided talents, and, as a result, the performance is one of the best in which Goodwin has ever figured. Lizzie Hudson Collier's work in the title role of "Barbara," the curtain raiser, is meeting with deserved recognition.

Another treat in store for you of an afternoon is James T. Powers and his decidedly clever company who have appeared in "A Straight Tip" at the New York Theatre for eight weeks, during which time the audiences have been of an unvaryingly large size. Arrangements have now been made by which the expansive author comedian will continue to appear in McNally's laughable racing satire for another two months, and it is confidently expected that the attendance will continue just as large. The seventy-fifth representation will be elaborately celebrated on March 23.

He Thought There was no Danger of His Being Good.

Said a New York paper, yesterday, "Plainfield, N. J., is the most straight-laced town in the State. A well-known New Yorker was visiting Frederick Smillie, the engraver, out there the other Sunday, and he is used to having candy after dinner, according to the fashion at one up-town hotel. But the candy stores were closed and the druggists had nothing better than cough drops. The New Yorker tried all the druggists, and at last heard that there was a Seventh Day Baptist keeping store in a shed in the town, and that his faith permitted him to sell candy on our Sunday. There the candy was bought. But in the course of the search the New Yorker was derided. 'I have no candy,' said one druggist, 'and if I had I would not sell it.' The New Yorker protested. 'I don't want to be good under compulsion,' said he; 'in fact, I don't want to be good at all.' 'Well, I guess there's no danger,' said the druggist."

Converting Westfield Sinners.

The evangelistic services begun by the Rev. B. Fay Mills at Westfield are already productive of excellent results. The meetings are well attended, and the usual great interest is manifested. At the Sunday afternoon meeting for young people one hundred converts announced the desire and intention of beginning a new life. Mr. Mills preached a powerful sermon on the text "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth". Mr. Greenwood conducts the singing of choir and congregation. Among the local pastors occupying the platform with Mr. Mills is a colored clergyman.

Plainfield Has the Mules Already.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—A "Patriarch," has made some valuable suggestions in the columns of one of your contemporaries, in favor of an electric railway to be run by mule power, for which the citizens of Plainfield should be grateful. "There is many a truth spoken in jest." A road of this kind can be supplied without calling for any outside assistance. Cars so propelled can be had very cheap from horse railway companys in many cities where electric overhead trolley railways are being substituted. We have in Plainfield a large and varied assortment of mules; first, we have the breed which created so much trouble when the Central Railroad of New Jersey tracks through the city were elevated, but this jot is probably too antiquated for service; second, we have the more modern breed which were so noisy when it was determined to macadamize our streets in spite of their braying; third, we have the present stock, which is evidently vigorous, judging by the kicking qualities they display in opposition to the proposed electric railway. The electric railway does not want to occupy all the streets, and don't propose to run in all directions. By all means let us have the proposed mule railway, and as Brother Shepard of Fanwood wants to "go slow", and have his cars propelled by "storage battery," would suggest the railway be extended along East Front street, to his neighborhood. As a "storage battery" the mule is a recognized success everywhere, and judging by the balky and kicking character of our Plainfield mules, doubtless he will have all the fun there is going.

Nothing could be more exhilarating than to see Brother Shepard riding into town from Scotch Plains, on such a motor car.

I would suggest, however, that the front platform should better be made of steel roller plate about one quarter of an inch thick, and that the driver be provided with a seat on top of the car, in case the storage battery should break loose and go off in the rear.

Most respectfully,
PRO BONO PUBLICO.

P. S.—We might also have on this line some "bob-tail" cars for variety, to be drawn by miniature mules with extra long ears.

JOSIE MANSFIELD BUNCOED.

Tom Kennedy, the Noted Crook, Secures Her Valuable Diamond Ring.

LONDON, March 16.—Tom Kennedy, the accomplished American crook, who has just completed a two years' term in a German prison, has buncoed no less a person than Josie Mansfield, the heroine or otherwise of the Stokes-Fisk affair.

Miss Mansfield has been living for the last 10 years in Paris with her mother. She was called upon a week ago by Kennedy, who represented himself to be John Ransom, a nephew of the late Charles Ransom, who carried on the gambling business in New York and Saratoga. John Ransom told Miss Mansfield that he was in desperate circumstances, and he desired to borrow a hundred francs or so to go to Monte Carlo to try his luck. Miss Mansfield loaned him the money, and in a few days he returned with one or two hundred-franc notes wrapped around a large roll of white paper and paid the debt. He said he had won several hundred thousand francs at the wheel, and he considered his luck entirely due to her kindness in lending him the money for his dead uncle's sake.

He took her into his confidence, and informed her that he was about to be married to a wealthy American girl, and he admired a diamond ring Miss Mansfield wore so much that he determined to have one like it for his fiancee. Accordingly Miss Mansfield loaned him the ring, which was valued at 5,000 francs, to take to a jeweller's for a pattern. Kennedy has not got back with it yet. Kennedy has been frequenting the Hotel Henry and other American resorts in Paris for several weeks with another gentleman of easy virtue, who is known in New York by the name of Coleman. There are many who regret making the acquaintance of the pair in amounts from 100 francs up to the thousands.

P. T. Barnum's Great Gift.

Paid All Claims.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., March 16.—Ex-Mayor Charles Seidler of Jersey City, receiver of the Jacob Lorillard brick works at Keyport, has paid all claims against the company held by the Keyport merchants and also those of the destitute employes who have been out of work since last December. The action of Receiver Seidler relieves much suffering, as the men who had claims against the company could not get them honored. About fifty thousand dollars was paid out.

Young Blood Liberate a Pal.

PLYMOUTH, Pa., March 16.—William Miller, son of a prominent merchant here, was placed in the station house late Saturday night for disorderly behavior. Early yesterday morning a party of his friends broke in the door of the jail and passed him a hatchet with which he cut a way out through the roof. The young fellows implicated are members of some of the best families of the city. They will be arrested.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—For New England and Eastern New York: Fair, except light snow in Eastern New York, Western Massachusetts and Western Connecticut; southerly winds.

For Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware: Generally fair, warmer; southerly winds.

For Western New York: Fair, except light rain or snow on the lakes; warmer; southerly winds.

Hooted Davitt and Healy.

DUBLIN, March 16.—About 5,000 persons attended a meeting called in Newry, yesterday to denounce Parnell. Many of them, however, were evidently Parnellites. They hooted Davitt and Timothy Healy, and the meeting was attended with great disorder. The police frequently interfered, using their clubs freely on the combatants.

A Dreadful Threat.

Tramp—You haven't, eh? Well, you'll be sorry for this. If you don't give me something nice to eat I'll recommend you to all my friends between here and the gulf of Mexico.—Texas Siftings.

Too Many Negatives.

"No, Mr. Van Dusen," said the proud young Boston beauty, as she flashed her glorious orbs upon him, "I shall never allow no man to hug me."

And Mr. Van Dusen promptly folded her to his arms.—Life.

FOR GIRLS AND BOYS.

BABY'S STORIES.

The baby sits at the table there
With a pen in her dimpled hand,
And she reads the funny crooked lines
As if she could understand.
She is "writing a story same as mamma,"
And she laughs in baby glee;
If I could read what the baby writes—
What would the story be?

How the oldest doll was naughty and cross
And left her work undone,
And would not study her lesson-book,
But wasted her time in fun,
And would not mind her little mamma,
But was as naughty as she could be;
How she went to walk one day on the beach
And was drowned in the deep blue sea.

How a kitty came to mamma's house
From nobody-knows-where;
And the baby made her a little bed
In the very best rocking-chair.
So sad a story as this, indeed,
I think you have never heard;
That kitty, though all were kind to her—
She killed the baby bird!

How a baby chicken fell one day
Into a little pool;
And they put him into the dolly's bed,
And wrapped him in cotton-wool;
And went on a rocking-horse to town
To bring him the doctor quick,
With bitter powders and little pills,
For the chicken was very sick.

How there was once a little nest
Up in a tall green tree;
A little straw round like a cup,
Just big enough for three—
Three little darling baby birds
In a cozy little heap;
And the wind rocked the cradle up and down,
And rocked the babies to sleep.

How an angel came, one night, next door,
Straight down out of the sky;
And went straight back, and all the folks
Heard something cry, and cry;
And 'twas a baby sure enough,
She wore a long white dress;
And brought a baby-basket down,
And they called her little Bess.

These are the stories the baby writes—
At least I fancy so—
As over and over the blotted page
Her burning fingers go.
She sells them to mamma when they're done
And what does she get? you say.
A thousand kisses, a heartful of love—
And that is the best of pay!

—M. E. Butts, in Wide Awake.

TOMMY AND THE BABY.

The Lesson Necessary to Teach a Boy How Dear to Him Was a Little Sister.

"I don't care," and Tommy looked very much as if he meant it. "I don't care, I'm tired of having to amuse the baby. Every time I want to do any thing somebody says: 'Tommy, will you please take care of the baby?' I just wish there wasn't any baby," and Tommy shoved both hands down to the bottom of the pockets of his knickerbockers, and almost bumped his head against the window pane, and quite flattened his nose against it as he looked into the street.

"Do you really mean that, Tommy? Do you really wish there was no baby in this house?" asked Tommy's mother, very quietly.

"Yes, I do, there!" and Tommy almost stamped to prove how much he meant it.

"I am glad you told me, Tommy, for I was planning to take you with me to grandma's. Baby must go, but you are quite large enough to stay with papa and Ellen. It will be a great relief to you not to have the baby about when you get home from school. You can amuse yourself without interruption." And before Tommy had time to say a word, he was so astonished, his mother had gone out of the room.

Tommy was always extravagant in his words; that is, he said more than he meant to say; and this habit had not been checked, so you can imagine how amazed he was to find himself taken at his word. Not like to have the baby around! Why, of course he did. She was the dearest, sweetest baby in the world. But just then Tommy remembered that yesterday he had to stay with her half an hour because she would not go to the new nurse, and mamma had a call. Tommy turned back to the window. Yes, last Saturday she wasn't well, and wanted Tommy to stay with her, and he had to stay all the morning. Yes, it would be nice to run out and play just as soon as he was through his lessons. He concluded he would not go to grandma's; baby was much more trouble away from home—he had heard his mamma say so. If he was there, she would want him every minute. Tommy stood up very straight when he entered his mother's room, where the baby was. Can you imagine why Tommy had such a queer feeling in his throat when the baby screamed with delight when she saw him, and why he was glad he had not left his handkerchief in his overcoat, for his eyes were very watery?

Tommy felt left out, somehow, for the next few days. He knew his mother was very busy, but he noticed that she did not ask him to take care of the baby, who never seemed sweeter or more lovable. Two or three times Tommy felt like asking if he might go to grandma's to make the visit, but there was always something in his mother's face that did not invite him to go. Monday came, and mother, baby, and Katy started for the depot. Baby said ever so many times: "My Toni go with baby!" and every time she said it that queer lump would come right into Tommy's throat. And he had to wipe his eyes in the most public manner when she thumped on the car window and screamed: "I 'ant my Tom!"

"Be a good boy, dear heart, and I hope you will have a delightful time, without any cares or interruptions," said mother.

Tommy felt very uncomfortable, and yet he had the secret conviction that it would be very nice to play, or read, or sit perfectly idle without the baby to interfere with or bother him.

When he got back home the house was very still, and then he found there would be three more hours in which to play than he had other days, for his mother was his teacher, and now there were no lessons. He coasted down hill until he was tired; the other boys were in school, and it really was not much fun coasting alone. He read after lunch, but the house was so still he felt lonesome in spite of the exciting story. The cook was cross, and she would not let him stay in the kitchen. He went upstairs and looked at all his toys, but you could not play many things alone. "Mother plays better than any body," thought Tom, when Jack Chisholm was suggested by the Halma on his table.

"I guess I'll build a block of houses," said Tommy, aloud. He went to work, but in spite of every effort he kept thinking how sweetly baby played she was an elephant going under the bridge he built, and when he tried to move the bridge while she was creeping through, and knocked down the tower so that a block struck her on the hand, how she tried not to cry, though a bruise was on her hand for a week.

A very doleful boy met his father at the depot that night, and, snuggling down very closely to his rough overcoat sleeve, said: "Oh, papa! I want the baby, I do, papa. I want mother."

"But the baby interferes with your pleasures so much," said his father."

"She don't, papa! She don't! I want her," and Tommy cried with no attempt at concealment.

The next morning two more tickets were bought for Roxbury, and grandma had two more visitors to dinner. Tommy insisted on sitting next to the baby, and Katy wondered for two or three days why Tommy's mother kept a nurse when Tommy liked to be with the baby so much.

Afterward, when Tommy was thinking about that visit, he remembered that neither his mother nor grandmother seemed very much surprised to see him, and he wondered why.—Christian Union.

AN APPLE THIEF.

The True Story of a Very Bright and Cunning Colt.

Marie's father has six colts.

Last summer he pastured them on a run-out farm that has a large orchard of grafted fruit.

The fences are down, but the apple-trees are large and tall, and Mark's father thought if he gathered his apples early the colts could only get the windfalls and the few they could reach from the lower branches.

But the big red Baldwins and the russets kept growing less and less on the trees. On many of the lower limbs all the apples were gone, even those that were out of reach of the colts.

"Thieves are at work in that orchard," Mark heard his father say one day. "But they do not come in the night, else there would be tracks in the dew; still, every day, there are bushels of apples taken."

"I will watch and have those thieves put in jail!" Mark said. "I am going up there to fly my kite and I will take the dinner trumpet and hide in the big fir by the spring, and when you hear the trumpet blow, you run, father, and help me catch the thieves."

Mark took his kite and the trumpet and his dinner and supper in a big lunch basket, and he marched off across the hills to the colts' pasture.

He had not been gone an hour when they heard his trumpet blow! blow! blow! and Mark's father, and Uncle Jacob and the hired man, all ran for the orchard, but when there, all they could see was Mark swinging his cap from the fir tree, and six colts standing by the fence looking at Mark's kite as if they were trying to decide what it was.

"I've found the thief! I've found the thief!" Mark shouted. "It's that colt, Black Dan. He came up to a tree and reached up his long neck and grabbed a limb between his teeth, and shook it, and shook it, till the apples rattled down thick and fast, and then he and the other colts had a jolly time eating them."

"Let us watch the sly thief," Uncle Jacob said.

Mark and the men hid in the firs and waited.

By and by the colts came trotting back to the orchard.

Black Dan sniffed the air and looked sharply about. He could see no one.

Then he trotted along under the trees till he came to one which was loaded with great red nod-heads.

The other colts followed close at his heels. They watched every move of Dan's cunning black head.

He stretched up his long neck and seized a branch in his teeth and shook it so strongly that every apple tumbled off.

The waiting colts pounced upon them. But that was the last luncheon of nice grafted apples they had, for Mark's father sprang out from the firs and drove the colts from the orchard. The rest of the season he pastured them in another field where Black Dan could not meddle with the apple trees.—Clarissa Potter, in Our Little Men and Women.

HUNTING FOR BABY.

What Became of the Pet of the Household and the Dried Beef.

Two things were suddenly missing one day.

One of them was the baby.

He could not have gone far, for he wasn't a year and a half old.

Grandma thought he was upstairs with mamma.

Mamma thought he was in the kitchen with Hannah.

Hanna thought grandma was getting him to sleep in his crib.

Grandpa came in just as they missed the baby, and without a word to scare any of them, took his cane and hurried down through the garden as fast as he could, for the river ran just below. To be sure, baby had never walked a quarter part as far.

Mamma went out to explore the barn, Hannah hunted through the lower part of the house, while grandma toiled up into the chamber and the attic, all calling "Baby! Baby!"

The other missing thing was the piece of dried beef, all there was in the house.

Hannah was sure that she laid it on the kitchen table. Passing through grandma's bedroom, Hannah heard a little noise like a mouse gnawing, nibble, nibble, nibble.

Lifting the spread, there sat baby on the floor under the bed, gnawing the dried beef!"—Youth's Companion.

HIS CONVERSION.

How and Why Samuel Baxter Became a "Nadventist."

[Written for This Paper.]

SAMUEL BAXTER sat on the fence with his hands in his pockets, surveying his day's work. It was Saturday night and time for supper, but Samuel looked anxiously at the clouds and did not move to obey Aunt Hannah's call.

"Ef I don' get dis yere fall plowin' done befo' de fall rains sets in, I'se a gonah, suah!" he exclaimed to himself. Suddenly a broad smile broke over his face, and, after a few moments of deep thought, he climbed slowly down from the fence and walked toward the little hut that he dignified by the name of home. He was still smiling as he opened the door, but it was a countenance of preternatural gravity that he presented to Aunt Hannah's complaints as they sat down to supper.

"Hannah, chile," he said at last, "don' 'sturb me. I'se ruminatin' on serious subjec's. Hannah, you 'member I was to dem meetin's over in de grove dis summer? Well, I'se ben t'inkin' seriously 'bout dem meetins, an' I'se 'bout made up my min' dat I'se a Nadventis'."

"A w'at!" shrieked Aunt Hannah, in dismay.

"A Nadventis'," resumed Samuel, unmoved. 'A Seben Day Nadventis'. An' we'll begin right off dis berry night. Chillun, stop you starin' an' get down on you' knees—we's goin' to pray."

Mr. Baxter had undoubtedly the best of it, for, having finished his supper and shoved back his chair, he dropped on his knees on the sanded floor and began an unctious and loud-voiced prayer, in which he begged the Lord to have mercy on his family and redeem them from the sinfulness of their ways

This ended, he beat a sudden retreat to bed, practically victorious without a shot having been fired by the enemy. But the struggle was yet to come.

The next morning Mr. Baxter arose and dressed himself with a purpose in every movement. Aunt Hannah could stand it no longer.

"Samuel Baxter," she exclaimed at length: "What yo' mean by gettin' into your wo'k-day clo's on Sunday?"

"Hannah," replied Mr. Baxter, severely, "I tole yo' las' night dat I was a Nadventis', an' Nadventisses don' pay no 'tention to Sunday. Dey set an' do nothin' all day Sat'day, an' den on Sunday dey wo'k hahd all day."

"Yo' darst ter tole me, Sam Baxter," cried Aunt Hannah, "dat you'se goin' ter wo'k terday lak it was Monday?"

"Yes I is, Hannah," said Mr. Baxter, doggedly. "I'se goin' ter plow dat ten-acre lot, en' don' yo' argy weth me!"

Aunt Hannah said never a word, but the breakfast dishes spoke a language that struck terror to her partner's soul.

"Chillun," she said, as she cleared the table, "you'se go an' get on yer t'ings. You'se goin' ter church 'long o' me, lak yer ort, stead o' stayin' home like shif'-less heathens."

"Let dem chillun 'lone, Hannah," he commanded, sharply. "Dere daddy's 'ligion is dere 'ligion, an' dey shall go out 'n play, stead o' goin' to church. You min' what I say, now. I ain't goin' to be trifled weth in my own fambly no longer."

Aunt Hannah was a wise woman. When Mr. Baxter put his foot down on a subject, she knew that it was not safe for her to offer any objection to his authority. But, being a born diplomat,

"A WA'AT!" SHRIEKED AUNT HANNAH.

she yielded graciously when she saw that further resistance was useless, and gained her ends in other ways. Now after a moment's breathless silence she said, placidly: "Berry well, Samuel; dey chillun's yourn ez well ez mine, an' ef you say dey shall keep dere Sunday on Sat'day w'y so dey shall. Now, chillun, put on you' t'ings an' run out an' hab a good time playin'. An' yo' needn' come in tell dinner-time, 'cause yer mammy's goin' to church."

There was a wild whoop and a scramble for the outer air that made Aunt Hannah's lips tighten ominously for a moment.

The ten-acre lot lay well down out of sight behind the breezy slope of meadow land, but the children Mr. Baxter had not counted upon, and the sober, church-going deacons were horrified to behold Brother Samuel Baxter's delighted family having a glorious game of "tag" that Sunday morning in the front yard, and before night every good brother and sister in the settlement knew of his change of religion.

All the morning Mr. Baxter plowed sturdily on, watching the threatening clouds meanwhile, and by dinner-time he was unusually hungry and thought of the usual Sunday dinner with a smack of his lips.

Aunt Hannah didn't call him, but at the regular time Mr. Baxter opened the door and entered. Aunt Hannah sat placidly before the fire reading her Bible, while the children stood around the window in a disconcerted but silent group.

"Whe-whar's dinner, Hannah?" he asked, apprehensively.

"In de pantry," replied Aunt Hannah, without looking up.

"When be yo' goin' to get it, Hannah?"

"Samuel Baxter," said she, with severity, "all de dinner you'se goin' to get is in de pantry an' you kin jes' go an' help yousef. Ef I'se 'got to keep Sunday fer de hull fambly, I ain' goin' to do no wo'k dis day. Git 'long, now, an' eat yo' dinner, an' don' 'sturb dis season ob contemplation!"

And with rueful faces Mr. Baxter and his family were obliged to make their Sunday dinner off bread and cheese and cold boiled parsnips which they found laid out on the pantry shelf.

For some reason the afternoon seemed dull and dreary to Mr. Baxter. Just as he finished his plowing the rain began to drizzle down in a way that meant it had come to stay, and he ate his cold supper and crept to bed cross and comfortless.

The next morning he was waited upon by a solemn deputation of dignified elders, dressed in Sunday splendor and feeling righteously indignant with the man who caused them to lose a whole half-day of fall plowing.

What had been a mere Pharisaical compromise between Mr. Baxter and his conscience now hardened into a dogged resolution to stick to the colors he had so suddenly adopted, and the elders left, angrily threatening to "church" him if he did not appear in his accustomed pew on the following Sunday.

"HANNAH, IS YO' GOIN' TO KEEP TER-MORRER, TOO?"

"Dey kin church an' be hanged to 'em!" said Mr. Baxter, angrily, as the door closed upon their retreating figures. "Does dey t'ink I'se goin' to gib up my 'ligion what I'se jes' got lak dat? No, sah! Ef I'se got to suffeh fer my 'ligion, I'll jes' show 'em dey cayn't make me backslide."

The week went by in perfect domestic harmony; yet for some reason Mr. Baxter did not seem to be quite easy in his mind. Like his own herds, he sniffed the brewing storm while the sky was yet blue.

Saturday came and Aunt Hannah observed firmly as they arose: "Dis bein' yo' Sunday, Sam, in course yo'll kum in w'en de critters is fed an' read yo' Bible."

"In course, Hannah," replied Mr. Baxter, a little sheepishly.

A little later in the morning the door burst open and Mr. Baxter's flock of woolly heads burst in with: "Maw, dey'se goin' a-nuttin' on Bramble hill! Kin we'se go? Whar's my hat!" and other exclamations of a similar character. Aunt Hannah held up her hand sternly.

"Chilluns, I'se s'prized at yo'!" she said, solemnly. "Didn' yo' heah yo' daddy say dat dis was de Sabbuf, an' yo' wantin' to go a-nuttin'! Yo' kum in an' larn yo' Sunday-school lesson, now; an' yo' be quick about gettin' in, too, er yo'll get de wus' trolloppin' yo' eber had 'n all yo' bo'n days!"

There was no gainsaying this, and when Mr. Baxter came in from watering the "critters," he found a silent and studious family awaiting him. Dinner-time came and passed, but Aunt Hannah did not move.

"Yo' kin fin' de col' lunch in de pantry," she said. "We's got to be bery keerful how we monkey wid de Sabbuf day to keep it holy," she remarked, placidly.

The children went to bed with visions of a long and lonely play-day before them on the morrow, minus the Sunday dinner that was a landmark in their week to them. After Mr. Baxter had eaten his cold lunch off the pantry shelf out of the remains of his cold dinner, he still lingered near the fire, wrapped in deep contemplation. At last he broke the silence.

"Hannah, is yo' goin' to keep termorrer, too?" he asked, timidly. Long fasting had broken his resistance and Aunt Hannah saw her advantage. "Keep Sunday, Sam Baxter?" she asked, belligerently. "'Course I is, fer yo' an' me too."

"Ain' we goin' to hab no Sunday dinner?"

"'Deed we ain't. I ain' goin' to do no wu'k ef I'm keepin' Sunday fer bofe on us."

There was a long pause. Finally Mr. Baxter broke out: "Hannah, maybe I wuz wrong. Enyway, tain't right fer thar to be feelin's in the fambly, an' ef yo' say so, I'm willin' to gib up my 'ligion an' go to church wid yo' termorrer."

Elder Simpson was in the midst of the long prayer the next morning as Aunt Hannah triumphantly entered the little white-washed meeting house. As he caught sight of them over the top of his gigantic handkerchief he broke forth into loud exclamations.

"Bress de Lawd fer de bruck sheep w'at was gone astray an' am now come back into de fol'—bress de Lawd!"

Mr. Baxter thought of the plowed and seeded ten-acre lot and of the Sunday dinner even then stewing in the pot, and smiled broadly to himself behind his hymn-book. Possibly it was a smile of triumph that he had vanquished the tempter who had led him astray.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

A Perfect Success.

The Rev. A. Antoine of Refugio, Tex., writes: As far as I am able to judge, I think Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic is a perfect success, for my son who suffered from a most painful nervousness as I did, I feel now like myself again after taking the Tonic.

A Strong Proof.

ORILLIA, ONT., CANADA, Jan. '88.

I was first attacked by epilepsy in 18[illegible] Hill, residing in New York. I consulted the best physicians, but they could only arrest the disease, the honest ones told me then there was no cure for it—I was compelled to give up my occupation and return to Canada. In 1878; after I tried innumerable remedies and consulted some of the best physicians, but nothing benefited me until I began to use Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic in September '88, since then not a single attack.

NEW ORLEANS QUIET

No Excitement Whatever in the Crescent City.

A WARNING FROM THE MAFIA.

Parkerson, the Leader of the Vigilants, Told that He is to be Poisoned.

A Confession from a Member of the Gang of Assassins—Detective O'Malley's Return Would Create Serious Trouble—Reports of the Doings of Various Italian Colonies Throughout the Country.

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—There is not the least bit of excitement in the city, matters having resumed their usual routine.

Business is going on as usual, and a stranger could not guess by outward signs that New Orleans has been the scene of a tragedy which startled the world.

Governor Nicholls, Senator White and Attorney-General Rogers had a long conference over Mr. Blaine's telegram based upon the demand of the Italian government concerning the lynching. A reply to the Secretary of State was drawn up, but the Governor refused to give out even the substance of it.

The only thing likely to revive the excitement of Saturday would be the return of Detective O'Malley, who has been warned from the city by the committee of safety, and who has disappeared. If he should come back there is scarcely a doubt that he would be strung to a lamp-post. The feeling against him is intensified, if that were possible, by the report that a talesman in the Hennessy murder trial has in his possession a letter written to him by O'Malley containing a corrupt proposition in the event that he should be taken on the jury. The letter, it is said, has been handed over to the district-attorney.

The grand jury will further examine into the alleged bribery of jurors to-day. Thomas McChristal, who was indicted a few days ago, was taken from the prison to the district attorney's office and was closeted with that official for some time. It is generally believed that McChristal has made a confession in the matter, but the officials decline to state the nature of their business with the prisoner.

Parkerson to Die.

Mr. Parkerson, the leader of Saturday's mob, has received the following warning, purporting to come from the Mafia:

MAFIA WARNING.

You a domed man are god simity cent save you we have it swon our commedee you must Seved, and we tell you and you famle you will be poison the stileto will do for the wrest.

Neither Mr. Parkerson nor his friends are at all concerned about the threats of the anonymous writer; on the other hand the telegraph and mail are bringing many congratulatory messages to the leader of the citizens.

Juror Seligman Leaves New Orleans.

Jacob Seligman, the foreman of the jury who acquitted the Italians, was escorted to a Queen and Crescent train, and started off for Cincinnati. It is said that Seligman went upon the jury with a considerable sum of money in his possession. His methods of communication with the outside have not yet been disclosed. It is charged that Jurors Bolzen and Donegan were also fixed before they went into the jury room. Most of the other jurors were mere boys, persons without standing in the community or men easily led.

MAFIA SECRETS.

One of the Gang Made a Confession About the Murder Organization.

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—Joseph Provenzano, whom the Mafia have wanted to get out of the way for some time, makes public a confession made to him by Jim Caruso, who was killed by the mob.

Caruso was initiated to the Mafia by Matranga, who was acquitted by the jury and released from prison. Caruso said he only attended one meeting, that he went in and Matranga held up a skull in his left hand and a dirk in his right. He was then sworn with uplifted hands to abide the decision of the order. He said he was informed after taking the obligation that the object was to kill those who were against the Mafia gang. The way it was done was to select the victim and invite him to a dinner and afterwards do him up.

Caruso said afterwards that he did not like to commit murder, but was willing to rob, so he went to the Italian church and swore before the altar that he would have nothing more to do with the Mafia. Subsequently, however, he was frightened back, with the result of losing his life. Caruso also said that Rocci and Polits belonged to the order.

Boston Italians Aroused.

BOSTON, March 17.—The Italians of Boston have been aroused by the fate of their countrymen in New Orleans, and a meeting of Italians was held last night in Roma Hall, 193 Hanover street, for the purpose of organizing a large committee and of calling the Boston Italian colony to a mass meeting for a protest against the New Orleans affair. There is great agitation among the people of the colony.

London Italians Uneasy.

LONDON, March 17.—The Italians in this city are still uneasy over the New Orleans affair. The embassy has been besieged by callers and messages urging action on the part of Italy to obtain satisfaction, and one excited visitor was heard to propose an immediate declaration of war, and a raid by Italy's fleet on American commerce.

American Citizens Fear Violence.

NEW YORK, March 17.—L'Eco d'Italia publishes a telegram from Palermo, Sicily, which states that there is great indignation in that city over the New Orleans tragedy. The American citizens have migrated to the South of France, fearing violence at the hands of the populace.

Indignation Meeting in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 17.—There is considerable ill feeling among the Italians in Buffalo over the killing of their fellow countrymen in New Orleans. Arrangements have been made for a mass meeting to formally protest against the action of the mob in New Orleans. The meeting will be held Thursday evening.

Detroit's Mafia Crying for Blood.

DETROIT, March 17.—Detroit's Mafia, which numbers about 400 members, will hold a meeting to-night to take steps to have the New Orleans murders avenged. The local Mafia is crying for blood.

LINGO VERY COOL.

The Sensational Murder Trial at Camden Drawing to a Close.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 17.—The State finished its cross-examination of Lingo for the Miller murder, and the last witness will be called this afternoon.

The questions put to Lingo were searching, but he made his answers in a cool, deliberate way, and did not at any time appear to be confused. In answer to a question as to why he had cut off his moustache, he said it was done on the advice of his lawyers, who told him to shave his face clean. Prosecutor Jenkins ordered him to give a practical demonstration of the manner in which he cut corn, so as to show the jury how he inflicted the wound upon his hand.

The last question was asked of the defendant and he was excused at precisely 12 o'clock, after being on the stand seven hours altogether, and nearly all of the time under a rigid cross-examination. The defence then put witnesses on the stand to impeach the testimony of Wilder, the insurance agent, and introduced further expert medical testimony.

THE WILL DECLARED VOID.

It Was Made by a Staunch Quaker Over Fifty Years Ago.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 17.—The will of the late Joseph Greene, a staunch Quaker, made 50 years ago has been set aside by the Supreme Court.

During Mr. Greene's latter years he was disturbed by members of his family marrying outside the pale of the Society of Friends, or Wilberites. The property involved comprises about 150 acres of land in Jamestown, R. I.

Until two years ago no contest of the will was thought of. The contestants claimed that the application of the estate rested upon the trustees determining the actual religious belief of the beneficiaries. It is possible, they claimed, to ascertain one's religious professions, but not within the capabilities of human determination to ascertain belief. The will was declared void by the court.

IT IS RUTTINGER'S BODY.

There is Hardly a Chance for a Mistake in the Identification.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Several persons have now identified the body of the man who was found bound and gagged in the water off Tottenville, S. I., as that of Carl Ruttinger, and there is hardly a chance for a mistake in the identification.

Ruttinger had his life insured for $30,000 and, owing to this fact, some persons doubt the identification, believing it a conspiracy to defraud the insurance companies.

There was a rumor about police headquarters that Wright, the companion of Ruttinger, was Fred Evans, the Englishman who committed suicide in such a horrible manner in the Astor House on the 3d of February, the day after Ruttinger disappeared. The rumor, however, was discredited.

Sudden Death of a New York Judge.

NEW YORK, March 17.—The Bench and Bar of this city has sustained a great loss by the sudden death of Judge John R. Brady of the Supreme Court. He was seized by an attack of vertigo at 7 o'clock in the evening, and at 10:15 o'clock Drs. Bradley, Flynn and Learning, who had been hastily summoned, announced that one of the blood vessels of the brain had been ruptured. Paralysis set in soon afterward and the patient died in the morning. He was 66 years old and a Tammany Hall Democrat. The funeral will take place Thursday from St. Leo's Roman Catholic Church.

FOR HIGH TREASON

Editor Farrar May Be Banished from Canada.

HIS CASE UNDER CONSIDERATION

Military Companies Wanted to Keep in Check Annexation Advocates.

Two Vessels Collide and Two of the Crew Drowned—Wholesale Poisoning by a Saloon Keeper in France—No Females to be Appointed on the Royal Labor Commission.

TORONTO, March 17.—It is understood that the government has been considering what it should do with such men as Editor Farrer. A firm of Toronto solicitors have been at work investigating his conduct and they advised the government that the case comes within the law relating to high treason. There would be no difficulty in securing his conviction on a charge of high treason. Whether the government will go this far is yet to be decided.

The report says that if the authorities do move they will probably strike against others who are members of parliament. Any punishment that may be meted out to them will be of the nature of banishment rather than that of confinement.

One Way to Prevent Annexation.

TORONTO, March 17.—The Ottawa correspondent of the World says that it hears that the government is being urged to ask Lord Salisbury to station in Canada five to ten British regiments, quartering them at Halifax, Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. "If it is argued," says the correspondent, "that the presence of those regiments in Canada would do more to put down annexation gang and put a check to their conspiracy than anything else."

MARITIME DISASTER.

Two Vessels Collide and Two of the Crew Drowned.

LONDON, March 17.—A serious maritime disaster is reported. The Roxburg collided with the ship British Peer of Calcutta for London, 120 miles southwest of the Sicily Islands.

The Roxburg sank and 24 of a crew of 24 were drowned, the captain and one seaman being rescued. The other ship was also badly damaged.

Arbitrators Selected.

PARIS, March 17.—The names of the arbitrators selected by France in regard to the Newfoundland controversy with England are Professor Martens of the University of St. Petersburg; Riviere, the Swiss consul at Brussels, president of the Institute of International Law, and M. Grau, ex-Judge of the Supreme Court of Norway. The expenses of the commission will be equally shared by the two powers.

Wholesale Poisoning.

PARIS, March 17.—A saloonkeeper of Marseilles named Moutet has been arrested on the charge of poisoning with arsenic his wife, mother-in-law, grandmother, infant and a friend who had loaned him money.

No Female Commissioners.

LONDON, March 17.—In the House of Commons the Hon. W. H. Smith said the government had decided that no women would be placed on the Royal Labor Commission.

Count Ballestrem the New Leader.

BERLIN, March 17.—Count Ballestrem of Breslau will probably succeed the late Herr Windthorst in the leadership of the Catholic party.

Morris Daily's grocery store, Upright's Hotel, the post office, Decker's hall, S. G. Carpenter's law office, the town livery stable, A. W. Bullis's general store, Rose & George Saxon's general store, Odd Clearwater's store, Wilcox's wagon shop, Fellow's Hall, Ira Galway's barn burned. and other buildings have old, living Clarence Ellis, eight years in a tenement house was burned to death. The loss will not be less than $100,000.

He Startled the Lecture.

TRENTON, N. J., March —Rev. Elijah Lucas created a sensation while opening prayer in each branch of Legislature last night. After praying for all imaginable blessings, he broke out against the "dishonorable and infamous system of gerrymandering," and prayed that every man entitled to a vote should be allowed to cast it, and that there should be no fraud tolerated in the counting of it.

The MacQueary Heresy Case.

CLEVELAND, O., March —The ecclesiastical jury in the trial of Rev. Howard MacQueary met in the city to-day. One member of the jury favors admonition, three suspension and one expulsion. In this form the report goes to Bishop Leonard, who will have to decide the question of punishment.

Shoe Factory Closed.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 17.—The E. Cox Shoe Manufacturing Company, of this city, has closed its factory, and will combine it with the factory at Fairport. The Rochester establishment has employed 350 men.

Carter Harrison Nominated for Mayor.

CHICAGO, March 17.—Carter Harrison has received the nomination of the Personal Rights League party, and will make the run for mayor on that ticket if Mayor Cregier is nominated by the Democrats.

WHAT ITALY IS DOING.

Premier Rudini Makes a Statement to the Chamber of Deputies.

ROME, March 17.—In the Chamber of Deputies Marquis di Rudini, the Italian Prime Minister, made a statement with regard to the killing in New Orleans of Italian prisoners who had been acquitted on the charge of having murdered the late Chief of Police Hennessy at that city.

The Premier informed the Chamber that the Italian government had taken prompt cognizance of the affair, and had at once placed itself in communication with the American government through the Italian Minister at Washington, Baron de Fava.

In response to its representations Premier Rudini informed the Chamber the Italian government had received through the American Secretary of State, Mr. Blaine, the assurance that President Harrison recognized the right of Italians resident in the United States to the protection of the government and laws of the country. This assurance was accompanied by an expression of the profound regret felt by the President at the unfortunate occurrence.

In his communication to the Italian government Mr. Blaine also informed it that the President had charged the Governor of Louisiana to take effective measures to guard the Italian population of the city of New Orleans from further violence, and to use every effort to bring the assassins to justice.

The Premier also informed the Chamber that United States Minister Porter had called upon him to convey the assurances of his government's regret, and to say that, as a result of explanations, he trusted the friendly relations existing between Italy and America would be drawn even closer.

When the Premier had concluded his statement, Deputy Breganze said that a note would be taken of the Minister's statement.

Deputy Ferrais urged that the government demand from the United States indemnity for the families of the victims of the New Orleans mob.

READY FOR WAR.

A Committee of Twelve Italians Who Believe in Revenge.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 17.—A committee of 12 Italians from Chicago passed through Pittsburg en route to Washington to see Secretary Blaine, President Harrison and the Italian Minister and to demand of them that steps be taken immediately in the New Orleans killings.

Pasquale Corite, who was spokesman for the party, was very much in earnest. He said: "If the Italians in other cities will follow our example there will be raised in a few days $500,000 to aid the work of justice or revenge. I believe the killings at New Orleans will result in war, but if the Italian government does not force to a complete and satisfactory issue the reparation necessary I will say now that an army of Italians will assemble in New Orleans which will fully and effectually avenge the murder of our countrymen."

"You believe in the Mafia and the vendetta?"

"I believe in revenge. Italians are revengeful when angered; we are terribly angry."

"What will you demand of this government?"

"That those concerned in the killing of Italian prisoners be brought to justice, and that full and complete reparation be made to the families of the deceased."

"If such demands fail, what?"

"We shall demand of the Italian government that it compel it."

"What would that amount to, even if Italy should seek to compel acquiescence to her demands?"

"Why, sir, Italy has such a navy that if she so chose she could station her vessels from land and ruin your coast cities. Italy has 180 or more vessels of war. You see what she could do."

Absconders Settle With Creditors.

HAMILTON, Ont., March 17.—A couple of friends of Rich and Robinson, the alleged absconders from Bradford, Pa., arrived from Buffalo yesterday with the cash necessary to pay the creditors of the prisoners. They brought with them $39,000, and the creditors were paid their claims on the basis of 40 cents on the dollar. Rich and Robinson were liberated from the county jail last evening, and will probably leave in company with their wives for Germany, whither they were bound when arrested here a few weeks ago.

A Mass for Dr. Windthorst.

NEW YORK, March 17.—A solemn pontifical high mass of requiem will be celebrated in St. Patrick's Cathedral to-morrow morning for the late Dr. Ludwig Winthorst, leader of the Catholic party in the German Reichstag, who died on Saturday last. The mass will be celebrated by Archbishop Corrigan.

Arrested on a Serious Charge.

UTICA, N. Y., March 17.—Amos L. Edick, aged 65, a prominent citizen and a former supervisor, has been arrested charged with rape, on the affidavits of six girls, whose ages range from 11 to 15 years. He plead not guilty, and was remanded for examination.

Peach Growers Jubilant.

DOVER, Del., March 17.—The cold snap which set in here will prove of great benefit to the peach crop. The buds are "backened" at least two weeks by it, and the growers say that there is now very little prospect of anything but a successful crop. The growers are jubilant.

The Remains Identified.

UTICA, N. Y., March 17.—The remains of the young man killed by the cars at Oneida have been identified as those of John Burke, aged 20, of this city. He had been to Syracuse to view the ruins of the big fire.

The Ticket Completed.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 17.—The Republican State Central Committee has nominated Henry A. Stearns of Lincoln for Lieutenant-Governor in place of Lyman B. Goff, who declined.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

The New Orleans Massacre the Great Subject Now.

A MESSAGE FROM GOV. NICHOLLS.

He Will Send a Long Explanation of the Mafia Trouble.

Ex-Secretary Bayard Says that Italy Has No Basis for a Claim for Indemnity—Naval Officers Agitating the Strengthening of the Navy—Secretary Proctor's Visit to New Orleans.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The assassination of the Italian prisoners in New Orleans continues to be the overshadowing question which now embarrasses the State Department.

Secretary Blaine has received a telegram from Governor Nicholls stating that all was quiet in New Orleans, and that he would reply to the Secretary's dispatch by letter, with a long explanation of the Mafia troubles in that city.

Dispatches were received at the State Department from other sources indicating that the friends of the assassins were disposed to be indignant because the President had transmitted a message to the Governor of the State. The explanation given of their fury is that an attempt has been made to interfere with State rights, and they did not propose to permit it to go unavenged. Secretary Blaine declines to discuss the future of the controversy.

The presence of Secretary of War Proctor in New Orleans and his reported interview with Governor Nicholls indicated that plenty of aid will be furnished the State by the national government and the army in case the Italian colony should attempt an overt act. There are two companies of artillery at Fort Jackson, Miss. These with the State troops, would surely be, it is thought, able to quell any outbreak.

Ex-Chairman McCreery of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said that undoubtedly the tragedy would be made the subject of a Congressional investigation. The State Department could have no authority to pay an indemnity without the consent of Congress. All that the State Department could do would be to assure the Italian government of the profound regret experienced by the United States and await the action of Congress.

MR. BAYARD'S VIEWS.

The Ex-Secretary Says that Italy Has No Basis for a Claim.

WILMINGTON, Del., March 17.—Ex-Secretary of State Bayard, when asked for his opinion of the killing of the four subjects of the King of Italy at New Orleans on Saturday, said:

"Taking the newspaper reports of this event, there is no basis upon which the Italian government can place a claim for indemnity. The disturbance was purely local, and there was no affront offered to the representatives of the Italian Government. Neither was there any discrimination between the United States and Italy. Both as it was all were used alike."

"The case is," said Mr. Bayard, "these people are given the same protection that is afforded to American citizens. The country seems to them and judgment is imperative. Further than that the United States has no liability. These outbreaks of violence are a part of the common risk to which all people are liable and which it is impossible to prevent. There is no obligation of law or custom of which I am aware that makes the United States liable for indemnity or reparation in this case."

TESTING THE TARIFF ACT.

A Day Set for Argument Set Down by the Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Three cases involving the constitutional nature of the McKinley Tariff act have been advanced by the Supreme Court and argument set for the second Monday in October.

The plaintiffs received leave to submit the cases through briefs and without argument on the first Monday in April next. The cases are those of Boyd, Sutton & Co. and Sternbeck & Co. against the Collector of Customs at New York, and of Sandel, Field & Co. against the Collector at Chicago.

Trouble With the Political Future.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—President Harrison is now passing through a delicate period of his official career. Heretofore he has only been called upon to deal with questions in hand. Now he is asked to penetrate the gloom of the future. His path was never so large, except during the first three months of his experience in the White House, when about half a million citizens sought office, and each thought it his duty to have as many of his friends as possible address to the head of the nation an urgent appeal. The correspondence at present largely deal with the political future of the President, and the presentations of the party, nationally, by States, districts, counties and townships. They seek advice and "pointers."

A Town Wiped Out by Fire.

DETROIT, Mich., March 17.—The town of Fowlerville was literally wiped off the face of the earth by fire last night. The high wind combined with the inadequate facilities for fighting the flames, resulted in the total destruction. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

TAXING ALIENS.

An Important Measure Now Pending in the House at Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 17.—Senator Meek's bill taxing every male alien in the State of 21 years and over $3 per annum for the benefit of the poor fund of the several counties, appears on the surface to be one of the most popular pieces of legislation that have made their appearance here this session.

It passed the Senate by one of the largest votes that any measure has received thus far, and it is now pending in a House committee, which will give its author a chance to be heard upon it this week.

The provisions of the bill make it the mandatory duty of every individual, firm or corporation having in their employ aliens to report to the poor authorities the name or number by which each is known; that the sum of 25 cents per month shall be deducted from the wages of all such, making the sum of $3 per year and turned over to the poor authorities. There is a penalty clause attached to the bill to insure its enforcement.

CELEBRATES THE DAY.

Big Processions in New York and Other Cities in Honor of St. Patrick.

NEW YORK, March 17.—This is the birthday of Ireland's patron saint, and the memory of St. Patrick was honored by the usual celebration in this city, Brooklyn and in neighboring towns and cities.

With the green banner of Erin floating in the breeze, with high church ceremonies, with monster parades and entertainments, the observance of the day was marked and widespread.

The procession in this city was a long one and was reviewed by Mayor Grant. There were two parades in Brooklyn.

In order to avoid any ill feeling, the Irish envoys did not take part in the St. Patrick's day parade, even as spectators. This evening, however, Messrs. Harrison and O'Connor, being the Tipperary County representatives of the visiting delegation, will attend the Tipperary County Men's Association festivities at Clarendon Hall. The others will go to the ball of the 69th regiment at Tammany Hall.

Decline of Racing Horses in Paris.

PARIS, March 17.—At the Lupini sale of horses the amount derived therefrom was forty per cent. under the normal value of the stock. Depression in racing circles because of the action of the Government in preventing betting is said to have been the cause of the unfavorable result.

Jimmy Galvin Released.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 17.—Jimmy Galvin has been released by the Pittsburg ball club. The management wanted Galvin to play for $2,000 the coming season, but Jimmy wanted $3,500 and upon being refused the veteran pitcher was released at his own request.

Arrested for Smuggling.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Miss Jennie Shea, the dressmaker whose two trunks containing $10,000 worth of dresses, etc., were seized by customs officers, was arrested on a charge of smuggling and held in $2,000 bail for examination.

No More Eulogies at Funerals.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 17.—At a meeting of the Albany Ministerial Association there was a heated discussion upon the question of delivering eulogies at funerals, and it was finally decided to abandon hereafter, any attempt at eulogies at funerals. The action has caused much

Mr. Loeser was thirty-one years old. He was formerly associated with his brother, Vincent Loeser, in the freight brokerage business. More recently he was a real estate agent at 21 Beaver street, New York. Funeral services will be held at his late home, "The Gables," to-morrow afternoon at 12 o'clock, and from the Church of Our Saviour, Netherwood, at 12:30 o'clock.

AFTER trying many remedies for catarrh during past twelve years, I tried Ely's Cream Balm with complete success. It is over a year since I stopped using it and have had no return of catarrh. I recommend it to all my friends.—Milton T. Palm, Reading, Pa.

EX-COUNCILMAN GODDARD TESTIFIES.

Newspaper Stories of Trolley Fatalities are Notoriously Misleading, and Their Presentation as an Argument is a Confession of Lack of Evidence Against the System.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I have been much interested and I must confess considerably amused by the various articles on the proposed street railway for Plainfield that have recently appeared in THE PRESS and the Times.

Probably Boston presents the best opportunity for studying the "deadly trolley" of any place in the world. It has an immense system of electric railway under the management of one company, the West End Street Railway Company, and there is no city presenting so many obstacles to its successful operation, the streets are narrow, crooked and crowded, there are more curves, switches and crossings to the mile than anywhere else, and yet in the face of all these disadvantages the "deadly trolley" is invading new streets daily, the "electrics" are the best patronized of all the street cars and have undoubtedly come to stay for the public want them.

Having been so placed for the past year that it has been my business to examine electric power installations throughout the whole of New England, possibly some points may have come to my notice that will be of interest in Plainfield.

There are a few axioms that can first be enumerated:

1st. The ideal for any system of transportation is to have each unit of the system contain its own source of power.

2nd. The investment must be a profitable one.

3rd. There must be no great factor of danger introduced, and in street cars the speed must be only as great as is consistent with the ability of immediate control.

4th. Business men do not generally in their own affairs take newspaper reporters as their most reliable guide, and it is evident that reporters on electrical subjects have mostly received their full portion of the mantle of the Herald reporter who so vividly described the escape of the animals in Central Park some years ago.

Under the first axiom if taken alone, the storage battery is undoubtedly par excellence the ideal electric street railway system, but, and there are several "buts," it has not made itself generally used and there must be some reason why it has not done so, possibly the fact that it adds a load of at least 4,000 pounds dead weight to the car, possibly the fact that like a cylinder of compressed air, it has not been found possible in practice to do what theory would indicate i. e., get about as much power out as we have put in, or the fact that there is a chance of rapid deterioration in some of the cells and the consequent expense of renewal, may have prevented their adoption, or it may be that the opinion of the great majority of disinterested experts that while they all hope some day to see the storage battery successfully used on street cars, they are sure that the day has not yet arrived, may influence capitalists who contemplate the equipment of an electric road, and are governed by the second axiom.

Now we come to the head "the factor of danger introduced," and here it is that our friends the reporters fairly revel, ignoring the fact that there is not a single authenticated case of the death of a human being from the 500 volt current now almost universally used by the trolley systems. Horses and other dumb animals have been killed by the current, but there is no larger factor of danger here than in any other system of rapid transit, and a thousand times as many horses are slowly tortured to death dragging the crowded cars in New York every year as have been killed by the deadly trolley in all New England since its introduction. The trolley system does not (on account of the wire) introduce any great factor of danger to life.

Now as to fire hazard; the Boston fire of the fall of 1889 ascribed to the trolley wire, was traced with great precision by the fire marshal to the exact point where the time system wire was in contact with the trolley wire and so reported, but unfortunately the street railway company was able to establish just as clearly that that particular part of the trolley wire had never been used and was not connected with the feeders, and had never been a live wire. The at that time Inspector and the Chairman of the Electric Committee of the Insurance Exchange both concurred in the opinion that there was no evidence to prove that this was an electrical fire.

As to reporters and electric fires, there was a fire a short time since in Boston reported by nearly all the morning papers as caused by electric wires—why, because the reporters saw some wires where the fire started and did not take the trouble to ascertain the fact that they were only bell wires and that there was neither electric light nor power wires in the building.

That there are electric fires is an undoubted fact and too great care cannot be taken in all light and power installations, but that newspaper items on this subject are notoriously misleading and exaggerated is equally true, and to present a collection of such as argument is to confess weakness and lack of better evidence.

To say that light poles can be used for trolley wires because they only have to hold up the small span wire and that the trolley wire is small is equally misleading on the other side of the question, there is no ordinary system of wires that requires as strong a superstructure or that places so great a strain on the poles perhaps as does the trolley wire, it does not improve the looks of a street as a rule, and in a crowded street like Park avenue between Front street and the railroad would prove itself an unmitigated nuisance and of injury to the real estate on the street, it would however not be the fault either of the street car or the system but of the short-sightedness that allowed any system of street cars in a street of that nature.

In conclusion: the experience of Boston and very many New England towns and cities leads imperatively to the conclusion that the trolley system is a success and accompanied by no greater factor of danger than any equally rapid means of transit, it is as easily controllable as the storage-battery car, and no more likely to result in the setting of a car on fire, in fact it is not, when placed on proper streets properly constructed and maintained, such an awful bug-a-boo as one would suppose before having it daily under observation, and experiencing the convenience of its rapid transit for short distances.

THE WATER-WORKS WAR.

The Supreme Court to Decide Between the Supply Company and the City.

The aid of the Supreme Court has been invoked by the people of the Plainfield Water Supply Company in their endeavor to construct and operate in Plainfield a system of water-works under their old charter and in spite of the fact that they have received no franchise from the city Common Council.

Yesterday, at the solicitation of Frank Bergen, President and counsel of the Supply Company, Chief Justice Mercer Beasley and Justice Bennett VanSyckel granted a writ of certiorari in the case. This writ which is indorsed "The State. The Plainfield Water Supply Company, Prosecutor, vs. The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield", provides that the legality of the recently-adopted ordinance prohibiting the tearing up of the streets for the laying of water pipes without the consent of the Council, shall be investigated before the Court, and demands that the ordinance and all matters pertaining thereto be submitted to the Court, in order "that therein may be done what of right and according to the laws and Constitution of this State ought to be done." The writ was made returnable Tuesday, June 2, but in order to prevent so long a delay Counselor Craig A. Marsh, representing the City, and Counselor Bergen, for the Company, visited Trenton to-day, and this afternoon sought permission to argue the case at once before the Court, so that a decision might speedily be reached.

The Supply Company seeks to wipe out the new ordinance, and if they succeed in that will prosecute immediately the work of laying water mains. If they fail, they will try other measures.

In connection with the arrest of the Company's contractors and their Italian workmen, yesterday, as reported in THE PRESS, it may be stated that Contractor Thomas Doud was released on his own recognizance. The offer of Counselor Marsh to go bail for him was made merely as a bit of friendly by-play.

Plainfield's Popular Captain.

The Wheel, the favorite paper of the cycling fraternity, has the following to say of a well-known Plainfielder:

Frank L. C. Martin, local consul for Plainfield, N. J., who has recently been re-elected captain of the Plainfield Bicycle Club for the fourth term, is making extensive additions to his bicycle business in that town owing to the fast growing demand for wheels. He is one of the most popular wheelmen in that section of the State, and cyclists passing through Plainfield will always receive a hearty welcome at his place of business, No. 75 Park avenue. He was one of the many interested spectators at the Philadelphia Cycle Show last week.

A Birthday Surprise.

Master Fred. Shepherd, of Emily street, on answering a ring of the bell, Friday night, was most agreeably surprised to see about twenty-five of his young friends rush in on him, shouting "Surprise Party," it being his twelfth birthday anniversary. Miss Louise Koller had charge of the arrangements, which were perfect in every respect. The young folks went home about 10 o'clock, all saying, "Didn't we have a splendid time!"

Franklin S. Smith—L. W. Serrell, Jr.

Thursday, March 26, at 8 P. M., L. W. Serrell, Jr., will talk to young men about electricity at the Y. M. C. A. rooms. An explanation of the system of weights and weighing will be the subject of the talk to be given by Franklin S. Smith, Thursday evening of this week, at the same place. The admission will be free to both talks.

Hires' Root Beer is essentially a temperance drink, and, as such, ought to find a place in every larder in the land. It is so cheap too. A 25 cent package makes five gallons.

The Deadly Horse Car.

Myer Byland of 18 Penn street, Newark, was run over by a Orange horse car at 9:30 yesterday morning. The car ran over both legs, crushing them frightfully. Byland was immediately taken to the hospital, where both legs were cut off above the knee. It is feared he will die from shock.

"Alas, alas!" the dude exclaims, "In my slender ankle I've got pains." "Don't fret," said ma, for whom he had sent, "I have some Salvation Oil."

"My time is up," said the doctor to the patient, whom he found using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and he was correct, for his cough had been cured.

REPEATEDLY,

It has been brought to my notice that a person in this city, who claims to be a bicycle repairer, is informing the public that he can sell any kind of Cycle at 10 per cent. below manufacturers' list price, not excepting the world famed Columbias.

As the number of manufacturers is constantly on the increase, some of whom are determined to introduce their inferior product at all hazards, I am not in a position to question the above statement with regard to all the wheels offered, but in justice to myself, and on behalf of the prominent Companies that I represent, viz.,

Pope Manufacturing Co.
The Hartford Cycle Co.,
Western Wheel Works,
Schoverling, Daly & Gales,

I beg to protest most emphatically against such an assumption, for in neither case may any one, be he Agent or Dealer, wilfully reduce the regular list price without forfeiting the Agency or Custom of these Companies.

A discriminating public will draw its own conclusion.

THE EVIDENCE OF THREE MORE CITIES.

Trolley Street Cars With Motors of Today—Not of Testerday—Are Perfectly Safe, Reliable, Economical, Comfortable and a Blessing to People and Property Owners.

Today is given below three more of the series of letters THE PRESS is publishing from the boards of directors of the electric street railways of other cities. The correspondents are responsible officers and their testimony is worthy of publication to undo the prejudices created among the citizens of Plainfield by those who would like to keep the city a village.

It will be noticed that none of these gentlemen mention that there is any dangers to the citizens from their electric cars running away, and thus putting in peril pedestrians and also occupants of their cars. In view of the many cases of runaways by teams of horses in this city, would it not be well to petition the Council for a law against private citizens having horses and carriages, and exclude also the neighboring farmers from coming into town with horses and wagons. The people who are not to be allowed to have street cars to ride in, can then walk along the streets in comparative safety. They can of course obtain all the vegetables they want then by having the middle of the streets converted into fruit and vegetable gardens with boarders of flowers between them and the sidewalk, which would be lovely. The advantage of this arrangement would be that all would be on a common level. Being all created "free and equal," and commanded to sell what they have and give to the poor, why should not the people of Plainfield now seize the opportunity to be a pattern unto Christianity everywhere?

ALBANY RAILWAY COMPANY,
ALBANY, N. Y.,
March 14, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—We began to operate electric cars on the 28th of April, '90, but did not displace all our horse cars until about the first of December. We are still operating three horse cars on the outskirts where the track is not sufficiently strong to carry electric motors. The relative efficiency of the two methods is about as two to one; that is, each electric car has the capacity by reason of increased speed to carry twice as many passengers per day as a horse car of the same size.

Our system is the the Thomson-Houston system, and we consider our plant and appliances at least equal to any which that company has put in, and we believe superior to the majority of electric railways in operation in this country. We do not consider that our electric wires endanger the life of any human being, as we are quite positive that the current which we use will not destroy the life of a human being. Our line is so constructed that the danger of animals or human beings coming in contact with the current used is very slight indeed. We have carried over three millions of passengers in our cars, and not one has come in contact with the electric current or been injured in the slightest degree by any accident which has occurred to our cars.

Our sister road has been in operation since September, 1889, and no person or animal has been injured by the current used by it, until Monday night last, March 9, when through the breaking of a telephone wire which the telephone company claims fell across the trolley wire of the railroad company, one of the horses belonging to the fire department was killed by coming in contact with the telephone wire. The officers of the railroad company, however, claim that the telephone wire which killed the horse was in contact with a badly insulated electric light wire.

There is no very objectionable noise from our cars, and we have had no complaint on the part of our citizens, neither is there any alarming amount of sparking at night either at the trolley or under the car. Sparking is caused by improper construction. It may also be caused by a partial insultion of the trolley wire, by sleet, or of the rails by snow or dirt. The sparking in any event is not alarming. The people of Albany have shown a decided preference for electric cars and they are very liberally patronized.

Very truly yours,
JOHN W. MCNAMARA,
General Manager.

OFFICE OF THE UNITED ELECTRIC RAILWAY,
NASHVILLE, TENN., March 9, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter dated the 6th inst., addressed to Mr. W. T. Smith has been referred to us. There is no comparison between Electric and Horse Car systems. The Electric system is far superior in every way. There never has been a human being killed in the United States by the street railway wires since their introduction.

Our shopmen get the full charge of the current without injury. The motors that are now being made are almost entirely noiseless, in fact all motors can be made almost noiseless by using proper gearing. There is not a particle of danger in the sparks under the wheels at night—of course these sparks are caused by dust and other substances on the rails, breaking the contact.

Our people are immensely pleased with the Electric system and I do not believe that our citizens would let a Horse Car road be built in the city. If I can give you any further information that would be of service, I will be glad to do so.

Yours truly,
E. G. CONNETTE, Sup't.

WORCESTER CONSOLIDATED ST. R'Y CO.,
WORCESTER, Mass., March 16, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—We have not put Electricity on this road yet, but have followed its working on other roads with great interest, and we are now putting the Westinghouse System on a road we are interested in, in another city, and if we were building a new road to-day would not think of horses for a minute. There is no doubt that the Electric motor of to-day is a great success. In looking over electric roads one of the most important questions is, when was it equipped (?), as the motor of last year or any previous year is not to be compared with the motor built to-day as regards economy, reliability, noise, sparks and other objectionable features. As now built they are not a nuisance on the streets; horses are. Horses take up room on the street, make dirt and wear out the pavement. Electric cars make property two miles from the business centre as near as one mile is with horses, consequently increasing the taxable property twice as much. With horses the weight of the car is of great importance and the convenience of the passengers is sacrificed.

I know of no place where property has not increased along the lines of electric roads, both for business or fine residences, nor do I know of any place where the overhead construction was found objectionable after being erected. We were granted the privilege in this city but did not accept because we saw that each new road was better than the previous one and the price was constantly coming down, so waiting was both a benefit to ourselves and the public.

Yours respectfully,
H. S. SEELEY, Treas.

ANOTHER VICTORY.

The Crescent League Bowlers Have Won Their Every Game This Season.

At Somerville, last evening, the bowling team of the Crescent League rolled their eighth game of the season and won their eighth victory. It was Somerville's second defeat at Plainfield's hands and was brought about by the latter's magnificent bowling in the last three frames. Somerville started with a lead of 38 pins and it seemed a sure victory for them from the beginning. But the Crescent grit was too much for them. H. L. Emerson was umpire, and A. V. Kline scorer. The result was as follows:

The Single Tax.

Following is an abstract of a paper read by David L. Thompson before the Unitarian Society of this city, Wednesday evening of last week:

Every human being has three primary needs—the need of food, clothing and shelter—each urgent in the order mentioned. Whatever question of precedence there may be between the last two, there can be none between either and the first. The one imperative demand, not to be waived or intermitted, is the demand for daily bread. There must be in the economy of nature some provision for satisfying a necessity so universal—some law by which the body is provided for in these respects as surely as the lungs are furnished with their needed quantity of air. Any inquiry having for its object the discovery of this law, to be effective must be thorough—must begin, therefore, at the beginning.

In the earliest social state—that of the savage—life is sustained almost entirely by the products of the chase. Personal independence, threatened always, however, by insufficient food supply, is the distinctive feature of this early state.

To obviate the risk thus realized, the savage turns at length to cultivation of the soil. This method bringing to his aid, as it does, the generative force of nature, vastly increases the certainty of maintaining life. So clear has this become, that every civilized nation bases its prospect of continued existence on this method in some form.

At first, each family, continuing the system of rude individualism hitherto prevailing, performs for itself all the offices necessary to satisfy those original needs. So wasteful is this method, that no time is left for social progress, the entire day being occupied in ministering to purely physical needs. Any association of individuals whose members have no leisure is on the plane of barbarism.

It is soon discovered, however, that a particular member of such association displays a special aptitude for making some one of the things that all require—plows, for instance. The next step, then, is to permit him to follow this special bent, exchanging his product afterwards for food and other necessaries. This process, known as the "subdivision of labor," is the first step in civilization. It is the beginning of that beneficient agency, trade, and placing, as it does, the special gift of the individual at the disposal of the community, is the practical acknowledgement of a reciprocal advantage, the admission, therefore of a reciprocal obligation, the institution of a natural method of co-operation, the establishment through industrial methods of a universal brotherhood. By it the selfish individual independence of the savage state is exchanged for the higher, more humane interdependence of civilization.

This division into two classes—the primary worker (he who applies his labor directly to the surface of the earth) and the secondary worker (he who applies it not directly but so as to make the effort of the primary worker less laborious and give both leisure for higher work) is universal. The latter, however, is just as truly a cultivator of the soil as before. The interests of both, therefore, require that access to it should be unobstructed.

The point where the exchange of products will be made most easily will be at the centre of the community, the plowmaker now needing his land but needing it at a point of greater general accessibility. As the exchange of all other products will also be made by preference there, this leads to a vigorous competition for the use of land so situated and develops in it a new value derived from location and known as rent.

This value is given by the community and not by any individual. It belongs therefore to the community, being the fund provided by natural law for meeting the community's expenses.

By permitting to individuals ownership of land instead of possession, society has not only put it into their power to divert into their own pockets this value which belongs to the community but with it the power to hinder, or altogether stop, that natural method of exchange which is the very breath of civilization, producing thus everywhere industrial distress and business stagnation and aggravating the situation still further by substituting for a natural method of taxation the muddle of inconsistencies and injustice which constitutes our present method. It is the object of the movement known as the Single Tax to correct this by raising all public revenue from the value of land.

By this method land in the centre of a city would pay the largest tax. From that point outwardly the tax would fall off gradually till by the time the farm land of the outskirts was reached it would be practically nothing.

A Foreign View of a Plainfield Woman.

[From The New York World.]

There is a woman in Plainfield whose big gray eyes can make a small boy quake or fill him with unspeakable delight. As principal of the public schools she wields every day a great deal of influence that is lasting. Her figure is slight and her hair an iron-gray. As a teacher she was noted for discipline, and rose from the ranks to be principal of schools which are known as models of their kind. There was secret and bitter opposition to Miss Bulkley's appointment at the time, but it died out after she had proved her conscientiousness by falling ill of brain fever from overwork. After that she systemized her work. She made improvements and started a normal school. She raised the standard of scholarship so that now the leading colleges take in graduates of the high school without examination. Miss Bulkley is a Greek scholar and an enthusiast in the language and history of the classics. Several summers she has spent in exploration of Rome and Athens. Last year she paid the salary of a principal to take her place while she went abroad and made an exhaustive study of the educational system of European countries. The benefit of her study the Plainfield schools are getting without charge.

The Need of a Navy.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The naval officers here are making the New Orleans troubles the text for an argument for the rapid strengthening of the navy. Incidents like that of Saturday, they say, are likely to occur without warning at any time, and if Italy were disposed to be captious her fine ironclads might lay our coast cities under tribute for any indemnity she chose to demand. The threat of sending an ironclad to New Orleans, so offensive to national dignity, would be a vain one if this country had strong vessels promptly available, but under existing conditions it is a threat which might almost be carried out with impunity.

The Electrocution Cases.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Supreme Court has fixed the hearing of the electrocution cases from New York on the first Monday in April.

Bequests to Baptist Institutions.

WORCESTER, Mass., March 17.—The will of William Bowles Willard, of Harvard, leaves $3,000 to the American Baptist Home Missionary Society of New York and $2,000 to the Baptist church at Still River.

Portland's City Election.

PORTLAND, Me., March 17.—True, Republican, was elected mayor by 130 majority over all. The largest vote ever polled in this city was brought out.

Prize Fighting Legal in Indiana.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., March 17.—The court has ordered the release of Corey, Tell and Clark, who were arrested for taking part in a recent prize fight near this city. Judge Snyder decided that under the laws of Indiana prize fighting is not illegal in this State.

Robbed His Dead Companion.

EXETER, N. H., March 17.—The coroner decided that James H. Marston, who was found dead by the roadside, came to his death by a fall from his carriage and exposure, and was afterwards robbed by D. C. McKenzie, a boon companion.

Suffocated by a Cat.

CHICAGO, March 17.—The coroner has been notified that a five-months-old daughter of Bernard Shrone was suffocated during the night by a pet cat that was sleeping in the cradle with the baby.

Struck by a Passing Train.

HUDSON, Mass., March 17.—Dr. Livermore of Stowe, aged 74 years, was struck by a train at the Fitchburg Railroad crossing, near Maynard, and fatally injured. His horse was killed.

Eva's Future Home.

CARBONDALE, Pa., March 17.—Eva Mans, who has been living in this place with a friend for a number of weeks, has decided to reside here permanently.

Beat the School Teacher.

CLEVELAND, O., March 17.—Noah Young and his three sons started after School Teacher L. A. Allen's scalp at Eno, a small town near Springfield during the morning. They dragged Allen out, knocked him down with a billy and then nearly kicked him to death because, as they alleged, he punished Young's smallest son with undue severity. No arrests have as yet been made.

Estee Gains Three Votes.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 17.—The ballot for United States Senator resulted: Estee, 37; De Young, 24; Felton, 14; Blanchard, 12; Perkins, 1; Wetmore, 1. This is a net gain of three for Estee. The gain of one for De Young and one for Felton is only apparent, being due to increased attendance. The 25 Democrats present voted for John P. Irish.

Seven Years for Swindling.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Charles Hearne, director-general of the Dorcas Publishing Co., has been sentenced to seven years and seven months for swindling Patrick S. Coen, a new arrived Irishman, out of $700 on the pretext of giving him stock in the company which Hearne was the [illegible]

The Story of the Pyramids.

Why have the pyramids endured for ages?

Because they are founded on a firm and strong foundation, which enables them to withstand the wear and tear of time.

In like manner strong and vigorous persons endure to late old age the wear and tear of years of energetic toil and labor.

It is only those who are weak in nerve-power or physical vigor—who have not sound strength of nerve and body constituting a firm foundation of health, who are weaklings in the world, who make failures of undertakings or who fall by the wayside in the hurly, burly rush of life. Disease is the mill-stone about the neck of energy, paralyzing effort, and keeping thousands from fulfilling their ambitions.

"Does this mean you"?

Have you lost your grit and energy?

DOES WEAKENING DISEASE HOLD YOU POWERLESS IN ITS GRASP?

Then look to yourself, for weak feeling and Spring debility are the fore-runners of exhaustion. Every sleepless moment you pass at night presages days of prostration: every hour you feel weak, nervous, languid, tired, with shattered nerves, trembling limbs, dull head, disordered stomach and irregular bowels may be followed by weeks and months of sickness. Every day you neglect these symptoms may mean years of unutterable misery—or those terrible results, "nervous prostration, heart failure, paralysis, insanity or premature death."

Can you afford to be sick;

The world will pity you living and forget you dead.

Do you want to be well?

To be strong in nerve, vigorous in body, powerful in that bounding health which assures the success of every endeavor?

Then be advised, and go to the nearest drug store now—not to-morrow or next week, when it may be too late—and get a bottle of that wonderful strength and health restorer Dr. Greene's Nervura, the acknowledged greatest of all nerve and brain invigorants. It will certainly give you that health and strength you have looked for elsewhere in vain. It is purely vegetable and harmless and costs but $1 per bottle

How to Build Health and Strength.

I wish to say, for the benefit of others, that I was taken sick with Heart Disease. I had two scientific physicians, and was under their care seven or eight months, but constantly grew worse; lost 75 pounds of flesh, and was so weak I could not raise myself in bed, and the doctors said I could be no better, but hearing of Dr. Greene's Nervura, I commenced taking it, and in a week I began to feel better. At present, after using it a few months, I am able to walk and ride out, have gained 40 pounds in weight so that I consider that Dr. Greene's Nervura saved my life, for which I feel very grateful.

Dr. Greene, of 35 West Fourteenth st., New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled.

SONGS BY THE POETS.

Toddle and Dawdle.

Toddle and Dawdle, two sweet little things—
Are darling earth-angels without any wings;
You could not help loving the one or the other,
No more than a kitten could not love its mother.

Toddle has gold in his hair; and his eyes
Are tinged with the blues of some fairyland skies;
While Dawdle is dark—a wee dainty delight,
With great open eyes which seem born of the night.

Toddle's a bundle of nervous unrest,
Forever at play or forever in quest
Of mischief or something or other, you know;
While Dawdle—poor Dawdle! Well, Dawdle is slow.

Toddle won't dawdle, but toddles all day,
While Dawdle won't toddle, but dawdles away,
And it's far more amusing to see Toddle toddle,
Than it is to see poor, little, dear Dawdle dawdle.

Yet if Dawdle would toddle a little, I guess,
And Toddle would dawdle a bit more—not less—
They both would be better and happier, too,
I think so at least. So do others. Don't you?

Of Dawdles and Toddles the world has too many,
And yet 'twould be awful if there were not any;
What I mean is, be neither too fast nor too slow,
Don't dawdle—don't toddle—take it easy, you know.

—Joe Kerr, in Browning-King's Monthly.

Don't Say One Thing and Mean Another.

The little lane—the greenwood lane—
Where Stella dwelt was gay with singing;
For brook and bird, in many a strain,
Down vale and moor their notes were flinging;
But Stella's heart was deaf to song,
No longer she her tears could smother;
For she had learned, at last, 'twas wrong
To say one thing and mean another.

'Tis right, 'tis due, when hearts are true,
To show that heart without deceiving;
And not to speak, in idle freak,
To try if one's the power of grieving!
In Stella's heart and Stella's mind,
She loved one youth—and loved no other;
But Stella's tongue was oft inclined
To say one thing and mean another.

Would all might see how sweet 'twould be
If truth alone their words directed—
How many a day might then be gay,
That passeth now in tears, dejected;
Would all might learn, and all discern,
That truth keeps longest, friend or brother!—
Then maids, be kind, and speak your mind,
Nor say one thing, and mean another!

—N. Y. Ledger.

The Candy Pull.

You kin talk about y'r op'ras, y'r germans, an' all sich,
T'r afternoon receptions an' them pleasures o' the rich,
You kin feast upon y'r chocolates, an' y'r creams, an' ices full,
But none o' them is ekal to a good old candy pull.

Fer ther' isn't any perfume like the 'lasses on the fire,
A bubblin' an' a dancin', as it keeps a risin' higher,
While the spoon goes stirrin', stirrin' till the kittle's even full:
No, I really think ther's nothin' like a good old candy pull.

It's true we miss the music, an' the ball rooms' crush and heat,
But ther' isn't any bitter that stays behind the sweet,
An' I think the world'd be better, an' its cup o' joy more full,
If we only had more pleasures like the good old candy pull.

In the Nursery.

Where do I like my lady best?
In truth I can not tell.
Like daily sun, from east to west,
O'er time of work, o'er time of rest,
She casts a shining spell.

From drawing-room to terrace moves
The presence of my dear,
As after Venus flit the doves,
My thoughts, my happy hopes, my loves
Fly up and follow near.

Yet if one picture there could be
Which I might choose to keep,
'Tis in the fire-lit nursery,
Two children clinging to her knee,
The third held close, asleep.

—Alice Ward Bailey, in Harper's Bazar.

The Boy and the Slot Machine.

There was a boy in our town,
All loaded down with sin;
He came across a slot machine
With "Drop a nickel in."

He tied a nicket on a string
And dropped it deftly through;
He worked the thing, got a cigar,
And saved his nickel, too.

Time after time he dropped his coin
Thus deftly through the slot,
And filled his pockets with cigars
Until he had the lot.

The judge in passing on the case,
Said that this boy of sin
Was guiltless, as he was not told
To leave the nickel in.

Our Kind of a Man.

Not an Apollo with snow-white hand,
A trifle austere, nor yet too bland;
But a heart of gold all through and through,
And tender and sympathetic, too—
Our kind of a man!

Ah, one who, walking the world's broad ways,
Sees little to blame and much to praise;
Has cheer and smile for the weary throng
And bold contempt for the bitter wrong—
Our kind of a man!

Yes, one who, ignoring baser ends,
Liveth for home and the good of friends;
Where, self, forgotten, broad manhood lies,
A star in the glory of the skies—
Our kind of a man!

Who not for theories but for deeds,
Christ's own apostle, with love for creeds,
The world's brave prophet, after God's plan,
In healing and teaching he leads the van—
Our kind of a man!

—E. S. L. Thompson, in Leslie's News paper.

A New Catechism.

He—
What is it that makes this life worth living,
Tell me, when all has been said and done?
She—
It is the rapture of forgiving,
When you yourself are the guilty one.

He—
What makes us all so opposed to dying,
When so much of Heaven we all have heard?
She—
Because when we are dead there's no replying
And woman must have the final word.

He—
What is your idea of Heaven—
Of heaven on earth, perhaps I mean?
She—
A place where the men all are twenty-seven
And I am the only girl just eighteen.

He—
What's your idea of a perfect poet,
One to whom all should bow the knee?
She—
How absurd you are, Well, if you must know it,
The poet who writes of love and me.

When Mamie Died.

When Mamie died, the house was hushed and still,
A nameless presence seemed to enter there,
A specter we could neither see nor hear,
When Mamie died.

When Mamie died the birds forgot to sing,
And nature sympathized in tears of rain;
It seemed as if our hearts were rent in twain
When Mamie died.

When Mamie died, we could not understand,
We bowed in grief, the children round us cried:
But now we know the dear Lord took her hand
When Mamie died.

—Moses G. Shirley, in Yankee Blade.

SIBLEY'S CLOSE CALL.

Big Bat Tells an Amusing Story of Ex-Congressman Finerty.

Fun in the House Restaurant—Gen. Crook's Old Scout Charms a Circle of Congressmen—How Finerty Found Some Items for His Paper.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

There was a quaint party in the House restaurant the other afternoon. It included Maj. J. M. Burke, better known as Arizona John; Congressman Geary, of California; Congressman McAdoo, of New Jersey, and Baptiste Purier, better known to army officers as Big Bat, an old scout of Gens. Crook, Miles and Terry. He is here with the Sioux Indian delegation. Stories of ex-Congressman John Finerty, of Chicago, were in order. While Finerty was a member of the house of representatives he paid great attention to Irish matters. He never missed an opportunity of twisting the tail of the British lion or of expectorating tobacco juice into his eyes. He had an ardent sympathizer in Richelieu Robinson, who then represented a Brooklyn district. McAdoo says Robinson was coming into the house one day when he met Finerty who was going out.

"What's being done in the house?" Robinson inquired.

"Oh, nothing but some damned American legislation," was Finerty's response.

Of course there was a roar of laughter. To the astonishment of everybody, Big Bat began to tell a story about Finerty. It was told in the dialect peculiar to the Canadian French trappers and excited great merriment. The story is known in the northwest as "Lieut. Sibley's close call." It was about the time of the Custer massacre. The command was near Tongue river. Lieut. Sibley was detailed to go to the Crow nation and bring back some Crows as scouts. Sibley's party numbered thirty picked men. Among them were Big Bat, Frank Gruard, chief of scouts, and Mr. Finerty. Finerty was accompanying the column as a newspaper correspondent. Up to that time he had been looking for items for his paper. As Big Bat expresses it: "He would come to me and say, 'What you know for my papair. I want to put something in my papair!'

"Dis occurred a half a dozen times a day. I tell him: 'You see on de expe-

"BY GAR, DEY ARE SIOUX."

dishon. You get someting den for your papair!'

"We go for several hours. No Sioux in sight. De lieutenant was little heedful. He say: 'Bat, I must rest and water my horses, an' my men must have some coffee.'

"I say: 'Sibley, I like coffee, but damn de coffee now. Let's keep on. I take my coffee day after to-morrow.'

"De lieutenant say: 'Bat, we must have coffee.'

"We loosen de saddle-girths. We make de coffee. I tell de lieutenant: 'Sibley, you goin' to see some Indian for dat coffee.'

"We drink de coffee. We tighten de saddle girths and start on. Pretty soon I see things dat don't grow on the prairie. One, two head pop up here on de left; one, two head pop up dere on de right. I say to de lieutenant: 'Sibley, you see dat? you see dat? No Indians here, oh, no!'

"He say: 'Bat, what you going to do?'

"I say: 'Sibley, we light out for de timber.'

"We do light out, quick. Now come pop! pop! pop! (clapping his hands three times.) Before we get to de timber, a bullet strike Finerty's horse in de tail. I say: 'Ha! ha! Finerty, something to put in de papair!'

"Finerty he say: 'Damn de papairs.'

"We quick get into de timber. Every man is told to tie his horse to a tree, and lie down. I was de last in de timber. I ties my horse near de edge of de timber. I forget my overcoat on de saddle. It was hot like de devil in de daytime and cold like de blizzard at night. Every man he get behind a tree. I get me behind a tree. I hear de pop, pop, pop, (clapping his hands together). I see one sorrel horse. He get hit. I say: 'Hello, Finerty! One sorrel horse, he gone. Put dat in your papair.'

"Finerty, he say: 'Damn de papair.'

"I am behind a tree. I make myself as small as I can; squeeze myself togeder like a sandwich. Every now and den comes pop, pop, pop. I see my leg not behind de tree. I pull it back. I say 'My God.' Just den a twig right dere by the bullet clipped right troo. It fall to de ground. Dat was a close call for Bat. Den pop, pop, pop. White horse gets full of lead. He falls. Den I say: 'Finerty, de white horse get full of lead. He falls. Put dat in your papair.'

"Finerty he say: 'Damn the papair.'

"De pop, pop, pop kept up, and so did de tinking of everybody. After awhile a black horse falls shot. I say: 'Hello, Finerty! Black horse gone. Another item for de papair.'

"'Oh,' say Finerty, 'damn de papair.'

"Pop, pop, pop, come heavier and heavier. De shouting louder. I know the village near and some more Indians. I say to de lieutenant: 'Sibley, by gar, we have to get out of dis. Leave dese horses.'

"Sibley he say: 'No I can't leave de horses. Dey government property.'

"I say: 'What you talk? By gar, I have got de best horse in de whole outfit. He my horse, my own horse. I let him go. I want to save my life. If I wounded, you have got to leave me. If you wounded, we have to leave you. You know what dat means. Any man wounded he left, and dat means worse dan dead.'"

Bat was right. A wounded man in savage warfare imperils the living, and there is no hope for him if he is left. Those who blame Gen. Forsythe to-day should remember that he had thirty-eight wounded people to carry from Wounded Knee.

In the battle at Wounded Knee a sergeant received a fatal shot. "I am done

"I MAKE MYSELF AS SMALL AS I CAN."

for," he said, as he fell. "Make a breastwork of my body and save yourselves, boys." And they did it.

Big Bat continued his story thus:

"Sibley, he say, 'I must account for de government for de horses if we leave dem.'

"I say, 'If you stay here you 'count for noting. De gover'ment have to 'count for you.'

"I crawl over to Frank, and we join Sibley. Den, pop, pop, pop. A roan horse falls. I say to Finerty: 'Ha, Finerty, someting more to put in your papair!'

"'Oh! Damn my papair,' says Finerty.

"We consult with Gruard. We decide to skin out an' leave de horses as a blind, an' get up de mountain. It was sundown. We expect a charge. If we got up in de hill we would have some chance. Dere in de timber we had none. Sibley den give de orders for every man to crawl on his belly. I stay behind to shoot any man dat stand up and don't crawl. About three hundred yard we strike de foot of de hill. Den we climb carefully, so nobody could see us. We listen to de pop, pop, pop. I say: 'Finerty, dere must be some more horse gone. I don't know de color. I can't tell you for your papair.'

"Finerty he say: 'Oh! damn de color and damn de papair.'

"By gar, we scramble up de hills. When he was going about twenty minoot it come what I expect—une grand fusillade, and pop, pop, pop, pop, pop. Dey charge. Get de saddles. Indian damphools, kill all de horses, an' get no scalp. Indians astonished. Dey know we got good position on de mountain. Can't follow with horses. It come abor dark. We get to de top of de mountain. Den I miss my overcoat. Mon Dieu how cold! We look from top of de mountain on de oder side. Whew! We see de village. Den we know how many Sioux. De whole village of de Si—

"FINERTY HE HAVE HIS BOOK OUT MAKING NOTES."

nation was dere for miles. Den commence your hair to creep. I look at Finerty and say: 'Now you have someting to put in de papair.'

"And Finerty he say: 'Oh, don't mention dat damn papair.'

"It get cold like a big blizzard. I have a hickory shirt on. My overcoat is on dat damn saddle. But we in a good strong position. Gruard he very sick. He don't care if he live or die. I say to de lieutenant: 'Sibley, I freeze. We got to have a fire.'

"Lieutenant he say: 'Bat, you make a fire, I shoot you.'

"I say: 'Sibley, I die wid de cold. I might as well be killed with pistol as freeze. I make de fire.'

"I do make it. Sibley he warm himself. He say: 'It's all right, Bat. You an' I die together.'

"I feel better. I get warm. I look around. By gar, what you tink I see? Finerty he have his book out making notes for dat damn papair.'"

Bat then told how they completed their journey. They had to cross the river twice. At the second crossing all the men could not go over. Several were exhausted. The command covered them up with leaves, and located the place so that they could come back for their comrades. But Finerty was a giant of endurance. He stuck all the way through. At last they joined the main command, and a party was sent to rescue the stragglers. "When we git our coffee in camp," said Bat, "Finerty he sat on the quartermaster's box, I say to Finerty: 'You have had one grand time. Put it in your papair.'

"Finerty he say: 'You bet. Dat's what I'm here for, to write for dat damn papair.'" ARCH J. CUMMINGS.

A Woman Best Understands a Woman's Ills.

The experiments of Lydia E. Pinkham that years ago gave to the world that blessing, the Vegetable Compound, were made through a feeling of sympathy for the afflicted of her sex. She discovered that nearly all the diseases of woman have a common origin, and therefore may have a common cure. As a result, thousands of women in all parts of the civilized world cherish grateful remembrance of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and ever bless its discoverer.

"My Work Shall Be Perpetuated."

The perpetuation of Mrs. Pinkham's work was guarded by her foresight from the start. Every suffering woman applying to her received personal attention, and the details of every case were recorded. These records are to-day the largest in the world, contain facts not to be found elsewhere, and are now available to the women of the world.

A Savior of Her Sex.

When pain becomes a constant companion; when there is no repose for the sufferer by day or night; when life itself seems to be a calamity; and when all this is reversed by a woman, whose only ambition is to do good to others, has she not won the above title? Suffering women who seek Mrs. Pinkham find both a helper and friend.

A Record of a Life's Work.

The entire facts connected with every case ever treated by Lydia E. Pinkham are on record. With the assistance of lady clerks writing at her dictation, over one hundred letters per day have been disposed of, the answers going to ladies in all parts of the world, and the facts compiled in a library of reference for the benefit of suffering women. Here is a life's practice of a woman among women, and represents the largest collection of facts the world has ever known.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S Vegetable Compound

Has stood the test of many years, and is to-day the only Positive Cure and Legitimate Remedy for those peculiar weaknesses and ailments of women, all organic diseases of the Uterus or Womb, and Ovarian Troubles, Bearing-down Sensations, Weak Back, Debility, Uterus Tumors, Displacements of the Womb, Nervous Prostration, &c.

Every druggist sells it as a standard article, or sent by mail in form of Pills or Lozenges, on receipt of $1.00.

TWO HUNDRED LOST

The British Steamer Utopia Sunk at Gibraltar.

COLLIDES WITH AN IRONCLAD.

She Was Bound for New York With 700 Italian Emigrants.

Many Women and Children Were Drowned The Channel Squadron Picked Up Hundreds of Passengers from Spars and Rigging—No Definite Information as to How the Collision Occurred.

GIBRALTAR, March 18.—The British steamship Utopia, from Italian ports with 700 Italian emigrants aboard bound for New York, collided with the British ironclad Rodney anchored in Gibraltar Bay and sank soon afterward off Ragged Staff.

A southwest gale was blowing at the time of the collision. Many women and children were drowned. A large number clinging to the rigging have been rescued by boats from the channel squadron.

At this hour it is not known how many lives were lost, but it is placed at any figure from 200 to 400.

There is no definite information as yet as to how the collision occurred, but the officers of the Rodney insist that the collision could have been avoided, as their lights were burning brightly and could have been seen a mile off.

The vessel was an iron screw steamer of 2,731 tons register. She was built in the port of Glasgow in 1874 and was owned in that city.

Later reports say that most of the passengers had scrambled into the rigging and were saved.

The Utopia was considered one of the best and most serviceable vessels owned by the Anchor Line Company.

The Drowned and Rescued.

A later dispatch says that 200 passengers were drowned, and 180 were rescued by ships in the harbor.

The Utopia carried emigrants from Trieste, Austria; Catarina, Naples and other ports.

CONNECTICUT'S TROUBLE.

The Democrats Will Not Agree to the Judson Plan of Settlement.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 18.—The Democratic legislative caucus decided to oppose the Judson bill and they will kill it in the Senate to-day. This bill provides for the taking of the Gubernatorial muddle to the courts for settlement, and provides for a thorough examination of all doubtful ballots.

Ex-Governor Waller was in consultation with the Democratic leaders, and it is probable that the Senate will send back the Judson resolution amended to meet the views of Mr. Waller, who wants another election held. This, the Republicans say, they will not submit to.

The Republicans have decided to give the Democrats a week to agree to some mode of settlement, and if they fail to do so then to adjourn the Legislature, leaving the Republican State holdovers in office for the next two years.

SHUTTING DOWN ON GOLD.

The Treasury Department Refuses to Furnish $1,000,000 in Bars for Export.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Wall street has something to talk about in the refusal of the Secretary of the Treasury to permit the Assay Office in New York to furnish $1,000,000 in gold bars for shipment abroad.

The bankers who had asked for the bullion were not even given the privilege of purchasing the bars by paying the premium which the Secretary has been authorized to exact by the new law. They were given the alternative of accepting coin or nothing.

The government has never before placed any obstacle in the way of the flow of American fine gold bars to Europe. It was the first time the Secretary of the Treasury had availed himself of the privilege of the legislative appropriation act passed by Congress on the last day of its existence, and which permits him, in his discretion either to exact a small premium for the bars or to refuse to surrender them absolutely. Therefore the action of the department was the cause of general comment in the financial world and had a decided effect on the speculative markets.

For a Murder 27 Years Ago.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 18.—Elias Young has been arrested here for the murder of Lieut. Stewart Robinson in 1864. Robinson was trying to arrest some men who resisted the drafts when he was fired upon. One of the men in the party confessed before he died. This led to Young's arrest.

Mr. Huston Still Treasurer.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—There seems to be a hitch in the appointment of J. A. Lemcke, of Indiana, as Treasurer of the United States. The health of Mr. Lemcke is not good, and it is feared, should he accept the place, he would break down, and as there is a great expense in transferring the office, counting the cash, etc., it would not be advisable to make the change now for a few months. It looks now as if Treasurer Huston would remain on duty for some time yet.

[HENNESSY AND THE MAFIA.

The Late Chief's Secretary Tells About the Assassination.

NEW ORLEANS, March 18.—Since the killing of the Italians many stories have been given circulation regarding the experiences that Chief David Hennessy had had with the Mafia during the last year of his life.

It is related that the late chief had told several friends a short time previous to his death that several Mafia assassinations were based upon the suspicion that the victims had given him information. He instanced the Esposito case, in which he took an active part, and it is believed by many that the Italians who gave Hennessy the information that led to Esposito's arrest were the prime movers in the conspiracy to bring about the chief's death, realizing that he had them in his power.

Mr. George W. Vandervoort, Hennessy's private secretary, makes a statement of the capture of the notorious bandit, Esposito. A large reward had been offered for his arrest and Hennessy took charge of the case. One day he met Esposito face to face on the street and placed him under arrest. Extradition papers were obtained, and Hennessy smuggled the bandit on board of a ship bound for New York. On the day that the ship sailed the levee was crowded with Italians and the chief's life was feared to be in danger, but he walked boldly into the crowd and was not molested. The Mafia made strenuous efforts to prevent the extradition of Esposito, but he was taken to Italy.

"Chief Hennessy," said the secretary, "was repeatedly warned that his life was in danger, but, being a man utterly without fear, paid no heed to the warnings." Mr. Vandervoort, in reply to a question as to whether Hennessy had any apprehension regarding Detective O'Malley, said: "Yes. It was but a short time before Hennessy was stricken down that he told me if he was ever to be killed that O'Malley would have a hand in the job."

CONSPIRACY CHARGED.

Prominent Officers of the Clothing Cutters' Union Arrested.

NEW YORK, March 18.—Walter S. Westbrook, secretary of the Clothing Cutters' National Union, was arrested here on a warrant from Rochester, charged with conspiracy, and James McGuire, president of the Clothing Cutters' Union, was arrested in Philadelphia, on a warrant from the same place, charged with extortion.

Westbrook is alleged to have led a movement to boycott a number of manufacturers at Rochester, and McGuire is charged with having extorted money from the manufacturers on the understanding that the boycott would be raised.

Missing and His Accounts Short.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 18.—William A. Wissong, who has always been considered one of Baltimore's exemplary citizens and has held many positions of trust and confidence, is reported missing and a shortage of $11,000 has been found in his accounts as treasurer of the Association for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor. He was once elected to the Legislature but did not qualify, saying he did not believe the election was honestly conducted.

The Grand Army's 25th Anniversary.

RUTLAND, Vt., March 18.—Commander-in-Chief Veazey has issued a general order for the observance of the 25th anniversary of the Grand Army on April 6. It is ordered that all posts will hold on the evening of that day a public commemorative meeting, notice of which must be given every comrade, and special invitations extended to the Sons of Veterans, the Woman's Relief Corps and kindred organizations; also to the clergy, press, school children and citizens generally.

Gen. Fremont's Remains at Sparkhill.

NYACK, N. Y., March 18.—The remains of the late Major-General John C. Fremont were brought to Sparkhill via the Northern Railroad of New Jersey, and were interred in Rockland Cemetery, where lie the remains of other well known army men. Lieutenant-Commander Gorringe, who brought the obelisk to this country, is also buried there.

Sherman's Case Against Tracy Dismissed.

UTICA, N. Y., March 18.—Judge Wallace has dismissed the case of Thomas P. Sherman vs. William G. Tracy, which came up in the United States Circuit Court on a motion to put over for the term. Sherman sued Tracy to recover $50,000 damages for the alienation of his wife's affections.

Big Purse for an International Fight.

NEW YORK, March 18.—The managers of the Crib Club of Troy have offered a purse of $12,000 for an international prize fight between Ted Pritchard and Bob Fitzsimmons. A message has been sent to Pritchard asking him if he would accept and if so to forward articles.

Mose Weavers Strike.

NORWALK, Conn., March 18.—A strike among the weavers of the Norwalk Woolen Mills at Winnipauk has commenced. The weavers demand higher wages, which the mill people refuse to grant.

Actor Frank Frayne Dead.

CHICAGO, March 18.—Frank L. Frayne, the actor, died in his apartments in the Criterion Theatre building last night of neuralgia of the heart.

THE GREAT TRAGEDY

Mr. Blaine is Awaiting Gov. Nicholls' Reply.

MOB LEADERS MAY BE INDICTED.

The New Orleans Grand Jury to Consider the Lynching.

All the Victims Said to be Subjects of the United States—Chief Hennessy's Secretary Tells About the Mafia—Mayor Shakespeare Receives a Warning—Detective O'Malley in Cleveland.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Secretary Blaine expects to receive the reply of Governor Nicholls to-day, and until then will say nothing on the subject of the lynching at New Orleans. He and Baron Fava, the Italian Minister, have received a large number of letters and telegrams, nearly all being from indignant Italians, who denounce the killing of their countrymen as an outrage and hint at government indemnity.

The delegation that is coming from Chicago is expected to arrive to-day, and it is probable that they will seek an interview with Secretary Blaine and perhaps the President. No intimation will be given them, however, of the character of the steps, if any, that the government intends to take in the matter.

MORE MAFIA WARNINGS.

The Mayor of New Orleans Receives a Death Notice.

NEW ORLEANS, March 18.—Judge Marr is determined that there shall be a thorough and rigid investigation of last Saturday's affair.

In his charge to the grand jury the judge deplores the tragedy and declares that a matter of such gravity cannot be ignored by the courts.

The city remains very quiet. The Mafia warning received by Mr. W. S. Parkerson does not make him feel uneasy, although there may be some foundation for it. He knows that if a hair of his head was touched it would result in a terrible punishment of the Italians and Sicilians.

The result of the events of Saturday is that the Provenzanos and the Matrangas are accusing each other of being members of the Mafia and from this some important facts may become known. That the Matrangas are prominent in this society of assassins there seems to be no doubt, but in the Hennessy case there was not sufficient evidence to implicate Charles Matranga.

The grand jury is investigating the charges of bribery of jurors in the Hennessy case and it is understood they have some important clues.

Mayor Shakespeare has received a letter purporting to come from 3,000 Italians, notifying him that Parkerson, Wickliffe and himself must die at the hands of the aforesaid committee. In conclusion the letter states that the chief assassins are not yet caught. Chief of Police Gaster thinks all such letters are a hoax.

They Were All Citizens.

The Registrar of Voters has carefully examined the registration books for the purpose of ascertaining the allegiance of the men executed by the people on Saturday. He finds that every one of them was a registered voter of the city of New Orleans.

A Drive at Civilization.

ROME, March 18.—Count Heirschel, of the Italian Embassy, when asked in regard to the reports that the American residents of Italy were in danger, replied: "It is absurd. Italy is a civilized country. Murders sometimes occur there, but not massacres. As a civilized nation Italy would not permit any outrage that could by any exertion of authority be prevented. The Americans in Rome need have no dread of reprisals. Italy has demanded and will obtain satisfaction in a firm and majestic manner."

O'Malley is in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., March 18.—Dominick O'Malley, the detective who is accused of tampering with the Mafia jury in New Orleans has arrived here. Detectives McMillan and Gallagher and Patrolman Neill, who do duty on the West Side, say that O'Malley was at one time a member of the "Triagle Gang" of toughs. O'Malley was first arrested on a charge of larceny. In 1863 Gallagher took him in on suspicion and he was sent to the workhouse.

SOLD ROBBERY BY A TRAMP.

He Chloroforms a Girl and Then Ransacks the House.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., March 18.—A daring robbery occurred on College Hill, a suburb of this place. Bertha Park, a 16-year-old daughter of a well known citizen was left alone in charge of the house of a neighbor, Mrs. Beadly, the latter with her family being absent.

At 11 a. m. a man, presumably a tramp, demanded something to eat. Miss Park refused to supply his wants, whereupon she was seized, chloroformed, bound and gagged and thrown into the cellar.

The robber then ransacked the house, securing money and other valuables. He then prepared and eat his dinner and left the house.

Miss Park was discovered later by a member of the family. She was resuscitated but is in a critical condition from injuries and effects of the chloroform. There is no clue to the villain.

PLON PLON IS DEAD

Prince Napoleon Dies in Rome After a Long Illness.

KING HUMBERT AT HIS BEDSIDE.

Prior to His Death His Cries of Agony Were Heard in the Street.

Gladstone Scores Parnell in His Speech at Hastings—Cork Welcomes the Irish Leader—Ninety Spaniards Slain by the Natives of the Caroline Islands—Workmen Roasted to Death in Scotland.

ROME, March 18.—Prince Jerome Napoleon died last evening.

Abbe Pujol had administered extreme unction while King Humbert, the Queen, Prince Victor, Princesses Clothilde and Letitia, with other members of the family, knelt about the bedside.

A few hours before his death it required the united strength of four men to keep the dying Prince Napoleon in bed, and his cries, caused by the agony he he endured, were plainly heard in the street.

His memoirs and entire correspondence were placed by Prince Napoleon in the hands of Frederick Massom.

It is said that his political testament declares that France has forever abandoned the monarchial idea, and requires that the traditions of the house of Bonaparte be never used in the interests of a mere dynasty. To Prince Louis he is said to have left, as a sacred legacy, the duty of upholding the democratic empire.

Sketch of Prince Napoleon's Career.

Napoleon Joseph Charles Paul Bonaparte, popularly known as Prince Jerome and "Plon Plon," was a great-grandnephew of Napoleon I., and was the second son of Jerome, King of Westphalia, and Catherine of Wurtemburg. He was born in Trieste Sept. 9, 1822.

His education, commenced in Rome, was completed in Geneva and Arenenberg, where his cousin, Napoleon III., was his tutor.

He married the Princess Clothilde, daughter of Victor Emanuel, in 1859, and visited the United States with her in 1861, being royally entertained in New York, Washington and elsewhere.

Plon Plon's residence in France was interrupted in 1845, owing to his sympathy with the revolutionists, but he returned in 1848 and again made himself prominent.

He had no distinguished military record, but served in the Constituent Assembly in 1848, in the Legislative Assembly in '49 and in the Senate in '52. He also fulfilled several diplomatic missions and was president of the Imperial Commission of the Exhibition of 1855.

In October, 1872, he was ordered to leave Paris, refused to go and was forcibly expelled. He afterwards returned to his chateau in Prangins, on Lake Geneva, with his wife and family, the latter consisting of two sons, born in 1862 and 1864, and a daughter in 1860. He also resided in his mansion at Milan. He was a great traveler and had been over most of the world.

GLADSTONE AND PARNELL.

The Liberal Leader Discusses the Irish Question in His Speech at Hastings.

LONDON, March 18.—In his speech at Hastings, Mr. Gladstone said he found little to blame in the recent foreign policy of Lord Salisbury.

Turning to the Irish questions Mr. Gladstone said that the present condition of the Irish Parliamentary party was the result of a long series of events. It could not be disputed that the members of a party were bound to sink individual preferences, and defer to the action of the majority.

Before proceeding further he would like to say a word about Mr. Parnell's speech, in which that gentleman had said that he had opposed the claims of the labor candidates in consequence of his obligation to the Liberal leaders. That statement was untrue. "On the contrary," said Mr. Gladstone, "I have been ever ready to support the claims of labor candidates."

After a slight allusion to the divorce court proceedings, Mr. Gladstone said the Liberals were ready to face defeat to the full extent, if necessary, rather than create a constitutional leadership in Ireland under such guidance as that of Parnell.

ESTEE IN THE LEAD.

He Tells Drops Out of the California Senatorial Contest.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18.—At a conference held by the friends of De Young it was decided to withdraw his name in the Senatorial contest in favor of Felton.

The last joint ballot resulted as follows: Estee 43, Felton 38, Blanchard 2, White 24, Perkins 1, Johnston 1. Necessary to a choice, 58.

After the adjournment of the joint legislative convention a tremendous sensation was caused by the entrapping of several legislators in an actual case of bribery in behalf of Felton.

A memorandum was fished out of the waste basket in the State Library, on which names and amounts were given. It had been torn up by some careless boodler, but was pasted together again by the person who found it. This evidence was quickly followed to its conclusion, and the whole thing turned over to Attorney-General Hart. That official, when asked to tell the story, said: "The amount of money to be used for purchasing the votes was $21,600. This money was drawn from a bank in Fresno yesterday, but the name of the bank I will not give you. The amount to be paid each member was $2,000. That is all I shall say."

The Rev. B. Fay Mills finished his labors at Westfield, last evening, and left at once for a day home before beginning services at Bloomfield to-morrow. Mr. Greenwood took the night express to Boston.

Senator Winton has proved a valuable legislator this year. He knows how to push his bills through, and has had a number of them. On the Committee on Reapportionment he has done very efficient work. Though not a frequent speaker Senator Winton can talk very effectively when he so desires.

Mayor Gilbert and the Common Council are this afternoon following the suggestion of THE PRESS and making a personal inspection of the model trolley road in Newark that this paper is advocating for Plainfield. It is safe to predict that the Council will be unanimously in favor of it—that is unanimously excepting Ackerman of course.

Captain J. Frank Hubbard, of West Seventh street, has bought of A. Venino the latter's handsome residence at the corner of Madison avenue and Sixth street. Captain Hubbard now owns the entire block on Madison avenue from Seventh to Sixth street. His daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Newton VanSickle, will make their home in the new purchase.

At the Brooklyn Academy of Music, last evening, Dr. John Osborne Polak, of this city, was awarded the Ludlow memorial gold medal, presented by H. W. Maxwell, of the Board of Regents, for the best history of a surgical case treated there. The occasion was the graduation of the class of '91 of young doctors from the Long Island College Hospital.

The sister of W. V. Steele—who is the Prosecutor of Somerset county but who has his office in this city—is the author of the bill that passed the Assembly at Trenton, Monday night, making women eligible to appointment as Commissioners of Deeds. Assemblyman Nash made an eloquent plea for the measure, and 200 women listened approvingly. He said that in order to have great men there must be great mothers, and this could be best attained by giving women all the advantages possible.

The Trenton True American thus speaks of Union county's popular Senator: "Senator Marsh is the same useful and indefatigable worker in the Senate that he was in the House. He is never idle. He is continually looking out for the interest of his county. In the House Mr. Marsh was talking a good part of the time, but in the Senate he is seldom heard. He has gained favor in the upper House, however, by his action. Always in his seat and ever ready, there is no more valuable Democrat in the Legislature than Senator Marsh."

The Ball Can't Get Blocked in the Crowd.

The interest in the ball game to be played in The Crescent, to-morrow evening, between teams of the Crescent League and Plainfield Bicycle Club, is growing intense. Both clubs will put strong amateur nines on the floor, and the game will be exciting and hard fought. While the ball used is not of regulation size or weight and would not hurt a child, the committee in charge have contracted for three hundred feet of netting to be stretched along the side of the building and behind the catcher in order that the game may not be delayed owning to the ball being "blocked" by the crowd. Go early and secure good seats.

More Borough School Room Wanted.

James McGee was again re-elected, last night, a member of the Board of Trustees of North Plainfield School District.

The amount voted for school purposes was $3,500, $500 less than last year. The decrease is partly due to the fact that a balance was left over from last year, but mainly because a larger sum than usual has been raised of late through the indefatigable efforts of Collector H. Newton Spencer, who has kept after all delinquents with a sharp stick.

It was again reported that the present public school accommodations were far inadequate.

I was troubled with catarrh for seven years previous to commencing the use of Ely's Cream Balm. It has done for me what other so-called cures have failed to do—cured me. The effect of the balm seemed magical. Clarence L. Huff, Biddeford, Me.

FORGER AND FUGITIVE.

His Wealthy Parents Will Pay His Worthless Checks, and He Will Escape Arrest.

J. M. Ross, a blonde young man of charming manner and suavest of tongues, has fled from Plainfield leaving a very bad record behind.

He came from Brooklyn, some time ago, and acted as nurse for A. D. Mellick, Jr, the historian, at 175 Broadway.

Last week, it is reported, he and the cook, an Irish girl, were detected in unseemly behavior, and both were promptly sent away.

Since then various checks have been presented at the First National Bank, for payment, purporting to have been drawn by Mrs. A. A. Schuyler, a sister, who lives with Mr. Mellick, in favor of Ross.

Acting Cashier Runyon promptly pronounced the signatures of Mrs. Schuyler as forgeries, and such they proved to be. Ross had had the checks cashed by business men in town. They were all for small sums. His parents, wealthy people in Brooklyn, will, it is said, make good all losses.

Ross can not be found.

SHOT OFF HIS HEAD.

Horrible Suicide of a Farmer at Chimney Rock.

The story comes from Bound Boook that farmer Schneider, of Chimney Rock, committed suicide Sunday night in a shocking manner.

He had had a dispute with his wife, and had threatened to kill himself. She said he did n't dare. He loaded an old musket full of leaden slugs, went to the barn, set the muzzle against his throat, and pressed the trigger with a stick.

A deafening report resulted. The gun exploded, and tore his head from his body.

He was otherwise terribly mutilated.

The family buried the corpse without ceremony.

Shot by a Telegraph Messenger.

Mike Motley, a young lad living at 167 Manning avenue, was shot in the ankle, last evening, by Joe Hughes, a messenger boy employed by the Western Union Telegraph Company in this city. Drs. Hedges and Carman dressed the wound, and pronounced the victim in no danger Hughes was carelessly handling a revolver at the time of the accident, when it suddenly exploded to his surprise and Motley's discomfort.

No Half-Holiday for Plainfield Banks.

The banks of this city have determined not to observe the Saturday half-holiday law by closing their doors at 12 o'clock on that day. It is decided that such a closing would have a bad effect on business.

The National banks at Elizabeth and Somerville will also remain open until the usual hour on Saturday.

BY THE WAY.

—"Go South"—stop at Peck's.

—New fashionable dress goods at Edsall's.

—Peck minds his P's—promise and performance.

—John McIntyre, owner of the Chotola building and many other valuable pieces of property in this city, celebrated St. Patrick's Day by hoisting a bright green windmill to the roof of one of his apartment houses on North avenue.

—From present indications, it is evident that the bazar and supper under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the Trinity Reformed church will be a grand success. The ladies have met with liberal donations, and a large number of tickets have been sold. They only need the patronage of their friends to-morrow and Friday to make it a complete success. Go take tea with them, and thus help them in their worthy object. Charnes are very reasonable, and the table is first-class.

AFTER trying many remedies for catarrh during past twelve years, I tried Ely's Cream Balm with complete success. It is over a year since I stopped using it and have had no return of catarrh. I recommend it to all my friends.—Milton T. Palm, Reading, Pa.

A GREAT SUCCESS.

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum Give One of the Most Creditable Amateur Theatrical Performances Ever Seen in This City.

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum produced Boucicault's "Colleen Bawn" at Music Hall, last evening, and every seat in the house was occupied. The object of the entertainment was to increase the building fund of the Association, and the members are gratified at the result. After the overture the fife and drum corps of St. Mary's Temperance Cadets came before the curtain, and the audience was both surprised and delighted at the manner in which they acquitted themselves.

When the applause that greeted the youthful performers had subsided, the curtain rose on the first act of the "Colleen Bawn," and from that moment until the curtain fell on the third act, nothing occurred to mar the excellence of the performance. The audience was an appreciative one, and manifested its approval and delight by continued rounds of applause.

Miss May Flanigan, as Elly O'Connor, acted her part in a manner that charmed her many friends, and her beautiful singing elicited well-merited applause. Miss Julia Field in her perfect impersonation of the dashing Anne Chute, held the audience spellbound. Mrs. Ronan made an excellent Mrs. Cregan, and preserved the dignity of the character throughout, while Sheelah kept the audience in continual good humor.

Mr. Tobin as Myles was inimitable, and he must feel proud of the commendations showered upon him. Mr. Winn interpreted the character of Hardress in professional style, while Mr. Ward in his impersonation of Kyrle could not be excelled. A great part of the credit of the performance is due to the efforts of this gentleman, as he gave to the cast the benefit of his many years' experience in theatrical affairs. Mr. Whelan acted the part of Father Tom so admirably that his friends would not be surprised to hear that he had entered a seminary. Mr. Mack made a fair Danny Mann, and Mr. Lynch as Corrigan put into his part all the qualities that make the detested bailiff so repulsive to the Irish tenant.

Miss Lizzie Burns and Messrs O'Rourke, Traynor, Higgins and Lynch proved to the audience that heavier parts than those assigned could have been safely entrusted to them. In a word, the play was a success, and THE PRESS congratulates the Lyceum and the management and hopes to see them soon again.

The Water Supply Company Ahead So Far.

President Frank Bergen, of the Plainfield Water Supply company, considered the writ of certiorari granted by the Supreme Court and published exclusively in THE PRESS of yesterday, sufficient authority for him to order Contractor Doud to begin digging ditches again in North avenue in spite of the city and its ordinance.

The writ acts as a stay so far as the city is concerned. The Court says it would like to look into that ordinance and the authority for its passage before deciding whether it shall stand. So until such decision the ordinance is hung up, so to speak.

Counselor Bergen and City Attorney Marsh are in Trenton to-day arguing the matter. They did not reach there yesterday as they intended. Meanwhile the Water Supply Company's men are at work in spite of Street Commissioner Meeker. Chief of Police Grant and City Judge Codlington.

Farewell to Westfield.

Elaborate preparations are being made in Bloomfield for the Mills revival meetings, which are to begin Thursday. A committee of ladies from the several churches are making a house to house canvass all through the town inviting people to attend the meetings.

The meetings will open Thursday morning with a business men's prayer meeting in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, beginning at 7:45 and continuing until 8:25. There will be preaching in the First Presbyterian church every afternoon and evening, and arrangements have been made for overflow meetings. Mr. Greenwood, assisted by a large choir, will conduct the singing.

Mr. Mills concluded his labors at Westfield last evening. The meetings in that place have been prodnctive of very gratifying results.

Another Week of Revival Meetings.

The union revival meetings in Westfield will be continued for another week, being conducted from now on by the Rev. Ford C. Ottman, a noted evangelist, of Newark. Tuesday was Mr. Mills's last in Westfield. The interest taken in the meetings has been wonderful, the churches being crowded to the doors at every service. Tuesday the Westfield public school was closed, and most of stores suspended business during the hours of service. Quite a number of Plainfield people have been in attendance at these services, and will be glad to know that they are to be kept up for another week. Mr. Ottman has met with great success in this line of work, and the Westfield people are hoping that his efforts among them will be wonderfully blessed.

DISSOLVING EVERY DOUBT.

Overwhelming Testimony That an Electric Street Railway is What Plainfield Wants for its Growth, Convenience and Prosperity—Everybody Will Agree With the Correspondent From Scranton, Below.

Great pains have been taken to secure for the perusal of the readers of THE PRESS, the testimony of the experienced men of all cities regarding the reliability, safety and serviceability of electric street railways. That such effort has been highly appreciated, is proved every day by the flattering letters and personal expressions of commendation THE PRESS receives.

So far the people have read in these columns the truth from headquarters—not sensational newspaper fakes—regarding electric street railway service in Springfield, Syracuse, Atlantic City, Albany, Worcester and Nashville. To-day are published letters from Scranton, Binghampton, Nashville, Lowell and Rochester.

PEOPLES STREET RAILWAY COMPANY.)
SCRANTON, Pa., March 16, 1891.)

DEAR SIR:—In reply to your favor of 14th inst, our suburban line was opened in December 1886, with the Van Depole motors, which were changed for Thomson-Houston motors. The suburban line started in with Electricity, and was built to open a section of Green Ridge for building purposes. It succeeded in this admirably, and to-day the finest residences in the city are to be found along the line of our roads. There have been no lives lost in connection with our wires and no one injured. I have received the full 500 volts several times, and am healthier to-day than I ever was. There is no sparking on the wires either day or night and as for the noise the cars make, it is a point easily remedied by the railway companies.

I use a raw-hide pinion working in a cast gear, and I get just as long life out of my machinery and do away entirely with the noise. Wherever our lines have been extended, real estate has gone up, there has not a single case come to my notice of where property has depreciated in value. On our Peoples' Lines, we formerly ran horse cars, having adopted the Edison (Sprague) system in Fall of 1888, and as to the efficiency of the electric cars I venture to say there is not a man in town who would ride in a horse car if the fare was only one cent. We operate 27 miles of road with a daily complement of 30 cars (Thomson-Houston & Edison) and as our Mayor expressed it the other day, "There is as much difference between electric cars and horse cars, as there is between horse cars and ox teams."

Those who kick hardest when the Peoples' Line changed from horses to electricity are now our best friends. Being a native of Somerville, N. J., I know Plainfield pretty thoroughly, and in the past two years have often thought that your city offered fines advantages for electric traction than any other city I know.

If matters should progress so far (and I trust they will), that the city fathers should desire to inspect an electric road, I trust they will come to Scranton, where I will do my best to give them a chance for a thorough investigation.

I am sure that if an electric road is built in Plainfield, everyone will wonder how they got along before without it.

As to our machinery, we have both the leading systems, Thomson-Houston & Edison, and we are fully up to the times and on some important points ahead of most roads that were equipped since we were.

Yours very respectfully,
J. H. VANDERVEER,
General Manager.

THOMSON-HOUSTON ELECTRIC CO.,
BOSTON, Mass., March 14, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of the 13th inst. is at hand, in reply to which I will briefly state the Newport case as follows:

About two or three years ago certain citizens of Newport secured a franchise for a street railroad upon Broadway and other streets for the full length, north and south, of the town. Also from one of the steamboat landings, by the post office and through what is called Bath Road (running east and west) to the Newport bathing beach. After a few delays the road was built and put into operation the latter part of the summer of 1889. The road has proved a success and of great convenience to the regular citizens of Newport, and is largely patronized by them. The part which is objected to, and objected to only by the wealthy summer residents, is the line running across to the bathing beach. This crosses Bellevue avenue and interferes, they claim, with their driving. In consequence of this they have been endeavoring from the start to make the road unpopular for the purpose of getting the tracks removed from Bath Road. By far the larger part of the people using this line are the regular residents of Newport, and so far as I know, they do not share the objections of the wealthy residents. What effect the road has had upon the smaller summer residences near the bathing beach, I cannot say, but that the Newport property in general has improved cannot be questioned, I think.

Yours very truly,
WINTHROP COFFIN,
for T. H. E. Co.

BINGHAMPTON STREET RAILWAY CO.,
BINGHAMPTON, N. Y. March 16, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—In answer to your favor of the 14th inst., would state that the above street railroad company adopted electricity as a motive power in July 23, 1889, and its efficiency and profitableness are established beyond question. The system in use here is what was known as the Sprague, but now called the Edison system, and we consider it equal, if not superior, to any in existence. We certainly do not consider the wires hazardous to the life of either human beings or animals, in fact practical common sense teaches that the voltage is not sufficient to kill or seriously injure if applied. We have never harmed any, nor heard of anybody being alarmed at any display of electric sparks at night, and in fact a more absurd idea than that I have never heard offered as an objection to the introduction of electric street railway service.

In reply to your inquiry regarding noise, would state that if the cars and machinery are properly geared and cared for, there is no necessity for any noise whatever. We appreciate your position in endeavoring to introduce electric cars to your people as we have encountered all the absurd objections and foolish ideas that you quote, and in fact many more that you do not mention. We can assure your people that if you are successful in gaining your point and inaugurate a good electric street car service, that you will be heartily endorsed. In that an efficient electric car service can do more to increase the life and activity of a city and exchange the value of real estate along the line, than any enterprise I know of, and if it extends to the suburbs, suburban property will be increased in value. I would refer your "croakers" to a thousand prominent citizens and city officials of Binghampton for endorsement of the above statements. Wishing you success, we are.

B. S. Ry Co.,
J. F. E. CLARK, Supt.

"UNITED ELECTRIC RAILWAY,"
NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 14, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 12th inst., received. The objections stated in your letter are simply ridiculous. Our road runs on the best residential streets in the city, and nearly everybody is anxious to have the road run in front of their houses. Not long ago we made a contract with a Land Company owning a suburban tract, to extend one of our lines through the property in order to enhance its value, and the property in that vicinity has increased 50 per cent. in value, and there is more dealing in real estate in that section now than any other part of the city.

We were compelled to reduce a heavy grade at one point and the property owners along the street cheerfully signed a release of all claims for damage in consideration of the electric line running in front of their houses.

Yours truly,
E. G. CONNETTE,
Superintendent.

LOWELL & DRACUT STREET RAILWAY CO.,
LOWELL, Mass., March 16, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 14th inst. received and noted. Since August 1, 1889, this company has operated successfully 5 miles of electric railway, with Bently-Knight motors, and overhead single trolley construction. During that period the cars on that route have run more miles and more trips, and carried more passengers in all kinds of weather than have our horse cars. Previous to the adoption of electricity on the above route, it was only 2 miles of track operated by horses. In 1889 we extended the line 3 miles to a suburban town and lake. The experiment has ceased to be so and is an unqualified success; so much so that we have obtained the right to equip all our lines including those of the Lowell Horse R.R. Co., 23 miles in all, electrically, overhead construction. The authorities of no city in this country took the same pains to learn the subject of electricity particularly in its application to street railway propulsion, as did the Board of Aldermen of the city of Lowell. They held hearings covering a period of ten week and investigated all systems, and even went to Cincinnati to inspect a double trolley line there. They then granted the right. As you are aware this is a city of 80,000 people, and the only trouble that we find is we are unable to start our additional electrical equipment fast enough for the people. We have never had a single accident attributed to electricity, nor have we heard a single complaint from the people along the line, on the contrary they would not allow this company to go back to horse cars. We had an experience in the latter respect about six weeks since. At the time we were changing from an old power station to a new one, and while making the change placed horse cars on the electric line. To say that the patrons complained would be to put it mildly and in a Christianlike manner. Real estate has increased in taxable value along the route, and houses are building. When the line was completed one man laid out a new street, built a new iron bridge, and laid out a new tract of land, and to-day there are some forty houses and a $10,000 school erected on the new land.

The cost of operating an electric car is about the same as the cost of operating a horse car. As the electric car can make at least 25 per cent. more miles, the cost of operating per car mile is reduced in proportion.

Most respectfully,
P. P. SULLIVAN, Sec'y.

ROCHESTER STREET RAILWAY CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
March 16, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of the 14th, addressed to the Rochester Electric Railway Company, has come to hand. We have now in operation two companies here—one the Rochester Electric Railway Company, which has been in operation two years; the other the Rochester Railway Company, which has been in operation since last August. The first-named company is equipped with the Thomson-Houston system, and the last with the Short system, both using the single overhead trolley wire. If either company were today to suggest the giving up of electrical operation, and the going back to horse cars, the Directors would be mobbed. Every one is pleased with the change. No one seems to be annoyed with noise, and if, once in awhile, there is a flash under the wheel, no one is frightened. The people who object to the use of electricity as a motive power for the operation of street cars, are solely the people who are always objecting to every form of progress. Our own notion is that within five years horse cars will be a thing of the past all over the country. We have never injured anyone on either road by electricity. We have, of course, smashed a few wagons, and were so unfortunate as to kill one person by running over him. We did, however, in operating with horses, break a good many wagons, and, once in awhile, kill a person.

It is difficult to say how much is saved in the expenses of operation. We feel sure that something is saved. It is too soon, however, to determine what the average expense for the maintenance of electrical appliances will be.

If we can give you any other information which will be useful to you, we shall take great pleasure in doing so.

Very truly yours,
M. H. BRIGGS.

Mr. Krehbiel's Lecture.

To-morrow evening at The Casino, H. E. Krehbiel, of the New York Tribune, is to lecture on Wagner's musical comedy, "Die Meister-singer von Nurnberg." He will be assisted by Mr. Venino, on the piano, who will contribute the musical illustrations of Mr. Krehbiel's talk. Thus is to be accorded the people of this city an opportunity to be instructed, interested and entertained in a line that has never before been within the reach of the smaller communities.

Detractors of Wagner sometimes sneeringly ask the question: "Why, if he is so great a composer, does he need so many commentators to explain him?" The answer is that all the great men of genius who were ahead of their generation gathered around them, sooner or later, a host of disciples, in whom familiarity with their thoughts or words had bred such enthusiasm that they were eager to impart to others. From one point of view Wagner stands less in need of elucidation than any other dramatic composer, for the sensuous beauty of his music is so great, and its emotional force so overwhelming, that even unmusical persons are often swayed by it. But the greatness of Wagner lies in this, that the more microscopically you study his works, the more perfectly they appear. Now it is not every one who has the time or skill to apply the microscope to operatic scores, and it is here that the function of the commentator comes in.

Tickets may be obtained at the door.

THEY ARE FIGHTING THE "RELICS".

Mr. Worrell Shows That It is Not the Electric Street Railway Motor of To-day That the People Find Fault With.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The remarks and criticisms my letters recently published in THE PRESS, on the trolley system, have called forth, may place me in a wrong light before our citizens. I am in no way interested in the proposed electric railway for Plainfield and am not fighting the battle for any concern who may be endeavoring to secure a franchise. The attacks made upon the electric railway are made in good faith, but human nature everywhere seems to have the peculiar faculty of picking up the bad quicker than the good. It is my business, in this particular instance, to hunt for the good, and my only interest in the matter is to see Plainfield have the best, if she is to have an electric railway at all. I do not want to see our streets disfigured by tracks that will almost break the wheels off of a light buggy, when, if tracks are to be laid, they can be laid so as to be scarcely noticeable when driving over them.

I stated in my first letter that I knew the overhead system was objectionable, but maintained that it was the best thing yet devised, and I shall maintain my position until something proves itself better. I am hunting for this something every day, and I have failed to find it yet, although I have examined and experimented with everything the opponents of the trolley system have cited as being good and being better. I am interested with people who have spent some twenty million dollars in the last fourteen or fifteen months in buying horse railways and changing to the trolley line equipment. I know that every endeavor possible has been been made to find something better, which as yet has proved unsuccessful. Why do these people spend money this way? Because there's money in it. The earnings of roads so changed increase from 25 to 200 per cent,

Now why don't some of the advocates of the storage battery try the same thing? They talk big, but they won't put on the shoe, because they know where it pinches. We are not afraid to wear the trolley line shoe, even though the street we have to travel is often paved with cobble stones. I don't put much confidence in a man that can't take his own medicine. I would like to see some of these people who claim such things for the storage-battery, come out and show their nerve. If they want the storage-battery let's see them raise their money in such an enterprise, and I will believe they are in earnest. Some have kept themselves hidden and written anonymous letters. I am interested in an electric railway in a city of half a million people and had the pleasure of securing a copy of a lawyer's bill against a large express company for writing anonymous letters. The railway ran in front of their property and they used this means to fight the enterprise. The bill was published as it should have been.

It is only a few years since the electric motor was applied to street cars. When it was first suggested street railway men laughed at the idea of an electric motor driving a street car, and it was only after long persuasion that they consented to have the experiment tried, and then not with strong substantial motors that the engineer knew were necessary for the satisfactory operation of the cars, but with frail light machinery that could be attached to their old form of running-gears. The experiment proved that electricity would drive street cars and was cheaper than horses, but even then street railway men would not invest the necessary money to put on proper equipments, and many miserably poor and unsightly installations were put in. Since the time the motor has gradually been improved and made stronger, while the car trucks have been also improved and made self-contained, so that they will run alone without the car body. This has made the cars so much heavier that the old form of rail would not answer, and it has had to be taken up and replaced with a heavier rail at a cost of from $15,000 to $20,000 per mile of double track and the trolley line has formed a good thing to cut down expenses on and has been put up in a cheap way.

The new high-speed motors soon became very noisy, and the gears were inclosed in iron boxes filled with oil. This, however, did not prove satisfactory and now the motors are being made to run at a slow speed with only one pair of gear-wheels, and are practically noiseless, and I expect that within three months there will be a motor on the market having no gears at all.

It is not the electric motor of to-day that people find fault with, but the old equipments that are relics of the present development, that are still earning their $30 a day. There is plenty of bad in the electric railway for people to get hold of and run it down with. But I think that while they are criticizing the old, they should take trouble to examine the new, and when they have horrible nightmares about the unsightliness of the overhead trolley line, they should walk out and gaze upon the way our streets look at present with electric light wires of various colors zigzaging back and forth from side to side of the street, and be reasonable and see which looks the worst.

The Wrecked War Vessels.

A FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH.

Light of the morning,
Darling of dawning,
Blythe little, lithe little daughter of mine!
While with thee ranging Sure I'm exchanging
Many of my years for six years like thine.
Wings cannot vie with thee,
Lightly I fly with thee,
Gay as the thistledown over the lea:
Life is all magic,
Comic or tragic,
Played as thou playest it daily with me.
Floating and ringing,
Thy merry singing
Comes when the light comes, like that of the birds.
List to the play of it!
This is the way of it:
All's in the music and naught in the words—
Glad or grief-laden,
Schubert or Haydn,
Ballad of Erin or merry Scotch lay,
Like an evangel
Some baby angel
Brought from sky nursery stealing away.

Surely I know it,
Artist, nor poet,
Guesses my treasurer of jubilant hours.
Sorrows, what are they?
Nearer or far, they
Vanish in sunshine, like dew from the flowers:
Years, I am glad of them!
Would that I had of them
More and yet more, while thus mingled with thine.
Age, I make light of it!
Fear not the sight of it!
Time's but our playmate, whose toys are divine.

—T. W. Higginson.

SITTING DOWN ON HIM.

The Unfortunate Man Who Seeks to Do the World a Favor.

HERE is one sort of man whom the world never gives half a show, and he is, at the same time, the very man who seeks, in the goodness of his heart, to do the world a favor. I have frequently met him, and though I may have offered him no direct encouragement, I have always been his friend and well-wisher. At midnight one night as a train rolled along toward Buffalo, with at least eighteen out of twenty people in my sleeping-car sound asleep, the man who wanted to do us a favor suddenly began to play on a harmonican from an upper berth. At about the second screech everybody was awake and such expressions as these were flung about that car with great recklessness:

"Where's that idiot?"

"Somebody kill him!"

"What on earth does this mean!"

"Say, porter, brain that lunatic!"

The music was stopped and the man's feelings were deeply wounded. When the row quieted down so that his voice could be heard, he said:

"I am awfully sorry about it, but I assure you that I only had the good of others at heart. I couldn't get to sleep, and thinking the rest of you might be rolling about, and wondering when we were going to run off in the woods or drop through a bridge I thought I'd soothe you to slumber. This is the thanks I get for it! Not another blamed soothe if you lie awake all night!"

I could realize his position and clearly discovered his motive, and it made me real sorry when a Chicago gravel roofer in the berth opposite shook his fist across the aisle and said he could, would and should lick any man on earth who broke in on him when he was dreaming of signing a contract to gravel roof all the world's fair buildings.

A lot of us were seated on the stone parapet at the brink of Niagara falls, at the extreme end of Prospect park. There had been such expressions as: "Mad rush of waters," "racing to death," "swift rush to destruction," and "the mighty power of nature," and everybody had relapsed to silence and was probably wondering how many miles an hour he could paddle a sand barge against such a current, when the man who had our interest at heart arrived. He was a little out of breath, having started two minutes late, but he at once proceeded to say:

"Ladies and gentlemen: Some of you may think that this is canvas painted to represent water, the same as on the stage, but I honestly assure you it isn't. Others of you may think it is water squirted down here from the Buffalo waterworks, but that's another mistake. It comes right out of the river up there, and them rocks there is real and true rocks. Don't go away carrying with you a false idea of this great and stupendous work of nature. It's all wool and straight as a spotted cow."

"IT'S ALL WOOL AND STRAIGHT AS A SPOTTED COW."

His speech seemed to hurt most of the people. Instead of waiting to inquire into his motive, they got mad, and a fat man from Harrisburg beckoned him aside, shook his fist under his nose and gasped:

"Say, you infernal lunkhead, I can knock your eyebrows off in about four seconds!"

"You can? Is it possible! But what have I done? I ain't the feller what called you a liar."

"Durn your buttons, but what did you come here and break in on my meditations for?"

"For your own good. I didn't want you to go away thinking this was some illusion got up to beat people out of their money. That water there is just as real as the water in your well to home. I know it. I've scooped some of it up in a cup. Come right down here and I'll prove it."

I heard that fat man growling and blowing and telling what he would do, and I know that good-hearted man went away from us vowing that he would never put himself out for his fellow beings again. I followed after him to thank him and to let him know that I appreciated his sacrifice, but I could not overtake him.

You get a splendid view of the sea from the board walk at Manhattan beach, Coney island. Six of us sat on one of the benches there one day, and we were very quiet. You can do a great deal of thinking down by the sea if you are so inclined. You can begin at the hotel on the beach, with its charges of five dollars per day (no dogs allowed), and gradually work out past the clams in the sand—the surf—the white maned waves—the ships sailing up and down—going to Europe—sailing over the bones of dead men, etc., etc. We were busy with these thoughts when along came a Long Island farmer who had been delivering vegetables at the hotel kitchen. He wanted us to go home and tell a straight story, and so he saluted us in a pleasant way and remarked:

"Some folks git the different oceans all tangled up together and can't tell which from tother. This is the Atlantic ocean. Better write it down on a slip of paper, so you won't forgit it."

The six of us bowed.

"It's bin here ever since I can remember, and allus looked the same."

Six more bows.

"The water is salt. Lots of fellers won't believe it when fust told, but they find out by tasting."

Six more bows.

"The more'n a thousand miles to t'other shore, and there are hills at the bottom of the ocean over fifty feet high. It's a beautiful sight to see them waves rolling in. Any one of 'em would upset a washtub quicker'n wink. I used to think the foam on top was cotton-batting or wool, but it ain't. It comes from a sort of saleratus on the bed of the ocean. A good many ships have gone down beneath the dark blue wave, and I allus use ocean water to scald my hogs in if I have time to cart it. It starts the bristles quicker."

Six cold, stony stares, but no bows.

"Needn't be afraid that the ocean will ever dry up," said the man, in a halting way, evidently nonplussed by our silence.

No one answered.

"There's a tide twice in twenty-four hours. The object of it is to carry dead

SIX COLD STARES, NO BOWS.

cats off the shore. Better write that down afore you forgit it."

No answer.

"Wall, all right. Some folks don't seem to want to learn anything. If they don't they needn't. I've done my duty, and if folks don't appreciate it they can go to Halifax!"

I met just another such man at Luray, Va. He was from Rhode Island. I had just come out of the caves when he beckoned me aside and whispered:

"Don't carry away any erroneous impression of this great natural wonder."

"How do you mean?"

"Why, you probably imagine that it was dug out by a syndicate. It wasn't. It was formed by nature."

"Is that possible!"

"Yes, and them bats in there is real bats, and not made up out of cloth."

"Dear me!"

"And this mountain is the real solid thing, and not painted on cloth and hung up to deceive the people."

"How you talk!"

"I thought you might go away feeling that you had been imposed upon, and perhaps feel bad about it, and so I thought I'd tell you. Everything here is genuine, even to the darkness in the cave."—M. Quad, in Detroit Free Press.

The Man with the Toothache.

Have you ever noticed the antics of a man with an ulcerated or badly decayed tooth that transforms his whole existence into a horrible nightmare? He will resolve that at a certain hour he will have it jerked out, and is inclined to compliment himself upon his nerve. But when the time comes he finds it very convenient to fill an important engagement that can't possibly be broken. So he goes to the apothecary and buys a little vial of creosote or cocaine and doctors his tooth until it is better, and then all thoughts of the dentist fly out of his mind. Then he reaches the condition when he is inclined to look upon the dentist as a wholly unnecessary adjunct of society. But the ache comes back the next day and with it a new resolve to call upon the dentist without delay. Then out comes the creosote bottle and more tooth tinkering and he is again a free and independent citizen. All these devices, however, only postpone his fate. The inevitable is sure to come and it will be all the more painful for the delay. Better go at once to the dentist and have him pull out or mend the offending member and stop the shock that a sore tooth is sure to give to the system.—Chicago Post.

MISS PARLOA says one generous pint of liquid, or one pint of finely-chopped meat, packed solidly, weighs one pound, which it would be very convenient to remember.

ENTERPRISING WOMEN.

MRS. EMILIE A. OBERLE is engaged in the manufacture of tents and awnings.

MRS. JOHN REISNER, of Atchison County, Kan., made 4,020 pounds of butter last year, churning and working it all by the old-fashioned process.

ADA GRAY, of Cincinnati, is said to be "the only colored lady dentist" in this country. It is not stated whether she has a special pull with people of her own race.

ONE of the best financiers in St. Louis is Mrs. Lucy V. S. Ames, who, since her husband's death, has managed his estate with great skill and practical good sense. She is at the same time a prominent figure in the best society of the Mound City.

THERE are fifty-eight butcher shops in New York either owned or managed by women. These "lady" butchers, as they would be called on the other side, are for the most part widows or daughters of men who established the business.

A KANSAS man played a very sharp trick upon a neighbor lately. He stole a herd of 150 cattle, sold them, pocketed the money and then committed suicide. His victim sees no way of redress.

IN counting his small change the other day, a Michigan man found the most valuable five-cent piece extant. The jarring on the table caused the piece of money to split in two, and from the center rolled a gold dollar.

CHARLIE GRIFFITH, of Athens, Ga., has a curiosity in the shape of a pipe. The bowl of the pipe is fashioned out of a costly variety of briarwood, while the stem was taken from the leg of some lordly gobler of the days of long ago.

RESIDING on a farm near Dubuque, Ia., is a peculiarly afflicted boy, four years of age, the son of Ernest Bohn. He was born without eyes, and has no place in his head for them, the forehead being perfectly smooth. The child is possessed of all his other faculties, and enjoys good health.

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

FOR rapid pronunciation: An anonymous Ananias is an aldomaly and an anachronism.

THE French chouvinists rebel against the use of the English word "yacht," and in deference to their feelings, the word will probably be spelled "yaute."

PROF. MARSH has made an estimate, based on careful analysis, that the proportion of Anglo-Saxon words in the English Bible is ninety-seven per cent. of the whole.

A DISCUSSION upon the modern pronunciation of English leads to the observation that the letter R has ceased to be heard. There is now no difference between "law" and "lore."

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

A Perfect Success.

The Rev. A. Antoine of Refugio, Tex., writes: As far as I am able to judge, I think Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic is a perfect success, for any one who suffered from a most painful nervousness as I did. I feel now like myself again after taking the Tonic.

A Strong Proof.

ORILLIA, ONT., CANADA, JUNE, '88.

I was first attacked by epilepsy in November 1879; residing in New York I consulted the best physicians, but they could only arrest the disease, the honest ones told me then there was no cure for it—I was compelled to give up my occupation and return to Canada in 1878; since then I tried innumerable remedies and consulted some of the best physicians, but nothing benefited me until I began to use Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic in September '88, since then I had not a single attack.

ONE MORE TRAGEDY

Excitement in New Orleans Over Another Murder.

A NEWSPAPER MAN SHOT DOWN.

Killed by a Lawyer Who Was Prominent in the Hennessy Trial.

The Trouble Grew Out of Remarks Made About the Lynching of the Italians. Fears Expressed that the Friends of the Murdered Man May Seek Revenge—The Grand Jury at Work.

NEW ORLEANS, March 19.—At 11 o'clock last night Captain Arthur Dunn, a prominent politician and well known attorney of this city, became involved in a quarrel with Frank Waters, an ex-journalist and well known character about town, and a shooting scrape followed, terminating in the killing of Waters and the serious wounding of Dunn.

Captain Dunn was one of the attorneys employed by the State in the recent trial of the Italians charged with the assassination of Chief of Police Hennessy.

The trouble last night began in the early part of the evening. Waters had been drinking in a saloon, and during the course of his remarks stigmatized the killing of the Italians at the parish prison as an outrage on the community, and expressed himself as satisfied that all those who had participated in the killing would come to an untimely end.

They Pull Their Guns.

Dunn met him shortly afterwards and a dispute took place, during the progress of which Dunn referred to Waters as a murderer, he having killed Joseph Baker here in 1887. The dispute grew warmer and Dunn pulled his revolver and shot Waters in the cheek and in the mouth. The bullet ranged upward and penetrated the brain. Waters returned the fire of his antagonist and wounded Dunn twice in the left leg and again in the right side of his chest near the nipple. Waters died almost instantly. Dunn was taken to the hospital where he lies in a precarious condition.

Intense excitement prevails and fears are expressed that an effort may be made by friends of Waters to wreak summary vengeance on Dunn.

THE GRAND JURY AT WORK.

An Indictment Will be Found Against O'Malley, the Briber.

NEW ORLEANS, March 19.—An investigation has been begun by the grand jury into the killing of the Italians on Saturday last.

It is said that an indictment will be found against O'Malley. The citizens' committee, it is understood, will make a thorough investigation into the charge of jury bribing.

John Rocci, a prominent Italian merchant, says he is confident that the Mafia has an active existence in this city, as he has the confession of a man that he was a member of it. Mr. Rocci believes that in a few days, after the excitement has quieted down, the better classes of Italian residents will be disposed to approve of Saturday's proceedings, as they are the principal victims of Mafia influence and extortion.

PRINCE NAPOLEON'S FUNERAL.

The Remains Will be Interred in the Royal Crypt in Turin.

ROME, March 19.—Prince Napoleon is lying in state in the mortuary chapel improvised in the house in which he died. The body is clothed in a black frock coat, and on the breast of the dead Prince is placed the cross of the Legion of Honor and the Italian order of the Annunciada.

It has been officially ordered by King Humbert that the interment shall take place in the royal crypt in the Church of La Superga in Turin.

Copies of his will were given by Prince Napoleon to several trusted friends, so that tampering with it would be impossible. He also ordered that his memoirs should not be published during the lifetime of ex-Empress Eugenie.

The Pope has written to the Princess Clothilde, saying that he believed in the welfare of Jerome's soul, and condoling with her for her loss.

Mass was read in the Prince's chamber, and the Princess ordered that the body should not be embalmed.

Gladstone's Narrow Escape.

LONDON, March 19.—It has transpired that Mr. Gladstone, after his speech at Hastings, had a narrow escape from a serious accident. The coachman who took Mr. Gladstone to the railway station lost control of the horses. They were stopped with difficulty, and the coachman was fined for drunkenness, the charge having been preferred by the police.

FLEECING THE ORPHANS.

Eight Men Accumulated Fortunes by Alleged Illegal Profits.

PHILADELPHIA, March 19.—Recent revelations at Mercer, Pa., discloses the fact that the State of Pennsylvania has very probably been robbed of over $1,000,000 in the management of the Soldiers' Orphan Schools.

The alleged illegal profits of one of 10 big schools amounts to $270,000; and this school was one of those controlled by a syndicate headed by ex-State Senator George W. Wright, of Mercer.

The fortunes accumulated by eight men, it is alleged, through pinching the orphans and fleecing the State were roundly as follows:

George W. Wright, $200,000; John I. Gordon, $385,000; S. F. Thompson, $65,000; R. R. Wright, $65,000; James L. Paul, $60,000; Major Moore, Whitehall, $135,000; Prof. Sweet, Hartford, $85,000; Rev. A. F. Waters, Uniontown, $80,000. Total, $1,095,000.

A considerable part of this sum may be recovered as the persons here named have returned $350,000.

All of the gains appropriated by these men were acquired in direct violation of the law, without contract of any kind. The Commonwealth seems to have a clear case.

SPINNERS FROM SCOTLAND.

The Clark's Mills Strikers Have a New Cause for Complaint.

NEWARK, N. J., March 19.—The striking spinners of the Clark Thread Mills, in Kearny, claim that the Clarks have imported spinners from Scotland, and that yesterday six men, with their families, were taken to the mills at Kearny, under escort of John Gregory's deputies.

The strikers have sent a committee to New York to get evidence in the matter and if it is true the attention of the government authorities will be called to the matter.

Asa Hilton, Robert Woods and William Perry, who were bailed in Jersey City on a charge of inciting a riot, claim that the police clubbed them. John Brady, who was arrested yesterday morning is held at the Hudson County jail awaiting bail. John Leroesy, the engineer of Marshall's mills, who was arrested on Sunday night, also awaits bail.

Sheriff McPhilipps says the Riot Act has been read at Kearny. The strikers are still firm and are receiving plenty of financial aid. There is no probability, however, that the girls will strike.

THINK HE IS TASCOTT.

The Barber Convict Resembles the Murderer in Every Particular.

CHICAGO, March 19.—State's Attorney Longenecker is confident that the barber who is under arrest at Aberdeen, S. D., is really Tascott, the murderer of Millionaire Snell. A portrait of the arrested man has been identified as that of Tascott by a jeweler in this city name Clark.

The description of the barber tallies remarkably with that of Tascott, even to the fillings in the teeth and the peculiar scars on the body. The police say if he is not the man wanted the resemblance is a most remarkable one.

Legislators Suddenly Excited.

TRENTON, N. J., March 19.—There was much excitement in the House of the Assembly when it was discovered that an innocent looking bill had slipped through which legalizes prize fighting. The bill was introduced by Assemblyman Mullone, of Jersey City, and when Assemblyman Ketcham, of Newark, announced the character of the bill, many of the members wanted the vote reconsidered. It only applies to Jersey City and Newark.

The Clothing Cutters' Strike.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 19.—The situation in the clothing cutters' strike continues to excite much interest among labor organizations here. Another cutter has been arrested, making four in this city thus far, all charged with conspiracy, and it is said the grand jury has found indictments against several others. The last cutter arrested was National Organizer James A. Wright of Philadelphia. All are out on $2,000 bail.

Celebrated Their Diamond Wedding.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 19.—Mr. and Mrs. Lawton A. Sherman celebrated their 75th wedding anniversary yesterday. He is 96 and she is 93. They were married in 1816, in Exeter, this State. They have six children, ranging in years from 61 to 78, the eldest of whom, an unmarried daughter, lives with them. Three generations of descendants helped the old people celebrate the anniversary.

Gladstone's Narrow Escape.

LONDON, March 19.—It has transpired that Mr. Gladstone, after his speech at Hastings, had a narrow escape from a serious accident. The coachman who took Mr. Gladstone to the railway station lost control of the horses. They were stopped with difficulty, and the coachman was fined for drunkenness, the charge having been preferred by the police.

The Pennsylvania Gets Another Road.

WILMINGTON, Del., March 19.—The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has obtained possession of the Delaware, Maryland & Virginia Railroad, now leased by it, and running from Harrington, Del., to Franklin City, Va. The State holds two mortgages on the road aggregating $600,000, which the Pennsylvania will pay off.

THE MARINE HORROR

The Utopia Disaster Greater Than at First Reported.

NEARLY SIX HUNDRED PERISH.

The Scene that Followed the Collision of the Vessels Was Terrible.

Wild Appeals for Help and Shrieks of Terror—Human Beings Fighting for the Boats—One Woman Went Mad at the Loss of Her Children—Awful Struggles in the Water.

LONDON, March 31.—The official statement in regard to the disaster to the Utopia is as follows: Number of persons aboard leaving Naples, 880; number saved, 311; number missing, probably drowned, 569.

The officers and crew, with a few exceptions saved themselves, and this fact is severely commented on. They appear to have given little heed to the safety of the passengers.

The confusion and panic on board were awful; no effort was made to control the passengers, who were wild with terror. The crew of the Utopia were all shipped at Glasgow.

W. T. Colbron, a stock broker of New York, who was a saloon passenger, is among those saved. C. G. Davis, of Boston, another saloon passenger, is reported missing.

The officers and crew of the British warship Anson declare that the Utopia fouled the ram of the Anson and thus caused the catastrophe. The Anson's officers assert that no blame can attach to their ship.

Divers who have made an examination of the wreck of the Utopia report that there are hundreds of bodies in the steerage and between decks.

HEARTRENDING SCENES.

The Terrible Disaster Described by One of the Utopia's Passengers.

GIBRALTAR, March 19.—An eye witness gives the following account of the wrecking of the Utopia:

"The shrieks of the Utopia's passengers and crew could be plainly heard above the roaring of the gale. The sea was so heavy that the boats of the rescuers could not with safety approach the wreck, so they were compelled to lie to leeward, where they picked up the people as they were swept from the decks. As the Utopia's bows settled a terrible scene was witnessed.

Fighting for a Chance to Escape.

"I was surrounded by a mass of human beings fighting their way desperately and savagely regardless of sex or age towards the boats. Men, women and children tumbled and climbed over each other in their fight for a chance to escape from drowning. One poor woman who was rescued by the Anson blue jackets went raving mad when she was convinced that her children were drowned. There were similarly distressing incidents by the score, the most awful of all occurring when the Utopia with a final desperate lurch sank with her human freight clinging about her.

Sprang Into the Sea.

"Many who had sprang in the sea when they saw that the steamship could not float much longer were drawn into the whirlpool caused by the Utopia's disappearance. Some came to the surface again for a few minutes before sinking finally into their watery tomb. Others were able to cling to pieces of the floating wreckage, spars, oars, gratings, hatchways, boats, lifeboats, etc., and thus kept themselves above the water until rescued by the war ships' boats, but the weaker succumbed readily.

"Shrieking, praying women sank to rise no more, with their terrified offspring clasped to their breasts. Children clung to their parents so desperately as, in several cases, to cause the death of both, when both might have been saved had better judgment been used. Husbands and wives sank while grasping each other in frantic efforts to keep each other afloat, and a good swimmer went down with some horrified, fear-maddened person clinging to him with the tenacity of the desperation of death."

Terrific Powder Explosion.

ASHLAND, Pa., March 19.—While a gang of men were engaged in drilling a rock tunnel in the third lift at Centralia colliery a spark flew from a lamp which was fastened on the cap of one of the men and fell into a large can of powder standing near by. A terrific explosion followed. John Roberts, James McCann, Morgan Evans and Harry Williams were badly burned, the first three probably fatally. The mine is operated by L. A. Reilly & Co., and is considered the largest in the region.

Rector MacQueary Says He Expected It.

CANTON, O., March 19.—The Rev. Howard MacQueary, the Episcopal rector whose trial for heresy has just ended in a verdict of guilty, said that he had not yet received official notification of the finding of the court. He has all along anticipated such a verdict and was hot at all surprised at the result. At the same time he was gratified over the manner in which Rev. Messrs. Smyth and Gallagher held out for his acquittal.

Will Test the Law.

SARATOGA, N. Y., March 19.—As a large number of the defeated candidates at the recent election failed to file statements of their expenses with the town clerk, as provided in the new ballot law, the district-attorney will carry the matter to the grand jury at Ballston next month to test the constitutionality of the law.

The Skipper Skips With $1,200.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., March 19.—George Steele, fish dealer, has received a dispatch from the crew of the schooner H. A. Duncan, now lying at Boston, that the skipper, Charles H. Sheldon, has evidently absconded with about $1,200, the proceeds of the vessel's recent trip to Georges.

THE MILLER MURDER TRIAL.

The Counsel for Lingo Makes an Able Argument.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 19.—There was again a motley throng of curious people at the Lingo trial, and they wore an air of expectancy, knowing that the case would soon be given to the jury. The jurymen, too, seemed to be impressed with the fact that the case was soon to rest entirely with them.

No more forcible or dramatic argument was ever delivered in the courts of Camden County than that which ex-Judge John Wescott poured into the ears of the jury in his efforts to save Francis Lingo from the gallows.

In response to popular clamor and because Lingo was a colored man and had a bad reputation, he said, they had endeavored to make him a scapegoat for the two foul murders recently committed, in Camden County. "Thank God," he cried, "for the flood of light that has been poured upon this case. Over the helpless form of this negro I stand and propose to defend his rights as an American citizen. They haven't given him fair treatment. They haven't given him a show for his life. Two foul murders have been committed. Here is Chalkley Le Coney stalking abroad, coming into this courtroom every day, reeking with blood.

"It became necessary to find a victim to offer up to public clamor and they selected Francis Lingo as that victim. While it is not my province to say at this time who murdered Annie Miller. I will say that, as there is a God in heaven, I will endeavor to bring the murderers of this woman and the accessories to the gallows. But Francis Lingo is not one of them."

SURE HE WAS WRIGHT.

The Body of the Mysterious "Evans" Exhumed and Identified.

NEW YORK, March 19.—The body of "Fred Evans, of England," the mysterious Astor House suicide, has been finally and fully identified as Wright, the supposed murderer of Ruttinger.

The former acquaintances of Wright viewed the remains of the supposed "Fred Evans," which were exhumed at Hart's Island and brought to the city morgue. All identified the body as that of the man Wright, whom they had met and conversed with a short time ago. Not one of those who viewed the remains entertained the least doubt but that in "Evans" they had found the lost Wright.

CHILDREN POISONED.

They Drank Water from a Polluted Well at the School-House.

MADISON, N. J., March 19.—Within the past week a great number of deaths have occurred among children attending the public school here, and at present many are very low with malignant diseases.

An investigation of the cause of the fatal sickness revealed the fact that the children afflicted have been drinking water from a badly polluted well at the school-house. The school will be closed temporarily.

The Black Skin Turns White.

READING, Pa., March 19.—The exchanges of skin which Dr. John Ege, of this city, effected between black and white persons have now healed perfectly, and his first impression that the black skin grafted onto a white person turns white, while the white skin grafted onto a black person remains white has been confirmed. The white skin remains as white as ever, while the black skin has become as white as that which surrounds it.

Six Years for Bank-Wrecker Classen.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Gen. Peter A. Classen was sentenced to six years' imprisonment in the Erie County Penitentiary by Judge Benedict in the United States Circuit Court. Classen was convicted of wrecking the Sixth National Bank. The Judge committed him to the custody of the Marshal pending application for a writ of error to the United States Supreme Court.

The Dixon-McCarthy Fight.

TROY, N. Y., March 19.—The Dixon-McCarthy fight will probably be held at a point between Albany and Schenectady, unless the Governor is appealed to and prohibits it. This action has been taken on account of the police commissioners directing Superintendent Willard to prevent the fight at the Cribb Club on March 31 or any time before or after it.

Storrs Held for the Grand Jury.

NYACK, N. Y., March 19.—Joseph Storrs, who attempted to kill Mrs. Armstrong and her daughter, Eliza, on March 9, was brought into court for further examination. There were no new developments in the testimony and Storrs was held to await the action of the grand jury in May next, on a charge of assault with attempt to kill.

A Defaulter Captured.

CHICAGO, March 19.—Levi M. Eberhardt, a tax collector at Lock Haven, Pa., suddenly left that town a few months ago after having appropriated to his own use about $1,000 of the town's funds. He was finally located in this city and arrested. He agrees to go back to Pennsylvania without requisition papers.

Shot Himself in the Head.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 19.—Adolph L. Reichard committed suicide here at noon by shooting himself in the head. He had been suffering from melancholia. He resided in New York and was on a visit here. He was the nephew of Mr. Reichard, a wealthy brewer of this city.

To Begin a Fifty Days' Fast.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Surgeon-General Hamilton of the Marine Hospital service reports that la grippe has reappeared in Washington in a somewhat aggravated form. Some prominent people are among its victims.

Congressman Springer of Illinois is very ill at his home in the southeast section of the city. Mrs. Owen, wife of Congressman Owen, of Indiana, has been dangerously ill for some days at the Ebbitt House, so much so that ropes have been stretched across from Willard's to the Ebbitt House, so as to prevent the passage of vehicles along Newspaper row.

Secretary Blaine's illness is stated to be something of the same character, but he is better to-day.

READY FOR THE WARPATH.

Sioux Indians Carry Belts of Ammunition Under Their Clothing.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—A dispatch from Chicago says that Gov. A. C. Mallette, of South Dakota, who is in that city, denies the published stories of destitution in his State.

The Governor had a consultation with Dr. Eastman, the educated Sioux of Pine Ridge. The doctor told him that 25 per cent. of the Ogallalas and Brules were ready to go on the warpath, and that nearly all of them carry belts of ammunition beneath their shirts.

The statements so impressed the Governor that he telegraphed his chief of staff to investigate the matter.

The President Very Busy.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—It may happen after all that the President will not be able to go to California next month. While he has arranged everything to get off about April 10, still business may come up that will cause him to lay aside all his plans and remain in Washington. The reciprocity treaties are being rapidly arranged and it may require the President's presence here, but the greatest difficulty is the Behring Sea trouble, which seem now to be coming ahead, and if the arrangements are to be made for arbitration, Mr. Harrison will have to be here.

Foraker Will Contest Sherman's Seat.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—A special from Cincinnati says: There is now no doubt that ex-Governor Foraker will contest Sherman's seat in the Senate. Within the past few days several of the recognized lieutenants of Foraker have warmly championed the ideas of Senator-elect Palmer, of having the State convention decide upon the party's candidate. Foraker is eminently popular with the rank and file who go to conventions, and it is recognized that he would sweep things even against Sherman. Last night Foraker in an interview formally declared that he favored the convention idea.

Great Demand for Small Notes.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The demand for notes of small denominations, such as $1, $2, $5 and $10 is very great at the Treasury Department, but so far the supply has been equal to the demand. By direction of Acting Secretary Nettleton the Bureau of Engraving and Printing will work day and night for some time to come in order that the supply of small notes may not fall short of the continued and constant demand.

Writing His Free Trade Speech.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Jerry Simpson is keeping quiet these days. He is busy writing his speech on free trade to be delivered in New York on April 2. It is stated that the Farmers' Alliance is organizing sub-alliances in the western part of New York and Ohio, and that the order will be active in the fall campaign in those States.
